PONIES & SCREEN

AT long last at least some sectors of the motion picture industry appear to have discovered that gambling by the masses is an invasion of the purse that supports the box office.

Exhibitors in New York state were this week just ending engaged, with diligence, handbills, letters and trailers, conspicuously led by the Buffalo office of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners, in a fight on a proposed amendment to the constitution to legalize pari-mutuel betting at race tracks—both horse and dog. The issue goes to the voters of New York Tuesday next.

Public gambling facilities and devices for the multitude are thrill-sales, vistas of "escape", that compete in time, attention, money with the emotional merchandise of the screen.

There are just incidentally other factors. Very few, if any, cashiers have been found tapping the till to buy movie tickets, but at the moment it is possible to count over rather an array of wrecked careers in our own show world resulting from chasing the rainbows over the horse tracks.

WHAT the occasional plunger does, or the time and money spent by the magnate class, does not matter. What counts alike to society in general and the box office in particular is the draining of slender margins of playmoney in the pockets of the multitude.

The motion picture, by the movement from Buffalo, and in many other manifestations, has found that it does not exist alone in a world of its own, but that it is an integrated part of the social and economic fabric. This fact has, to be sure, brought some abrupt surprises now and again, resulting in the necessity for such devices as a Production Code to attune the screen's wares to the American mores; or such awakening developments as a flood of legislation and litigation denoting a public concern about how it does business.

AND with gambling issues afresh before us, it may be remarked that the motion picture theatre in campaign opposition to the pari-mutuel or other systems of betting, legal or illegal, must be mindful of a certain inconsistency with its frequent resort to lottery lures at the box office.

There has been experience enough so that the most obtuse must know that when the attraction at a motion picture theatre becomes anything but a motion picture the screen industry is invaded.

It is to be observed that when the headline attraction is a personal appearance, a "name" band, a "Lucky Night", or whatever, the tendency is ever to present the cheapest and weakest picture on the schedule. This cuts the cost of that show, but it does not make for customers of the motion picture. And it is with motion pictures that the screen theatre must stand or fall.

Also, there are many competitions besides petty gambling that seriously compete with the box office: among them baseball, football, bridge and golf—and most of them getting a deal of promotional publicity on the screen.

"DEMOCRACY"—AGAIN

BEGINNING in December of 1938 and running into successive issues in January of this year, Motion Picture Herald asked "Films for Democracy" to "clearly, officially and publicly declare its position with respect to: 1—The political theories commonly known as Communism; 2—The political theories commonly known as Fascism; 3—The political theories characteristic of both Communism and Fascism, and commonly described as Totalitarianism, under which the state reserves to itself complete rights over the life, liberty and pursuits of the individual, denying to the individual those rights held under the traditional American system as a natural and inalienable heritage." This was signed by Martin Quigley, publisher and editor-in-chief.

October 21, under the heading of "No Answer", this page recorded that the merger born "Film Audiences for Democracy", taking in the late "Associated Film Audiences", had still made no answer, was still "evasive, confused, reticent in confusion".

NOW under date of October 25 comes response from Henry Pratt Fairchild, president of "Film Audiences for Democracy", addressing Mr. Quigley to bring attention to the organization's new letterhead which bears a footnote reading:

"TO ENCOURAGE films that uphold American democracy, civil liberties, and peace; that promote better understanding and improve neighborly relations between racial and religious groups; that present an accurate, undistorted as well as socially useful portrayal of the contemporary scene. TO OPPOSE all totalitarian trends, attacks on labor, and films contrary to the principles of the Bill of Rights."

"That being so," writes Mr. Fairchild, "there would seem to be no necessity for the editorial appearing over your signature in the October 21 issue of Motion Picture Herald unless you wish to impute to Film Audiences for Democracy motives which it neither holds nor desires, sentiments which it neither expresses nor harbors."

NINE months have elapsed since the Herald raised and reiterated the question. Since then the Hitler-Stalin pact has joined Nazism and Communism, and quite as closely as Nazism and Fascism were joined on "the axis" before.

The answer comes on a footnote to a letterhead. It still does not declare specifically against Communism, specifically against Fascism, and lays a soft blanket in the phrase "all totalitarian trends".

Meanwhile scanning the letterhead's boastful array of literary and militant names, one discovers the roster to include a number of profound sympathizers with the Communists' cause, and others variously known for their identification with movements that many consider invasive of the American system.

So far, so good. Mr. Fairchild's footnote denotes progress. There is considerable distance yet to go.

Meanwhile, having declared against "attacks on labor, and films contrary to the principles of the Bill of Rights", it might be considerate too to include "attacks on capital"—which seems yet to be and to have been from the beginning a part of the American Democracy.

Hollywood Wants Labor to Concede

REACTIONS to a war-bound world market continued this week to predominate in the motion picture business, East and West.

The squeeze of budget revision and the costs problem officially reached at last to the extreme of trying to get militant Labor to cooperate. Interestingly, indeed, this came in the form of written appeal from the Producers' labor negotiation committee to none other than William Bioff, as western representative of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes, for relinquishment of the ten percent increase for 12,000 workers, won under strike threat September 25, last. Mr. Bioff's return to Hollywood authority is both spectacular and acknowledged.

This represents the first official and direct approach to the problems posed by the one basic and vital element of production cost really subject to blanket negotiation, organized craftsmanship. All other costs in picture making are elements which are in theory under the control of individual executive decision.

Labor, thus for the day, has become the most important of the factors in answer to the continuing problem of "What is Hollywood going to do about the war?"

Labor, in general, however, indicated no answer and through its various voices some skepticism. Some leaders saw in the move a "smoke screen" for events to come, while others felt it was rather an endeavour at forestalling demands of other crafts. There were murmurings that the producers might well support their contentions by figures on losses in foreign gross. Some anticipated a general attempt to break down all talent and craft salaries.

Meanwhile Frank Carothers, secretary of the International Alliance's studio basic agreement committee, said the four internationals, still remaining in their basic agreement, were proceeding on an "as was" basis with plans for demands for wage increases to come up at a New Jersey conference early in December.

Labor wants to look at the books. (See page 15).

The regular quarterly meeting of the board of directors of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America was continued Wednesday for another week, until next Wednesday, the sixth week in succession, all of the discussions being principally on the subject of studio and home office economics and their relation to the international situation.

Agents Under a Code

AFTER YEARS of travail Hollywood talent as represented by the Screen Actors Guild came to victory over racketeering practises of the much cursed agents, and their allies, just before the dawn of last Tuesday when the directors of the Artists Managers Guild ratified a seventy-nine page code of do's and don'ts.

Agents are to be limited to ten percent commissions, and only one commission per deal. Inside deals between agents and producers and studios are forbidden.

A certain long view of what might happen, and an indication of fears in the minds of some, is presented in arrangements that, if lower maximum commissions are sought, it must be shown that salary levels are lower than '38-'39, "or that the relative standing of the film industry as a branch of the entertainment world has suffered materially so as to reduce the motion picture to a position of substantially less importance..."

It is a brave code, addressed at clearing abuses condemned long enough by both artists and employers. All that now remains is to enforce it. (See page 41).

Why Flanagan?

THE NEATEST eyebrow lifting surprise of the week came with the announcement from Vassar's president, Henry Noble McCracken, that by a special grant of funds from the Rockefeller Foundation Hallie Flanagan, former national director of the Federal Theatre, will supervise "theatre research based on the records, experiments and productions of the Federal Theatre."

It was to be recalled that Hallie Flanagan and her administration gave the Federal Theatre such amazing productions as "Injunction Granted," "Power," "Horse Eats Hat" and others just as good but certainly no more red, radical and rampant.

Some "theatre research" to discover who let this loose upon the nation has indeed been indicated——but not why Rockefeller money should employ Hallie Flanagan to study herself and her works.

30 Gallon Act

THE UPWARD and onward movement in the show business continues apace. The Star Theatre in Brooklyn advertises "the sensation of two continents," in the act of "The girl in the milk bath," and "actually using 30 gallons of milk each show." Years ago Anna Held had a milk bath for the press agent's purposes, but not on the stage. Time marches on.

How Free Speech?

OFFICIALS of the National Association of Broadcasters continue efforts to convince all hands that its new code provision regulating discussion of controversial public issues serves to preserve free speech. The efforts are meeting with considerable objection.

Among the big name objectors are John Shepard III of the Yankee Network and Elliott Roosevelt, who has announced that he is taking his Texas stations out of the association, as a slight indication of how he feels about the matter.

The plight of the broadcasters is not an easy one. Whether the proposed method is the best way out of a bad situation remains to be seen. That it will make no contribution to the American ideal of free speech goes without saying. It is quite the reverse of this in the sense that, stripped of circumlocutions, it simply says that the stations will determine who shall speak, when and about what.

There is little doubt that the broadcasters do not relish the task before them. The peculiar nature of radio breeds new and different problems, and its custodians apparently are seeking to treat with them the best they know how.

Notable among the new and different problems which appear in radio, and with which the broadcasters must contend, is the fact that the continuance in business of any particular station depends upon the attitude of the Federal Communications Commission, including its political proclivities, if any.

It is therefore a foregone conclusion that the broadcasters make no important policy decisions unless they know—or think they know—that any such decisions are agreeable to the commission. Bureaucrats usually have little interest in free speech beyond the first person, singular.

Fiddlesticks

MANY a radio listener's ear perked sharply Tuesday evening along about 7:20 when Jimmie Fidler, film-news gossip commentator, boomed into a microphone the "scoop" statement that Hollywood producers were contributing to a "fund" to buy up "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" from Columbia Pictures and to withdraw the production from circulation to save the industry from further Federal taxation and trust suit attacks that might result from wrathful Congressmen displeased with the manner in which Frank Capra pictured "a" Senator in his picture.

To Mr. Fidler's "scoop," which was scooped out over a coast-to-coast audience in the interests of the Procter and Gamble cleansers for house and hands, the Motion Picture Producers Association early next morning replied: "Fiddlesticks."

A few Washington Senators last week were reported to have become "insulted" by Mr. Capra's "Mr. Smith," when the Chicago Tribune Syndicate's Washington political correspondent wrote from the Capital that the Senators were insulted, several days after the Senators had applauded the picture at its local premiere.

Drunkard's Reward

THE OTHER DAY—October 18, for the record—Charlie Ruggles passed his eleventh anniversary on the Paramount lot in Hollywood, where he has played mainly roles of reporter drunks, beginning with "Gentlemen of the Press." He shows progress now, however, being promoted to sports editor in "Opened by Mistake," current production. In this he also gets drunk. The other day the publicity department stood him against the wall with Adolph Zukor and shot them both, recording that Mr. Zukor as chairman of the board of Paramount Pictures Corporation had presented Mr. Ruggles with a full ten-reel print of his "Gentlemen of the Press." Had Mr. Ruggles then chosen to go get personally and really drunk he would have been justified.

Openings

IN SOME TOWNS never before visited officially by motion picture "royalty," where the tom-toms of a blazing "world premiere," have never been heard, natives this week goggled at their movie favorites, at touching distance, as the new trend in exploitation continued.

On Thursday, Twentieth Century-Fox beat its "Drums Along the Mohawk" simultaneously in five cities of New York's historic Mohawk Valley—Albany, Utica, Amsterdam, Schenectady, and Gloversville.

On the same day, RKO took its "Allegheny Uprising" to Pittsburgh.

On Wednesday, Warners screened "Elizabeth and Essex" for the first time, publicly, in Philadelphia.

RKO will open "That's Right, You're Wrong," starring band leader Kay Kyser, in Kay's home town, Rocky Mount, North Carolina, on November 15th.

Paramount in January will open "Seventeen" at Indianapolis, home of Booth Tarkington, author of the story from which the picture was adapted. (See page 39).

Trade Relations

THE FIELD of distributor-exhibitor relations continued as diversely complex as ever with the flow of time seeming to wear off some of the sharper edges of controversy—and new controversy still available.

The Department of Justice, having agreed to an extension of time on the return of the interrogatories addressed to defendants in the anti-trust suit, to November 1, has now granted fifteen days more, and, importantly, has agreed to narrow some of the interrogatories. (See page 61.)

Back from White Sulphur Springs and the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America directors' meeting, Ed Kuykendall was of the opinion that most of the major distributors would be following the process of Warner Brothers and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in embodying phases of the late- and-debated trade practise code. (Page 16.)

And then, this week, too, that hardy perennial issue of protection-and-zoning flared up again conspicuously in a protest from the Allied organiaztion of California, Arizona and Nevada that agreements were being broken down in favor of the Wiltern, a Warner second run, in Los Angeles. There appeared a disposition on the part of the exhibitor organization to make the issue a broad cause. (See page 16.)

Paramount's Mystery

CLINTON J. SCOLLARD, more extensively known as "Pat," is the mystery man, now giving Paramount Pictures Corporation, its records and works, a going over—and for the second time. The first time it was at the behest of Joseph P. Kennedy, when Mr. Kennedy was experting and preparing that famous unpublished report on the corporation. The staff has been informed that Mr. Scollard is just an "efficiency man," but the fact is that he is doing some compiling for the purposes of defense against the Thurman Arnold anti-trust suit.

Mr. Scollard came by his nickname of "Pat" way back yonder when he was a small boy in South Braintree, Massachusetts. The story is that a group of mischievous lads stoned the windows of a cobbler's shop and that when the village constable charged the scene it was "Clint" that he nabbed. Ever since they've called him "the Patsy."

Walking Distance

HALCYON DAYS in a glamoured career were recalled to the observant few this week when Broadway program media appeared with a little blackfaced type advertisement, reading:

> PENTHOUSE—Originally built for a Hollywood star. Above 18th floor (75' x 100'). Overlooking Central Park, eight rooms with private terrace all around and above. All exposures. Living room, dining rooms, 3 large bedrooms, 4 baths. Complete kitchen. Moderate rental, 5 minutes' walk from Radio City.

It was there in more effulgent days that Gloria Swanson was domiciled, there that ill-fated "Queen Kelly" was planned. Came the day when Miss Swanson came no more to her aerie over mid-town. Last of picture name to occupy it was E. J. (Ted) O'Leary, in the process of passing from pictures to liquor, Somerset Importers, Ltd.

Edison Twice

A NEAT QUESTION of exploitation arises with MGM's doubled barrelled project of substantially simultaneous production of "Young Tom Edison" with Mickey Rooney and "Edison, the Man" with Spencer Tracy. Both are being put before the cameras, in the order of their age, by John W. Considine, Jr., the first two weeks in November. Whether they are to be sequentially released, or separated by a time interval, will be determined, along with other elements, after screen examination and previews. Admitting the genius of the late Thomas A. Edison, it is only by the devices of the Hollywood that has arisen from his invention that he is empowered to relive two parts of his career at once. He will be meeting himself at Culver City.

THIS WEEK IN PICTURES

DAVID O. SELZNICK arrives in New York by TWA plane, to confer with J. H. Whitney and other associates on the release of the slow moving "Gone with the Wind." The latest date is "about December 12."

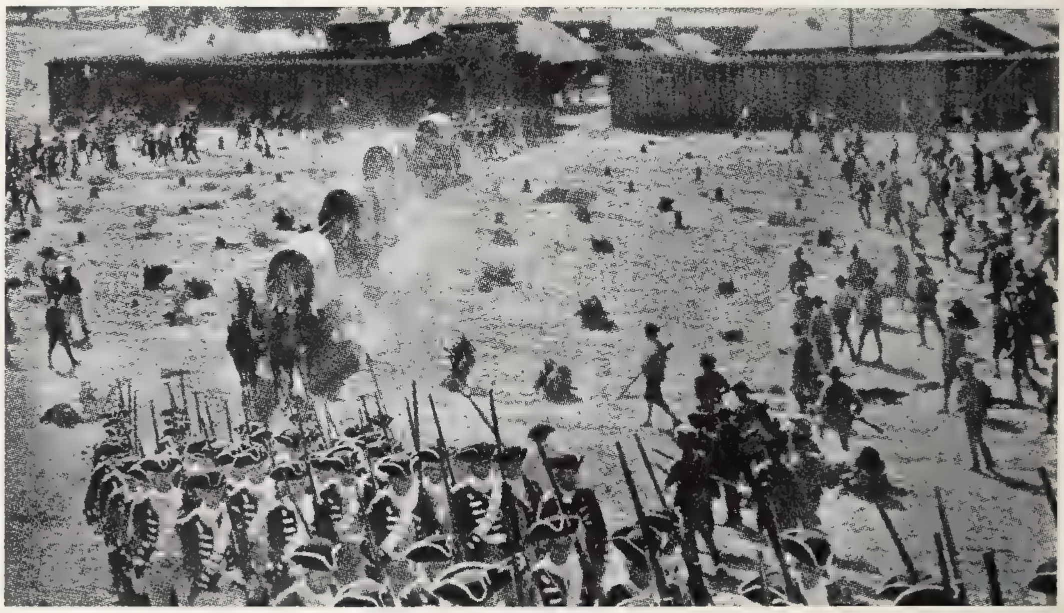
PERUVIAN exhibition is retarded by lack of protection for first-run houses, according to Jose Calero Paz, left, Spanish language distributor of Lima, in New York for business conference.



FRONTIER ADVENTURE in a period of American history new to the screen is dramatized in RKO's newest saddle and buckskin epic, "Allegheny Uprising," from which one of the climactic sequences, the surrender of the British at Fort Loudon, is illustrated above. Produced by P. J. Wolfson and directed by William Seiter on a budget set at $750,000, the film was given a pre-release premiere with the usual civic fanfare at Pittsburgh this week. See page 39.

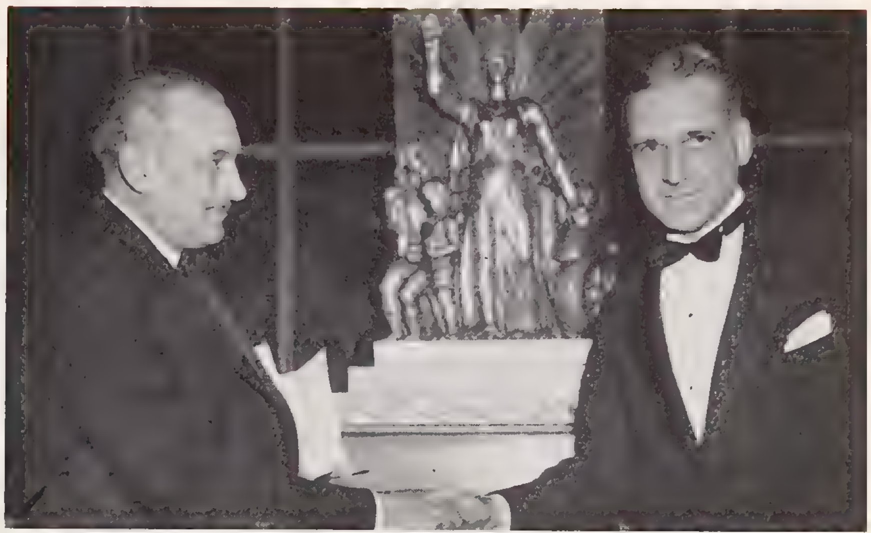
HOST AND GUESTS at left are Norton V. Ritchey, center, Monogram foreign manager who gave a luncheon for visitors from Latin America; Rafael Arzoz, distributor in Mexico for Monogram, and Armando A. Miranda, of Borinquen Film, San Juan, Puerto Rico.

ANNIVERSARY, below. W. French Githens, with the unveiling of a plaque and a special historical newsreel showing in the Embassy Theatre, New York, noted the tenth anniversary of the rebirth of the newsreel theatre idea. Mr. Githens, then with Fox Movietone, edited the first program for the Embassy on November 2, 1929.

NED DEPINET, below, RKO vice-president, visits the set of "That's Right, You're Wrong" in Hollywood.

MRS. ARRETUS FRANKLYN BURT, founder and honorary president of the Better Films Council of Greater St. Louis, Inc., looks back on ten years of effort, locally and nationally, as her organization fetes her.



THE ANNUAL AWARD of the Motion Picture Traffic Safety Committee is presented at the National Safety Congress in Atlantic City to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, represented by Art Schmidt of the New York Loew Theatre department, for the short subject "Drunk Driving," an October release in the "Crime Does Not Pay" series. The presentation is made by Leslie Sorenson, traffic engineer for the city of Chicago, an authority in the field. The short was produced by Jack Chertok.

BEFORE AND AFTER the big Roxy rug laying ceremony. Above, the 22 Gae Foster girls, taking time out from rehearsals, prepare to unroll what is called the largest oval rug ever to be woven in one piece, bought by the theatre management from the Mohawk Mills in Amsterdam, N. Y., to replace the one purchased in 1927 by the late S. L. Rothafel when the theatre was opened. Publicity men turned statisticians hurriedly estimated that 70,000,001 persons had crossed the old carpet, the one being the sole customer who went back to scrape up the gum he had dropped. Below, the girls, having completed the laying ceremony, try out the one inch pile.

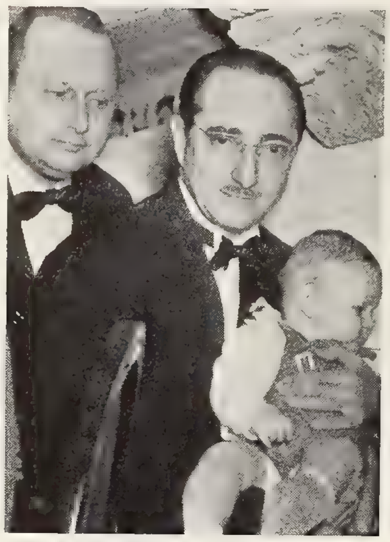
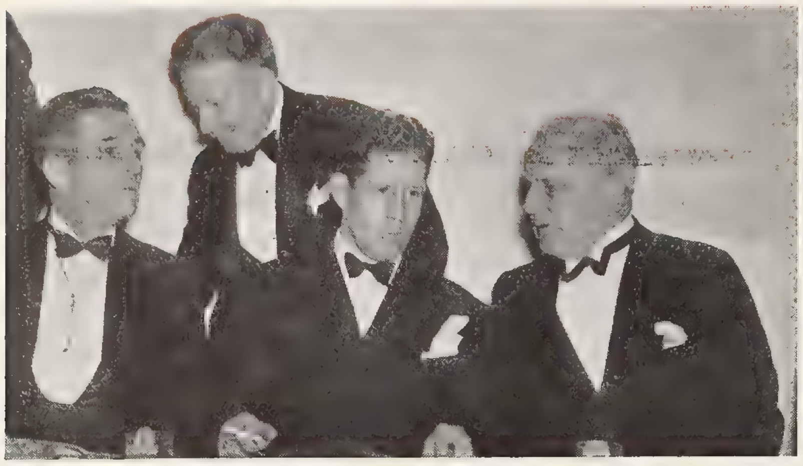
TENT SHOW

MAKING merry in the showboat atmosphere created for the occasion in the ballroom of the William Penn Hotel in Pittsburgh, industry leaders, civic and political notables of the east last week were guests at the 11th annual banquet of Pittsburgh Tent No. 1 of the Variety Club. More than 1,000 attended the dinner. John H. Harris, national chief barker, was general chairman.

At the immediate left are Ira H. Cohn, retiring chief barker; C. J. Latta, new chief barker, and George V. Barker III, the Tent's newly adopted foundling.





At the speakers' table: Edward Everett Horton, Senator Frank Harris, Rudy Vallee and Senator J. J. Davis.

Below. Harry Kalmine, Ben Kalmenson, Ned Depinet, Clayton Bond, Nat Levy and H. M. Richey.

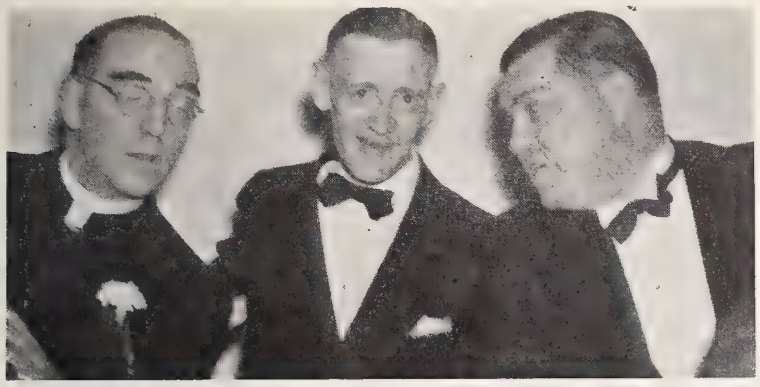
at PITTSBURGH

Claire Meeder, Andy Park, Joe Hiller, Harry Kalmine, Rev. E. J. O'Connell to whom Tent No. I donated funds to purchase additional property for his boys' camp near Pittsburgh; Mike Nidorf, Harry Feinstein, Dinty Moore, Sid Jacobs, Mike Cullen and Ben Steerman.



The Rev. Edward J. Flanagan of Boys Town, guest of honor as the recipient of the first annual Variety Humanitarian Award; Rosy Roswell, and former Governor Harold Hoffman of New Jersey, who was toastmaster.

The Detroit table: E. E. Kirschner, William Carlson, Harold Robinau, Charles Snyder, J. B. Rogers, Jim Baker, Alec Schreiber, Jack Haley and M. E. Steinberg.

A corner of the guests' table: Karl Hoblitzelle and R. J. O'Donnell of Texas Interstate, and William Scully, general sales manager of Universal.

HOLLYWOOD PLEADS WITH LABOR TO TAKE SALARY CUT IN EMERGENCY

But Organized Talent Ridicules Cry for Economy at Expense of Wage and Personnel Reductions; Other Union Notes

Pleading a desperation caused by "stoppage of revenues from Europe" and the fear that the motion picture industry may face "absolute ruin" from a combination of that and increased labor costs, and appealing to the "sense of fairness and decency" of the Hollywood crafts unions, the producers on Monday asked William Bioff, western representative of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, to relinquish the 10 per cent wage increase which he, acting for the 12,000 studio workers under threat of a strike, gained September 25th.

While the producers were delivering this appeal, various studio creative talent groups, headed by the Screen Actors Guild, were deprecating the cry for an "economy" that involved wage and personnel cuts.

Bioff Undecided

Mr. Bioff on Tuesday said that he might decide to ignore the plea altogether, adding that he was undecided on what course to take in the unusual situation.

Mixed reactions among leaders of other Hollywood unions met the producers' appeal, some believing the move is a "smoke screen" for events to come in connection with the economic situation growing out of the international problem, others thinking the plea is a move to forestall demands of other studio crafts for wage increases.

The producers' appeal was in a four page letter from E. J. Mannix, chairman of the producers' labor negotiating committee, to Mr. Bioff, a letter which repeatedly attacked the union spokesman's resistance to the arguments of the producers that economy was necessary in the present emergency and that the union should refrain from starting a series of wage demands by all workers.

"We attempted to show you," the letter to Mr. Bioff said, "the inevitable and tremendous effect in closing or part time closing of theatres in warring countries, depreciation in value of English currency, embargo on export of money by many countries, and many detrimental changes to our business taking place not only in the war zone but throughout the world."

The letter referred to the producers' request for a postponement of negotiations, a postponement which, on that September day, and night, the union had refused; and it declared that the producers "regretted" granting the increase.

Mr. Mannix this week urged the IATSE to "become a constructive force for the preservation of the industry, rather than an element which destroys it." He said that on the earlier occasion Mr. Bioff had "callously and with argument of threatened force insisted on increase."

"Even in the short time that has now elapsed," the letter continued, "we realize more fully the disaster which your ill-considered action must cause this industry. The foreign situation is even more threatening and difficult than at the time of our negotiations. . . . Granting of our demands has loosed a flood of demands from other employee groups . . . which collectively are impossible to grant and must mean absolute ruin."

At the time the producers granted the IATSE 10 per cent advance, it was estimated that this alone would mean an annual increase in studio costs of $5,000,000.

Meanwhile, the Screen Actors Guild which, with the Screen Directors Guild and other talent guilds, has "doubted" the producers' arguments that stringent economy is necessary, gave official voice to these sentiments in the October issue of its official bulletin. It suggested to the producers, in their search for economy methods, "Walk, don't run."

While the producers were appealing for a waiving of the wage increase, which was retroactive to August 12th, Moving Picture Painters Local 644, led by Herbert Sorrell, was still demanding a 15 per cent wage increase, under a strike threat.

The International Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers of America and the Los Angeles district council of painters have approved the proposed strike, according to Mr. Sorrell.

Producers were facing another strike threat, this by the Studio Publicists Guild, which wrote the AMPP demanding that a contract, purportedly agreed upon by the producers on October 9th, be made effective immediately.

Business representatives of Hollywood crafts unions met last week and opposed formation of any office workers' unions except in the American Federation of Labor. They also said they would invite AFL office workers' unions.

The Universal Office Employees Association is asking the studio for a contract, and seeking recognition by the National Labor Relations Board. Both Paramount and MGM on the Coast have agreements with their office workers.

J. W. Buzzell, secretary of the Los Angeles Central Labor Council, has called the Universal Studio Employees Guild a "company union." Joseph Touhy, secretary of the Conference of AFL Studio Crafts Unions, said the federation would organize all studio office workers to prevent formation of "company," independent or C.I.O. unions.

Laboratory Technicians Local 683 last week warned the majors it might strike unless they stopped giving work to four laboratories with which the union has failed to agree on bargaining terms. The four are Cinecolor, Mercer, Williams and Pacific Title.

The directors of the Artists Managers Guild this week ratified a licensing agreement with the Screen Actors Guild (see page 52).

The new agreement between Actors Equity and the Screen Actors Guild, whereby the Guild no longer will pay dues for members of Equity working in films, went into effect Thursday. The new plan provides that all Equity members are covered by the interchangeability plan evolved by the Associated Actors and Artistes of America, parent union of actors.

Last week the National Labor Relations Board, in Washington, ordered bargaining agent elections within 30 days, at the studios of Walter Lantz Productions, Loew's, Inc., Raymond Katz Studio, and Leon Schlesinger. The election was asked by the Screen Cartoon Guild, unaffiliated.

Negotiate Exchange Wages

Negotiations on a new contract between the majors and their exchange workers, are scheduled. The present local and master pacts, in effect for two years, expire November 30th.

Try Nick Again

The extortion trial of John P. Nick, deposed head of the St. Louis projectionists' union, Local 143, is expected to begin next Monday in that city's circuit court. It is a retrial. The first action against Mr. Nick charging extortion of $10,000 from theatre owners in 1936, was declared a mistrial two weeks ago.

Hear Picket Petition

Hearing on petitions of Fanchon and Marco, Eden Theatre Company, and St. Louis Amusement Company for a restraining order against St. Louis projectionists Local 143, for picketing their neighborhood houses, was called this Thursday in St. Louis circuit court.

More St. Louis Strikes

The St. Louis Motion Picture Theatre Ushers and Attendants Union this week was picketing the Bremen and O'Fallon theatres, operated by Clarence H. Kaimann, an important witness in the Nick trial. The strike was over Mr. Kaimann's refusal to enter into a separate agreement with the union.

Settle Wisconsin Strike

The strike of the Wisconsin projectionists union, Local 164, against Ross Baldwin, owner of the Tosa theatre, in Wauwatosa, has been settled. The union is negotiating with Milwaukee County exhibitors on a new two-year contract.

Screen Actors Guild Rules Players' Free "Guest" Appearances Off the Air

A move determined to prevent possible recurrence of the "forcing" of screen players to make free radio appearances on sponsored shows was made this week by the Screen Actors Guild, in Hollywood, which informed the Association of Motion Picture Producers that such practice of any studio would be considered a violation of the Guild's basic agreement with the producers.

In another move, the national board of the American Federation of Radio Actors was asked by Laurence Beilenson, Guild attorney, and I. B. Kornblum, Hollywood representative, of the American Federation of Radio Artists to suspend or discipline appropriately any member who works on air shows below an ordinary salary.

The move hinged upon the disclosure that Louella O. Parsons, Hearst radio columnist would introduce players appearing on a "Drums Along the Mohawk" dramatization on the Kate Smith air show Friday night, which was regarded by the Guild as an opening wedge for free performance shows. Miss Parsons declared she had nothing to do with arranging the show but merely would introduce, at the request of the studio, various players who appear.

MPTOA PREDICTS MORE CONCESSIONS; COAST EXHIBITORS ATTACK CLEARANCE

Allied of California, Arizona and Nevada Accuses Warners of Trying to Break Down Zoning Agreements

Following the lead of Warner Brothers and MGM, most of the majors will include some of the trade practice code's provisions in their new contracts, according to Ed Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America. Mr. Kuykendall, who expressed this opinion in New York over the weekend, after attendance at the MPTOA board of directors' meeting in White Sulphur Springs, West Virginia, early last week, also outlined future procedure of his organization, including efforts to have revised the present theatre liability and fire insurance rates.

California Allied Protests

Warner Brothers this week was considering the protest by the Allied of California, Arizona and Nevada, against what it called an attempt "to break down zoning agreements" in Los Angeles, in favor of the Warner-affiliated theatre, the Wiltern. Copies of the written protest to Gradwell Sears, vice-president and general sales manager of the distributing company, were sent by Allied to the trade press.

In New York this week, and even as Max Cohen, president of the New York Allied (expelled by the National Allied recently) was opening the meeting in Syracuse of his unit, it appeared as if he had won complete victory over the dissidents in his organization who favored reaffiliation with the national group. Thirteen members of the board of directors have voted confidence in Mr. Cohen, accepted the resignation of E. Thornton Kelly (leader of the dissidents), and resolved that the New York unit should continue independently.

Washington MPTO Reorganizing

In Seattle last week, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Washington appeared ready to reorganize as an independent state group, affiliated only with the new Pacific Coast Conference of Theatre Owners, a group of Coast independent units.

Other exhibitor organization highlights of the week were the annual meeting of the Independent Theatres Protective Association of Wisconsin and Upper Michigan, in Milwaukee, on Monday and Tuesday of this week; the coming convention on next Sunday and Monday in Dallas, of the Texas Allied; the meeting of the board of managers of the United Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Eastern Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware, last week in Philadelphia; a special bulletin of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Western New York, warning against passage of a pari-mutuel race betting amendment to the New York State constitution; the forthcoming annual convention of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio; an all-day membership meeting of the Allied of New Jersey, in Passaic, New Jersey, on November 9th; the appointing of committees for the December convention of the Theatre Owners of North and South Carolina, and the affiliation of Allied Theatres of Connecticut with the New England Allied branch, Independent Exhibitors, Inc., of Boston.

Mr. Kuykendall, in predicting that all distributors would "come about" to the Warner and MGM point of view, in inclusion of trade practice reforms in their contracts, said he did not even believe it necessary personally to "persuade" executives of the other companies.

26 STATE UNITS ARE CLAIMED FOR ALLIED

Both national exhibitor organizations—Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors and the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America have zealously guarded the number of members within its ranks. On occasion, however, they report on the number and identities of state and local exhibitor groups which claim affiliation.

In The Indiana Exhibitor, official publication of the Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana, 26 units are listed as being affiliated with Allied, as follows:

Allied of Connecticut, District of Columbia, Illinois, Indiana, Louisiana, Maine, Michigan, Minnesota and Dakotas, combined, and Allied of New Hampshire, New Jersey, Oklohoma, Oregon, Rhode Island, Texas, Vermont, Eastern Pennsylvania and California-Arizona-Nevada, in combination.

Also: MPTO of Maryland, Montana Exhibitors Association, Independent Exhibitors of New England, North Dakota Exhibitors Association, Independent Theatre Owners of Virginia, ITO of Ohio, MPTO of Western Pennsylvania-West Virginia and Independent Theatres Protective Association of Wisconsin-Upper Michigan.

However, he qualified by saying that if reforms did not come within "a reasonable time," MPTOA discussions with majors' executives would resume. Twentieth Century-Fox and Paramount would soon make concessions, Mr. Kuykendall said he was informed.

The MPTOA has appointed a committee to negotiate for more favorable fire insurance and liability rates, Mr. Kuykendall said. This did not mean cooperative insurance buying, he noted. On the committee are Arthur Lockwood, chairman; Lewen Pizor, Charles Hayman, and Mitchell Wolfson.

The committee will try to equalize theatre and department store fire insurance ratings, he said, noting that the stores enjoy a lower rate, though more liable to fires.

The committee will try to have liability determined by the number of seats per house, rather than by the annual patronage, Mr. Kuykendall said.

The appointment of a fact-finding committee to determine the extent to which Hollywood production is being cut, in quality, and how much the war has affected revenues—a move authorized by the board of directors last week—is being delayed, the MPTOA prexy said.

Speakers' Bureau Tryout

As for the MPTOA plan for regional speakers' bureaus to combat publicity unfavorable to motion pictures, that will be tried first by the MPTO of Northern California, he said. The bureaus will "educate" civic, social, and business forums with speakers "friendly" to the industry.

For the next 12 months, the MPTOA will concentrate on the industry's "most important" problems, cancellation, overbuying, unreasonable clearance, and unfair competition, Mr. Kuykendall advised.

In connection with Mr. Kuykendall's statement that the Northern California unit of the MPTOA would be the first to form a speakers' bureau, it was reported from Buffalo this week that the MPTO of Western New York was this week considering the immediate dispatch of speakers to women's organizations to explain the motion picture industry's (or some portion of it) opposition to Governmental regulation, as exemplified by the Neely Bill.

Protest Made to Sears

The protest by the California, Arizona, and Nevada Allied against the Warner Brothers' alleged favoring of their own theatre, the Wiltern, in Los Angeles clearance, detailed the "discrimination." The letter to Mr. Sears said, in part:

"An alarming situation has been suddenly precipitated by your Los Angeles branch in their decision to sell the Wiltern Theatre (a Warner Bros. Theatre) your pictures on the basis of 21 days after Los Angeles first run closing at a 40c admission price—calling it an exclusive second run in the whole city of Los Angeles, which is nothing but a fraud and subterfuge. Furthermore any and all other 40c theatres located in any of the 24 separate zones in the city would have to play their pictures not sooner than 28 days after Los Angeles first run closings and in addition the rest of the price schedule such as 35c-30c-25c-20c and 15c houses would all be thrown back seven days later. . . .

"To deprive independent exhibitors of the right to play pictures 21 days after Los Angeles first run closings at 40 cents is indeed unfair and unjust, and in our opinion a direct violation of the so-called 'consent decree' which even at the present time the United States Government is attempting to enforce by the complaint filed in Federal Court against the various motion picture distributors."

The Allied letter called attention to the "statement of policy" by Jack Warner, placed in the trade publications as an advertisement, and quoted the "promises" given by it.

"Now we ask you, why in Heaven's name can you publicly go on record with such an advertisement, and then turn around and break up the entire zoning and clearance schedule in Southern California," the letter to Mr. Sears said.

Mr. Sears made no comment on the Allied protest.

Max Cohen Wins Vote

Max Cohen, president of the erstwhile turbulent New York Allied, recently expelled from the National Allied States Association, presided at a state-membership meeting in Syracuse this Wednesday, after winning a signal vote of confidence from his board of directors. These, meeting last Friday, in New York City, backed Mr. Cohen, unanimously accepted the "resignation" of E. Thornton Kelly as executive secretary of the unit (Mr. Kelly having unsuccessfully attempted to rally New York members into a "new" New York Allied to be affiliated again with the National Allied).

The membership expressed a hope for a state film code.

At the directors' meeting were Joseph Ro-

NEW FLOOD OF WAR FILMS FROM HOLLYWOOD, EUROPE AND VAULTS

28 Productions Newly Available Include Features from England, France and Italy; Many States Rights

The business of bringing out war films and international topicals pertaining thereto is booming. Another score of military and related subjects has reached the market since Motion Picture Herald first reported on the trend, which shaped up last September as abruptly as came England's weekend decision to go to war with France against Germany.

Twenty-eight films are newly available in the form of new releases from Hollywood and Europe, and reissues from the dusty vaults of both.

Two from Leichter

Mitchel Leichter, independent producer and distributor, was expected to leave Hollywood next week for a tour of key cities, in which he will offer distribution franchises on a state right basis for his war picture, "She Goes to War," a United Artists release of 1930 to which Mr. Leichter obtained rights and to which he added footage, reducing total length to eight reels from the old 10. Eleanor Boardman is starred; Henry King directed; Rupert Hughes wrote the story. Another Leichter acquisition is "Hell's Harbor," from Inspiration Pictures, released by United Artists in 1922.

Report "Dead Men" Dates

Alliance Films Corporation's "Dead Men Tell No Tales," British made, and recently arrived, stars Emlyn Williams. It has played first runs in Rochester, Albany and Akron, and has been booked first-run in Cincinnati, Dayton, Middletown, Danville, Portsmouth, Mansfield, Niles, and Springfield, Ohio; and in Hartford, Conn.

"Battle Fleets" Another

RKO reports that the March of Time production, "Battle Fleets of England," is receiving a full quota of bookings, interest having been enhanced by the German airplane raids upon the British fleet in the North Sea and in Scottish bases.

RKO on Tuesday also announced "The Marines Fly High," for immediate production in Hollywood by Robert Sisk, and starring Steffi Duna, Hungarian actress and Richard Dix.

"Double Crime" Held Over

"Double Crime in the Maginot Line" is on a run at the Fifth Avenue Playhouse, in New York, and has been booked by Tower Pictures, its distributor, into the Skouras and Walter Reade circuits in lower New York State and northern New Jersey territories. The film was made in France.

"Grande Gloire" Here

"Grande Gloire," the first picture completed in France since the war, and about the war, is being released by Transatlantic Films. It stars Mireille Balin and Erich von Stroheim.

French News Short Here

"What Hitler Did and What Hitler Said," first issue of a new "War Bulletin" series from French Cinema Center, New York, has arrived in the United States and has been booked into the World theatre there. The series will be released monthly; commentary is in English, each in two reels.

CANADA BARS NAZI FILMS AS WAR MOVE

Motion pictures made in Germany or shipped from that country since the opening of the war are banned from Canada under penalties provided by the Trade with the Enemy Regulations of the War Measures Act, even when they are to be imported from a neutral country.

The stand is taken that the use of such pictures constitutes trading with an enemy country on the ground that payment for rental provides a form of revenue for Germany, even in a remote and indirect method. The regulations apply to all commodities in which there would be financial advantage for the "opposition."

Revise "Hell's Angels"

"Hell's Angels," war story which marked the late Jean Harlow's star debut, is being revised to bring it up to date. Bob Savini, distributor, arrived in California this week to assist in the revision which will be completed in time for a January 1 release.

"Beast" Title Stays

Ben Judell, president of Producers' Picture Corporation, said last week in Hollywood that no change was expected in the title of "Hitler—Beast of Berlin" and that the release, on last Sunday, would be observed. The picture is built on Shepard Traube's novel, "Goose-Step," was directed in Hollywood by Sherman Scott, and stars Steffi Duna, Lucien Prival, Vernon Dent, and George Roesner. The story details the adventures of an anti-Hitler group in Germany.

Saying it was "inhuman, sacrilegious and tended to incite crime," the New York censor board Monday banned "Hitler, Beast of Berlin."

Henry Rathner, New York representative of the producer, charged that "the decision of the censors is a violation of constitutional rights." He said the censors' order would be fought, if necessary, in the highest courts.

The MPPDA withheld its Production Code seal from the picture, according to Mr. Rathner, on the basis of the title alone. Pennsylvania censors approved the film Tuesday.

"All Quiet" Repeats

Universal reports additional repeat bookings on its reissue of the old war film, "All Quiet on the Western Front."

Capitalizing on the current war situation and recollecting the play it received when it was revived six months ago, the Orpheum in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., for example, has scheduled another repeat of "All Quiet."

"Nazi Captive" on the Coast

"I Was a Captive of Nazi Germany," war film reputedly telling the true life experiences of Isobel Lillian Steele, young American girl who was held in a Nazi prison, had its west coast showing at the Cinema theatre, Hollywood, Wednesday. The film, which is based on Miss Steele's book, was produced by Albert Mannon and distributed by Bert Goldberg. She plays the lead.

"That They May Live"

"That They May Live," a French condemnation of war and its horrors, will have its American premiere Monday at the Filmarte theatre, New York. Abel Gance directed and Pierre van Paassen wrote the English titles. Les Gueules Cassées, the mutiliated veterans of the last World War, appear in the picture, starring Victor Francen, supported by Paul Amiot, Rollin, Andre Nox, Walter, Line Noro, Jean Max and others.

Arthur Mayer and Joseph Burstyn are distributing the film nationally. (A review appears in this issue.)

Pathe News War Film

Pathe News is producing a one-reel film on the war with commentary by Major George Eliot Fielding, of the U. S. Army, who will also do the narration.

By means of war pictures and diagrams, Major Fielding will explain strategy on the Western front and what may happen when either the Allies or Germany starts the "big push." Production is under the supervision of Frederic Ullman, Jr., Pathe News producer.

Neil Sullivan, Pathe News cameraman, who went over to cover the war, is now in Berlin. He had been in Holland awaiting a German permit.

Red Cross Pictures

Warners has announced plans for the production of "Clara Barton and the American Red Cross" as a two-reel color subject, to be supervised by Gordon Hollingshead.

MGM on last May 20 released a John Nesbitt "Passing Parade" short, titled "Angel of Mercy," which featured Clara Barton's fight for organization and acceptance of the Red Cross.

Hold Over "Espionage Agent"

"Espionage Agent," Warner war film, is now in general release. It was held over for a second week at the New York Strand. The picture stars Brenda Marshall and Joel McCrea.

Film Brings Reacting

Monogram's release, "The Fight For Peace," an anti-war compilation of topical material with a commentary written by the historian, Hendrik Willem Van Loon, and narrated by David Ross, was the subject of debate recently, by Thomas Mann, author, and Albert Einstein, mathematician.

"Gold Star Mothers"

Ben Judell's Producers Pictures Corporation was reported attempting to get ready a second film concerning war, "Gold Star Mothers," for release November 11th. William Ullman, Jr., wrote the script.

Didn't Ban UA Film

United Artists' British-made film, "An Englishman's Home," was not, as reported, banned in England by the request of the British air ministry, the United Artists' foreign department said. The picture has had a run at the London Pavilion theatre, according to Arthur Kelly, UA foreign chief.

Toronto Bans "Beau Geste"

On objections of the French Consul in Toronto, Paramount's "Beau Geste," film of the Merriman, Syracuse; Thomas DiLorenzo, New Paltz; Mitchell Conery, Ravena; Louis Goidel, Brooklyn; Irving Sherman, Pearl River; Ray Pashley, Interlaken; Herman Lorence, Cattaraugus; J. Abramson, Brooklyn; and Abe Levy, Brooklyn.

The board recommended that New York Allied continue independently.

The move by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Washington for an affiliation with the Pacific Coast conference of independent coast exhibitor units was inaugurated at a state convention last week in Washington. L. O. Lukan, 1939 president of the unit, and James W. Hone, secretary, will reorganize the unit, eliminating all state officers except a board of trustees and an executive secretary.

The convention elected no new officers or board members. However, when the new unit is organized, a new board will be chosen.

The present officers and board members include Paul Aust, B. F. Shearer, John Danz, Harry Black, Al Rosenberg, and John Hamrick, of Seattle; Milton Kenworthy, of Moscow, Idaho; Cecil Gwinn, of Olympia; William Ripley, of Longview; Fred Mercy, Jr., of Yakima; and Mildred Bishop, of Lewiston, Idaho.

Milwaukee Independents Meet

In Milwaukee the Independent Protective Association of Wisconsin and Upper Michigan attacked double features; urged friendly relations with circuits and advised harmony within industry ranks. Among the speakers were Bert Fischer, Charles Trampe, August Berkholz and Harry Perlowitz. Nearly 600 guests and members attended.

Colonel Henry Albert Cole, president of the National Allied States Association, and a Texan; Abram F. Myers, its general counsel; W. A. Steffes, Northwest Allied leader; James R. Grainger, president of Republic Pictures; and William "Bill" Scully—these speakers are expected at the annual convention of the Texas Allied at the Baker Hotel, Dallas, on next Sunday and Monday.

The luncheon meeting last week in Philadelphia of the United Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey, and Delaware, was occupied mostly with a discussion of sales policies and the Neely Bill. Lewen Pizor, the president, reported on the MPTOA meeting in White Sulphur Springs, early last week.

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Western New York, in a special bulletin opposing passage of an amendment to the state constitution allowing pari-mutuel betting, warned that passage would "ruin" the film business and that repeal might take five years. It advised that theatre men might buy a trailer for $1.80 from National Screen Service and Greyhound Film Laboratories, the latter in Buffalo, advising voters to vote "no" on the amendment, in this month's balloting.

Ohio Board To Meet

The board of directors of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio are to meet shortly after the November 7th elections to decide whether the annual convention should be postponed.

On the committees for the December convention of the Theatre Owners of North and South Carolina are: Program, F. H. Reddingfield, Charlotte, chairman; Roy L. Smart, Charlotte and Ben L. Strozier, Rock Hill, S. C.; Resolutions, Montgomery S. Hill, chairman, Greensboro; Roy Rowe, Burgaw, George Parr, Lancaster, S. C., Albert Sotile, Charleston, S. C.; Reception, Mrs. Runa Curtis, Liberty, Mrs. C. H. Albrecht, Newberry, S. C., and Mrs. H. T. Green, Manning, S. C.; Publicity, Robert E. Bryant, Rock Hill, S. C., chairman; H. E. Buchanan, Hendersonville, and E. L. Hearne, Albermarle; Membership, H. R. Berry, Hartsville, S. C., chairman; O. I. Kirby, Roxboro, S. S. Stevenson, Henderson, George Carpenter, Valdese.

SANCTION CODE TALKS, BRANDT ASKS MURPHY

Harry Brandt, president of the Independent Theatre Owners Association of New York and frequently a spokesman for independents in their relations with the majors, was to take a plane to Washington Thursday morning to ask Attorney General Frank Murphy to permit the reopening of negotiations between distributors and exhibitors on the trade practice code which the Department of Justice branded illegal in September.

Mr. Brandt seeks to convince the Attorney General that the feeling of a large number of independent exhibitors favors the code and that the department should permit its adoption.

More Martial Films Available

Foreign Legion and starring Gary Cooper, has been banned in Ontario for the duration of the war. It previously had been banned by the Quebec Government.

Reissues Renamed

Alliance Films of the United States, New York, has retitled three of its war reissues. "Hidden Menace" is now "Bombs over Europe"; "Not Wanted on Voyage" is renamed "Treachery on the High Seas"; and "Luck of the Navy" is now "North Sea Patrol."

Another War Picture

"Lost on the Western Front" is being released by Standard Pictures Company on its 1939-40 schedule.

Salvation Army Featured

Darryl F. Zanuck, production head of Twentieth Century-Fox, announced the purchase of the rights to "Marching as to War," a war story of the Salavation Army, for early production, possibly in January, with Louis Bromfield assigned to the script.

Purchase "Human Beast"

Juno Films has purchased American rights to "The Human Beast," French war film.

Laemmle Czech Film

Several distributing companies have been reported dickering with Carl Laemmle, Jr., for rights to "Skeleton on Horseback." topical Czechoslovakian film. It has English dialogue, and is anti-war in tenor.

"Torpedoed" Bookings

Film Alliance's new war film, "Torpedoed," has had several bookings in the East, notably at the Globe, in New York City, where it was playing at time of the sinking of the "Royal Oak," British battleship. Scenes in the picture were photographed aboard the warship.

"U-Boat" Publicity

Columbia's "U-Boat 29" also played at the Globe Theatre, in New York, concurrently with the attacks by the German submarine fleet upon the British fleet in its Scottish bases. It was produced for Columbia by Irving Asher, in England, and stars Conrad Veidt.

Hold Cummins Picture

"Why This War?", a Jewel Productions (Samuel Cummins) release, was held over for a second week at the Cameo Theatre, New York.

Italian War Film

"Scipio Africanus," Italian film for which Milton Doushkess has written English titles, began an engagement at the Cinecitta theatre, 44th Street and 8th Avenue, New York, on Thursday.

With the Second Punic War its background and with Isa Miranda, Francesca Braggiotti and Annibale Ninchi its stars, the film is to be shown in cooperation with Latin and history teachers in New York high schools and colleges. "Scipio Africanus," called the most expensive film ever made in Italy, was directed by Carmine Gallone and more than 6,000 players are said to appear in the battle scenes. It has a musical score by I. Pizzetti.

Hays Office Wants War Films 'Neutral'

A policy of complete neutrality is being pursued by the office of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America on matters relating to war pictures. Church and peace groups and individuals are said to have made many complaints against motion pictures with martial themes, since the European war began last September.

Specific objections have been made against MGM's "Thunder Afloat," RKO's "Nurse Edith Cavell," and "U-Boat 29," a Columbia picture produced in England. Complaints to the office of Will H. Hays and the MPPDA call these pictures "war mongering." The answer to all the objections is that the pictures were completed or in production before the outbreak of war and were not calculated to inflame American public opinion or get us into the war.

The MPPDA reports that no complaints have been received since the war began on Warners' "Confessions of a Nazi Spy," because that film was released before the fighting began.

The Hays office is interpreting strictly the provision of the Production Code which covers national feelings: "The history, institutions, prominent people and citizenry of other nations shall be represented fairly." The general tension caused by the world situation and the individual protests have brought special attention to this section of the Production Code.

Joseph I. Breen, Production Code Administrator in Hollywood, arrived in New York Wednesday morning and went into conference immediately with Will H. Hays, in his suite at the Hotel Vanderbilt.

BRITISH TRADE SEES RAYS OF HOPE BREAKING THROUGH THE BLACKOUTS

Optimists Predict War Boom in Entertainment After the Nation Adjusts Itself to War Basis; Transport and Labor Problems

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

With Britain, at the time of writing, comparatively free from bombing raids, the fierceness of war on the domestic front not yet fully felt, the British exhibitor is currently adjusting himself to the new conditions. Though the process of adjustment may take, before it is complete, six months or more, the feeling is daily gaining ground that the future may not be so bad as the more pessimistic think.

Prosperity Seen

Currently aggravating the British exhibitor are a series of headaches, result of new and acute trade problems which have, as yet, not been solved. With these settled, and it is but a process of time and evolution before they are settled, more sanguine spirits in the trade here foresee, with the virtual elimination of most other forms of competition and the likely increase in money circulation and spending power, a period of prosperity.

Though there are more problems than four facing the British theatre owner at present, the most acute form a tantalizing quartette:

(a) The rising costs aggravated by transport conditions, trade restrictions, and so forth.

(b) The likelihood of a future shortage of product; this linked with the difficulty of obtaining supplies.

(c) Staff difficulties aggravated by mobilization and the diversion of labor.

(d) The gradual undermining of the whole system of economics and trading which has entirely changed the value of the motion picture.

Other Restrictions Irk Trade

Add to these such minor but aggravating incidentals as the question of matinee prices, restriction of opening hours, the arbitrary behavior of local authorities, the abolition of queues in certain areas, the complexities of air raid warnings, etc., and the result is a pretty little tangle for the trade operator to unravel.

Despite this, the optimists in our midst foresee in the not far distant future, the motion picture having a virtual monopoly of the entertainment business in war stricken Britain.

Taking these considerations in reverse order, the economics of the business presents itself as not the least complex problem. Exhibitors are finding that the pre-war estimates of the economics values of films are now far out. Programs booked at 50 per cent before last September might have been economic. Today they are more often suicidal. No safe estimate can be made of the earning capacity of the motion picture in a country girt for battle. Until conditions adjust themselves it is not easy to formulate, establish or operate a satisfactory system of economics. Time, however, will tell.

Shortage of Labor

The mobilization of thousands of men into the armed forces, most of them admittedly the younger generation, has seriously depleted the labor market and exhibitors are finding acute difficulties in fully staffing the projection box, in training linkmen and ushers, and developing firemen to the degree of efficiency compelled by wartime circumstances. The question of training women as projectionists is currently being explored and the prospect of Phoebe—or, maybe, Hecate—in the wartime booth is not far distant. The drainage, however, is at present keeper than the supply.

DISCUSS SUPPLY OF FILMS TO TROOPS

Negotiations are being carried on among the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association, Kinematograph Renters Society (distributors) and the British War Officce for a new basis for the supply of films to English troops.

The aim is to make effective the pre-war agreement to leave the matter of film entertainment for the army to a trade committee, handling films from all distributors, including American. A similar basis is expected to be worked out with the Naval Film Corp.

The release version of "The Lion Has Wings," produced by Alexander Korda, was screened Monday, with long waiting lines despite a morning air raid warning, for the long awaited premiere of the patriotic film at the Leicester Square theatre.

It is the first feature sponsored by the Ministry of Information. It provides intimate glimpses of fighter control centers, British bombers at Kiel, a balloon barrage and the like. Ralph Richardson and Merle Oberon are starred.

It is not likely now that the Stock Exchange will move to Denham Studios, as was originally planned. Stockbrokers and others opposed the evacuation, considering it unlikely that members in any great numbers would be able to reach Denham.

Though the product shortage is potential rather than immediately actual, its mark is already apparent on the exhibitors' business. The complications of the Quota situation and the likelihood that film supplies from Hollywood will be restricted either voluntarily or involuntarily, are causes of no small concern for the future.

The present itself offers a product problem to many exhibitors, thanks to the release tangle following the interruption of opening, and to the chaos which admittedly exists in some quarters, and is likely to happen anywhere on the slightest provocation as a result of the transport tangle.

Many Transport Complaints

Though a new transport organization exists in skeleton form, with pooled resources, clearing houses and dumps outside the larger towns, results seem to have been far from satisfying. Complaints continue to be made in exhibitor circles all over the country that it is worse than difficult to get film supplies, that they arrive so late preliminary advertising is often impracticable, that wrong programs go to the right theatres and vice versa, and that copies arrive in deplorable condition. The complaints are, however, incidental rather than general.

Until experience has taught the trade how to operate its new transport machinery, until train schedules, currently drastically reduced, are established and stabilized, and road transport, at present virtually monopolized for war supplies, comes nearer normal, matters are not likely to reach no criticism stage.

Over and above all this the general rise in the cost of living, the alarming increase in unemployment, the difficulty of obtaining supplies—other than films—and the effects of the blackout and war dislocation in general, have put up operating costs considerably.

Bargain Prices Sought

Meeting such situations CEA policy has been definitely and unequivocally against cheap prices or bargain matinees, formally made it a matter of Association policy. In many cases exhibitors have refused to fall into line.

Legislative pinpricks to which the exhibitor has had to subject himself include the need for special licenses for the sale of chocolate and sweetmeats—and others for the sale of other foods, new safety rules to cope with air raid conditions, staggered openings, the abolition of the football forecast pool, the restricted horse and greyhound racing, with restrictions on attendances, and the interruption of other forms of entertainment like boxing, wrestling and ice hockey, leave the picture house a clear field.

Money is not yet circulating as it is likely to in the near future, when employment is stimulated and spending increased, as it was in 1914.

During the last war it was between four and six months ere the West End houses in London began to boom, as boom they did for four years. Despite the blackout that process may yet repeat itself. Already in most towns, though some houses are feeling the breeze, the larger central cinemas are doing more than adequate business.

The CEA will hold a special executive meeting Tuesday to discuss product shortage with particular reference to the possibility of cooperative production and abolition of the six months booking period.

Judge Halts RCA Suits

Further stockholders' suits against RCA were stayed yesterday by New York supreme court Judge Levy. The action was taken pending final determination of five consolidated suits which will be tried in the near future. The suits charge RCA officers and directors with mismanagement and waste.

Expect Roosevelt in New York

General Theatres And Consolidated

Net profits from operations were reported this week by General Theatres Equipment and by Consolidated Film Industries, and a net loss was listed by Heywood-Wakefield Company, which manufactures seats for theatres and other public auditoriums.

General Theatres and subsidiary companies, excluding Cinema Building Corporation, J. M. Wall Machine Company, Inc., and Zephyr Shaver Corporation report consolidated net profit, after provision for depreciation and estimated federal income tax, for the three months ended September 30th, subject to year-end adjustments, of $154,347. This compares with a consolidated net profit of $218,524 for the corresponding period last year. The capital stock outstanding as of September 30th, was 597,397 shares.

Consolidated Film Industries, Inc., and subsidiaries report consolidated net earnings for the nine months ended September 30th, after depreciation and normal federal taxes but before provision for surtax on undistributed profits, of $574,258, equal to $1.45 per share on 400,000 outstanding shares of $2 preferred stock. This compares with net earnings of $536,206, or $1.34 for the similar period in 1938.

For the three months ended September 30th, net earnings, after depreciation and normal federal taxes but before provision for surtax on undistributed profits, were $218,140, equal, after provision of 50 cents per share, to 3½ cents per share on 524,973 shares of common stock. This compares with $218,763 for the third quarter of 1938.

A net loss of $138,402 for the nine months ended September 30th was announced this week by Heywood-Wakefield. This compares with a loss of $144,739 for the same period last year. However, sales were reported at 11 per cent in excess of those filled to September 30, 1938.

UA Has 15 More Films for 1939-40

United Artists has 15 new productions to be released within the next few months, according to Murray Silverstone, chief of the company's operations. These, combined with the pictures already released, form the largest program since the company was formed 20 years ago by Mary Pickford, Charlie Chaplin, Douglas Fairbanks and D. W. Griffith, said the company's statement. The pictures now in production are said to involve a $12,000,000 negative expenditure.

The films ready for release are "The Housekeeper's Daughter," Hal Roach production starring Joan Bennett and Adolphe Menjou, and "Over the Moon," Alexander Korda's color production starring Merle Oberon. The following pictures are being edited: "Thief of Bagdad," also produced by Korda and with Sabu and Conrad Veidt; Samuel Goldwyn's "Raffles." David Niven and Olivia de Havilland; Walter Wanger's "City for Sale," Pat O'Brien, Ruth Terry, Broderick Crawford and Edward Arnold, and Hal Roach's production of the John Steinbeck novel, "Of Mice and Men," Burgess Meredith and Betty Field, directed by Lewis Milestone.

Productions now before the cameras are: Charlie Chaplin's picture now known merely as, "Production No. 6"; David O. Selznick's film version of "Rebecca," with Laurence Olivier and Joan Fontaine directed by Alfred Hitchock. The Walter Wanger production, "House across the Bay," starring Joan Bennett and George Raft and Edward Small's production of Howard Spring's novel, "My Son, My Son," starring Brian Aherne and Louis Hayward.

In preparation for early camera work are "Old Town," Sol Lesser's production of Thornton Wilder's Pultizer Prize Play, with Frank Craven in his original role as narrator; Walter Wanger's film on Vincent Sheean's book "Personal History" now called "My Personal Life"; Hal Roach's "1,000,000 B.C.," to be made by D. W. Griffith; Edward Small's "Kit Carson," and Richard A. Rowland's production of Bess Streeter Aldrich's "Three Cheers for Miss Bishop," starring Barbara Stanwyck.

Radio City Completed

Completion of the last building in the New York City Rockefeller Center "Radio City" development, home of many motion picture companies and of Quigley Publications, was marked by special ceremonies this Wednesday, with a National Broadcasting Company Blue Network broadcast from 3:30 to 4:30 P. M., and addresses by David Sarnoff, president of the Radio Corporation of America and chairman of the board of NBC; John D. Rockefeller, Jr., who drove the final rivet; and Nelson Rockefeller, president of Rockefeller Center, Inc.

Stress on Quality Asked by Branch

Ray Branch, president of the Michigan Allied, this week advised exhibitors to stop worrying about the war's effect on the motion picture industry, about Governmental regulation, trade practices and all the other current scares, and to concentrate on obtaining quality pictures from the producers. The title of his warning was "Let's Do Something for the Box-office."

Mr. Branch said "quickies" were driving more people than ever away from theatres; that the combination of these and double, "and even triple" bills, were ruinous.

"Let's settle down to where we were a few years ago, and deliver something worth while to the public, and we won't be long in getting them back," he said.

Mr. Branch criticized double bills as an opportunity for the public to compare good with bad pictures.

He suggested that if production budgets must be cut, they should be cut by production of less pictures, and that if exhibitors must cut their rentals, they should cut them by running fewer pictures.

AMPA Forum on Latin America

American film companies must carefully regard Latin American character and in other ways revise their present methods of doing business below the Rio Grande, guest speakers were scheduled to tell members of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, at a special luncheon, Thursday, in New York City, arranged by the organization with the cooperation of Teatro al Dia, a Quigley Spanish-language publication.

"What Is Wrong With American Methods in Latin America" was to be the topic of the speakers, who were to be Nathan D. Golden, chief of the motion picture division of the United States Department of Commerce; Rene Borgia, South American writer, director of features and producer of newsreels on that continent, and a former scenarist with Columbia Pictures; Eddie Le Baron, president of Eduardo Le Baron Productions, producer of Spanish-language films; and Robert Socas, South American newspaper man and film critic.

"Birth of a Nation" Ruling

"The Birth of a Nation," David Wark Griffith's Civil War days epic, seems destined for temporary obscurity again, as the result of a victory won in New York Federal Court Tuesday by Thomas Dixon, author of "The Clansman" (from which the picture was made) and Epoch Producing Corporation. Federal Judge Coxe ruled that the two plaintiffs were correct in their legal attempt to restrain Treo Film Exchange of New York, Major Film Exchange, Stone Film Library, Marion T. Stone, and David Sohmer from exhibiting the film. During the lengthy trial, Skouras Theatres Corporation, Esquire Amusement Corporation, and Max Cohen, other defendants, agreed to settle. Epoch claims exclusive distribution rights.

CANADA WILL SIMPLIFY EXCHANGE; "BLACKOUT" PROBLEM IN MONTREAL

Circuits Restrict New Construction; Marquee Darkening in Test Undecided; Full Censorship Clamped on Broadcasting

Canada at war gives virtually all motion picture news of the Dominion these days a strong war flavor, as these developments attest:

Wartime regulations on international exchange are affecting all fields, importantly the motion picture business, with the resultant confusion bringing promises this week of simplification.

Canadian circuits have started curtailing new theatre building.

The list of motion picture military recruits and home service men is increasing.

Announcement by police of "blackouts" for Montreal brings a new problem to exhibitors whose marquee lights have not been darkened in 25 years, since the last World War.

Full wartime censorship was placed this week on Canadian broadcasting.

Canadian theatres are turning to war shows for the Dominion's regiments.

Distributors Awaiting Relief from Regulations

Because of the confusion in international currency transactions caused by its wartime regulations, the Foreign Exchange, Control Board of Canada has promised, in an official statement, to end protested "red tape" insofar as it affects the operations of Canadian companies which are subsidiary to parent firms in the United States and Great Britain.

This move, which is of direct importance to Canadian film distributors, is expected to bring considerable relief to overworked office staffs of film and other companies, but the board will still require monthly returns on foreign exchange involved in shipments between related companies and in payment of funds to home offices in another country. Foreign bank accounts are also to be permitted under license for those who already had such accounts for international trade.

War Stops Building

N. A. Taylor, general manager of Twentieth Century Theatres, Ontario circuit, with headquarters at Toronto, has announced a cessation in theatre building activities because of the war, following completion of the Community theatre at Trenton, Ont., which opened Wednesday.

Film Leaders in Service

Paul Nathanson, vice-president of Empire-Universal Films, Ltd., and son of N. L. Nathanson, president of Famous Players Canadian Corp., has joined the Canadian Officers Training Corps.

Gurston Allen, son of Jules Allen of Columbia Pictures of Canada, Ltd., and of Premier Theatres, Ltd., also has enlisted in the COTC. Other new enlistments of film men from the Toronto area include Gordon Snider of Associated Theatres, Ltd., who has joined the Royal Canadian Artillery; Andrew Sinclair of Empire-Universal, now with the Navy; Allan Ironside of Associated Screen News Ltd., who has joined the Royal Canadian Air Force, and Wm. McCall, projectionist at the Broadway Theatre, Toronto, who served with the Medical Corps during the World War for two years and now is signed up again in the Air Force.

WAR NEWS FROM PARIS

The French motion picture industry has formed a special union committee of workers to deal with the war situation. The aims of the new organization are:

The reopening of all theatres closed or taken over by the government;

A fight against limiting the number of theatres;

Organization of the film transport system;

Local censorship, and,

The French trade publication, La Cinematographie Francaise, in Paris, calls on non-mobilized theatre men and the wives of those who are under arms to reopen their theatres to the public and have continuous performances. Theatre operators are urged to keep their usual distributor connections and change their programs as often as transportation facilities make film available. It was said that many old pictures in the exchanges would be well received. Keeping theatres open was considered not only the first social obligation of film men but also the best commercial step possible.

Montreal Owners Look To "Blackouts"

by COLIN R. HAWORTH

in Montreal

With air raid precautions, including "blackouts," definitely on the winter schedule for Montreal, exhibitors are beginning to wonder just what effect the "lights out" orders will have on their business.

Police have announced that in the near future, probably in December, Montreal will be plunged into darkness in a trial blackout as precaution against any possibility of German bombing attacks.

The consensus is that it will make for a bad time. Crowds will probably desert the theatres on the trial night in hope of "seeing" the blackout, though advance warnings of police have ordered the public to avoid crowding the streets.

Another possibility is that police may order as many persons as possible to "spend the night at home" to avoid congestion of thoroughfares.

One worry that recently has beset exhibitors is the suggestion made by police that all illuminating advertising signs—and this may mean all theatre marquees—be darkened at night for the duration of the war. Police have explained that many of the overnight advertising signs of the downtown sector are controlled from their immediate location and that the owner, living in a suburb, would be unable to turn them off quickly enough in the event of air raid warning. To overcome this, Police Director Fernand Dufresne has expressed the opinion that they should not be left on. If this ruling, however, is not to apply to such signs as can be readily turned off, such as theatre marquees, the exhibitors might gain in advertising value by a lack of other signs.

Orders by police to persons "on the street when raid warning is sounded" are that they take shelter in the nearest open building, church or other edifice. Exhibitors see possibility of this bringing hundreds of non-paying "raid refugees" surging into theatres downtown in the rush.

Canada's Radio Censored

Censorship regulation and other wartime restrictions have been imposed upon the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation as a result of war conditions.

This announcement was made by L. W. Brockington, chairman of the BBC governors' board, following a meeting with Transport Minister Howe, at Montreal.

CBC governors will continue in control of broadcasting developments and radio policy, however, Mr. Brockington said.

Vancouver Starts Shows for Soldiers

by E. S. ROBERTS

in Vancouver

The Strand, Famous Players downtown house in Vancouver, was the first motion picture house to give over an evening for a regimental benefit concert in the current war.

The First Anti-Aircraft Regiment produced "Shellzapoppin'" for one night to a crowded house. It was complete with a 2,000-pound gunners' chorus in feminine attire, female impersonators, and all the trimmings of old wartime concert parties.

To Manager Norm Duncan of the Strand goes the credit of breaking all house records through promotion of "U-Boat 29." Playing at the Strand a month after the outbreak of the war there was more than ordinary interest.

Projectionist Ruling

Good news for the small theatres of British Columbia came when the provincial government removed the two-operators regulation. Now, theatres which are open to the public 40 hours per week or less are only required to employ one projectionist.

This is a new move in a long-standing controversy between theatre owners and projectionists. The previous regulation obtained by the operators' union required that two operators be employed in the projection booth at all times, wherever there were two or more machines.

Projectionists Union Local 348 will fight the new order, F. C. Graham, business manager, stated. It will mean that 118 union men will be put out of work with a loss of about $195,000 in wages each year, he stated. Mr. Graham claimed that the two-operator rule had reduced fires to a minimum, that with the present high-intensity lamps in use there is a definite fire hazard.

In Vancouver 23 suburban theatres operating evenings and holiday matinees are affected by the new order, as well as a large number of houses in smaller towns throughout the province.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Production Easier

In a week notable for discussion by the California press and citizenry of the "Ham and Egg—$30 Every Thursday" measure, due for public vote November 7th, the number of pictures actually shooting dropped to 31, the lowest since last April. Six started and 10 were finished, with 23 being prepared and 84 edited.

Paramount and Warners each started two. Paramount began "Buck Benny Rides Again" and "Safari," while Warners put in work "Virginia City" and "Dr. Ehrlich."

Columbia started an untitled Charles Starrett western and Hal Roach did likewise with a Laurel and Hardy film.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer finished "A Call on the President," based on the Damon Runyon story, and "Nick Carter."

RKO completed three: "That's Right, You're Wrong"; "Sunset," and "Mexican Spitfire." Warners had the same number, "King of the Lumberjacks," "Granny Get Your Gun," and "Fugitive from Justice."

Universal finished the Deanna Durbin picture, "First Love," Paramount completed "Opened by Mistake" and Republic wound up "Under Western Stars.'

Goldwyn Says "No"

Studios must cease attempting to publicize forthcoming productions by erroneously linking up names of Samuel Goldwyn's stars, said the Goldwyn publicity department this week, as follows:

"Reports that Vera Zorina, famed Broadway actress and dancer, would appear in further pictures for Warner Brothers were today labelled as without basis of fact by the Samuel Goldwyn studios.

"'Miss Zorina is under exclusive contract to Samuel Goldwyn and was loaned, on a one-picture deal, to Warner Brothers,'" the Goldwyn statement read. "'Mr. Goldwyn has made no other commitments of any kind with any other picture company for Miss Zorina's services and any reports to the contrary are completely without any basis of fact and are being issued without any authority.

"'A deal, however, is under negotiation, between Goldwyn and Dwight Wiman, producer of the Zorina hit, "I Married an Angel," for her appearance on Broadway this fall in a new show now being written by Rodgers and Hart in collaboration with George Abbott. This is the only Zorina deal which is now in the negotiation stage.'"

Earlier in the week, another Goldwyn star, Gary Cooper, lunched with Henry Hathaway, a friend of long standing, at the Paramount studio cafe. Someone, and it was laid unofficially on the publicity department, hinted to newspapermen that Cooper was being sought for "Triumph over Pain," which Hathaway will direct.

A checkup at the Goldwyn lot showed neither negotiations nor overtures were even indicated and that Cooper would be busy there for some time.

84 FILMS EDITING, THREE SHOW IN WEEK

Following a burst of previews since the declaration of the European war, the press showings of pictures dropped last week to three.

Correspondents could find no reason for the slackening. There is a backlog of something like 84 pictures now being edited.

Some of those finished are for April-May release, such as Paramount's "Dr. Cyclops," which will be released Easter Week.

Ready for Release

Seven RKO-Radio productions, representing an investment of $7,500,000, are ready for release, Ned E. Depinet, vice-president, said Tuesday on his return to New York from Hollywood. He emphasized "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," to be released December 29th; "Abe Lincoln in Ilinois," a March release, and Walt Disney's "Pinocchio," set for February.

"Allegheny Uprising" and Kay Kyser's "That's Right, You're Wrong" will have their world premieres on November 3rd and 15th respectively. The Towne-Baker production of the "Swiss Family Robinson," and "Vigil in the Night," starring Carole Lombard, Brian Aherne and Anne Shirley, round out the seven.

Four additional major pictures are ready for early camera work: Gregory La Cava's "Primrose Path," Orson Welles' "Heart of Darkness," Herbert Wilcox's "Irene," and Leo McCarey's "My Favorite Wife."

Name News

Clarence Brown, returning to the MGM lot after having directed "The Rains Came" for Twentieth Century-Fox, will direct Spencer Tracy for the first time in the forthcoming "Edison, the Man."

IN THE BRITISH STUDIOS

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Wartime Setting

The first British picture with a wartime setting to be shown since the War began is "An Englishman's Home," an Aldwych production which has started a West End run at the London Pavilion.

Made at Denham at a cost of £100,000 ($400,000), the film is a screen adaptation, in modernized form, of the Du Maurier play which was such a pronounced success on the English stage in 1911, but in Berlin was hissed off the stage!

The picture deals with an invasion of Britain by an enemy power and has a strong air war flavour.

In making the picture, which was directed by Albert de Courville, Aldwych had the collaboration of the Air Ministry who put at their disposal flights of Blenheim and Wellington bombers, Spitfires, Bombays.

The cast is headed by Edmund Gwenn and Mary Maguire, with Geoffrey Toone, Paul von Hernried and Richard Ainley in the leading roles.

Next!

With the completion of "Old Mother Riley Joins Up" in which that spirited Dame performs her comedy routine against an ARP background, British National is formulating plans for the continuance of its production program, and announce that a start will be made immediately on another film.

Among future pictures scheduled by John Corfield is another Syd Walker production, and a musical.

Cause of Empire Films

Some indication of the course British production will follow, or at least some part of it, is given in a statement made in the House of Commons recently by Sir Edward Greig, Parliamentary Secretary to the Ministry of Information.

Speaking for the Ministry, Sir Edward said, arrangements are in contemplation for the production of films, including documentaries. He made it clear that the Government would be quite prepared to purchase films which had a propaganda flavour.

The first film to be made on this principle is Alexander Korda's "The Lion Has Wings" which, according to the spokesman of the Ministry of Information, was made at Korda's own expense without subsidy, under terms which give the Government complete control over its production and distribution. The statement of cost is subject to Government audit, and the Government has the option of purchasing all rights at an agreed figure, or to share equally in any profits without liability for losses, or to disclaim financial concern in the film.

Sir Edward also said that in regard to other films proposed, the details of the terms in each case would vary with the nature of the production concerned, but his department was willing to consider offers from other companies to produce films on the same lines as Korda.

BRITISH TOMMY IS HERO OF FILM

The British Tommy, the citizen soldier, once called "Tommy Atkins", is the subject of a saga produced by G. T. Cummins, editor-in-chief of British Paramount News. The film is called " 'Arf a Mo' Hitler".

The production, which boasts no propaganda speeches, posed pictures, nor the glorification of war aims sets out to show the simple greatness of the Berts, Jims and Alfs of Britain, whose dogged heroism triumphed in 1914-18 and who today offer the same bulldog spirit in the struggle against Hitlerism.

Pushing Program

With production in full swing on "Band Waggon," the Arthur Askey comedy for distribution by General Film Distributors, and location shots already taken in wartime London, Gainsborough plan to continue its production program at Shepherds Bush. Films will be made by the company for release by GFD and 20th Century-Fox, for both of which organizations they have produced films in the recent past.

Among four pictures scheduled for early production is a new film version of "Charley's Aunt," in which radio comedian Arthur Askey, star of "Band Waggon," will again star. He will be supported by Moore Marriott and Graham Moffatt, erstwhile stooges of the Will Hay team. "Report on a Fugitive," in which Margaret Lockwood and Michael Redgrave will star, is also scheduled. This quartette will be completed by a Will Fyffe picture and one for the "Crazy Gang." These films will be produced by Maurice Ostrer and Edward Black.

Another Character

Moore Marriott, noted stooge of Will Hay's comedies, and aged partner of the team, whose roles have ranged from Poona Majors to the ancient and decrepit Harbottle, has added one more character to his gallery of film creations.

In "Band Waggon," screen version of the radio feature in which Arthur Askey stars, he plays the role of a medieval ghost.

Stars in Wartime

The grim reality of international war and the complexity of the national blackout have not deterred film producer Michael Balcon from pursuing his role of discovering new stars. In Rachel Thomas, now playing a leading role in the Ealing production, "David Goliath," he claims that he has a striking new personality. She plays the role of a Welsh miner's wife, and studio publicists say that "she has made everybody in the studio her fans," including Paul Robeson, who considers her "one of the finest actresses he has seen."

Mr. Balcon, meanwhile, plans to dramatize in film form an aspect of Britain's wartime life and conditions, the evacuation of children and aged from the vulnerable areas. He is to make a film inspired by evacuation and already titled "When the Children Came." It will be a full length comedy and its locale will be a village in a reception area. The chief character will be a wealthy spinster who opposes the infant invasion but finds in it the happiness which, all her life, has eluded her.

Acquires Rights

Mario Zampi, produced for Paramount British and one of those production stalwarts who has protested that he will continue making films, come what may, has acquired the rights of a new story, "Business as Usual," by A. de Grunwald. The picture, which has an Empire and wartime background, is one of the quartet which Zampi has announced he will make at a total budget of £150,000 ($600,000).

Comedy for Morale

Believing that the most worthy contribution a film producer can make towards upholding the public morale is "a continuous barrage of film fun as an antidote to the blackout blues," F. W. Baker, of Butcher's Film Service, plans to start work immediately upon a new comedy "Jail Birds." Albert Burdon will star.

The film is based upon a famous British vaudeville sketch sponsored by oldtime impresario Fred Karno, and will be greatly knockabout.

Says producer Baker, "My instructions have gone out to director Oswald Mitchell that he and his company of 'Jail Birds' are to parade complete with gas-masks and take up allotted positions, in a few days time, in a studio somewhere in England."

Mr. Baker claims that his firm had a consistent production policy they carried out from 1914 to 1918, and are still in business today.

Court Vacates Grand National Receiver Order

The involuntary petition in bankruptcy filed last week by three creditors against Grand National Pictures, Inc., and the order appointing Simon H. Rifkin as receiver of the corporation were vacated Friday by Samuel Mandelbaum, federal judge, in New York district court.

Calls Petition Insufficient

The dismissal, granted from the bench, was made after Judge Mandelbaum ruled that the petition was insufficient, vague and indefinite in its charges against the company. In addition the court said that proceedings and the appointment of a receiver were "unnecessary" in view of the loan of $450,000 granted to Grand National last week by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

The RFC loan is expected to be consummated shortly and further finances for production are expected from Felt and Company and due to follow immediately, E. W. Hammons, president, said this week.

A meeting of creditors, called in New York this week by Hap Hadley, one of the three creditors who filed the involuntary petition in bankruptcy against the company, for the purpose of forming a creditors' committee, disbanded voluntarily when Saul E. Rogers, Grand National attorney, explained that the RFC loan would insure the clearing of indebtedness.

Creditors Meet

A meeting of Grand National creditors was held Tuesday in the projection room of the Grand National Studio in Los Angeles by Loyd Wright, trustee of Grand National Films, Inc., and of Grand National Studios, Inc.

In notifying creditors of the meeting Mr. Wright reviewed the position of the company since October 1, 1938 when pursuant to court order he sold all the assets, except cash, of Grand National Films, Inc., and Grand Nation Studios, Inc., to Grand National Pictures, Inc., a New York Corporation. He wrote:

"Since the new company commenced operations various plans have been proposed for the purpose of properly financing Grand National and independent producers who might furnish pictures to it for distribution. To date none of these plans have materialized."

The meeting was called for a general discussion by creditors and the trustee.

Grand National, Ltd., through Maurice Wilson, has written to the British Board of Trade, offering to place both the Twickenham and Highbury studios, at the disposal of American distributors for the production of pictures to meet the quota.

The letter said that Grand National was prepared to give financial assistance to a number of independent production units with which it has made an arrangement to produce a substantial number of pictures in the coming year. Grand National can do this, the letter continues, as it handles very few foreign films.

Alliance Franchise Deals

Budd Rogers, vice-president and general manager of Alliance Films Corporation, has signed two new franchise deals for the distribution of the 12 feature films on the Alliance program for 1939-'40. Special attractions will handle the product in the Chicago and St. Louis territories and B. W. Silver of Colonial Pictures, Ltd., whose headquarters are in Toronto, will release the 12 pictures in the Dominion of Canada, Newfoundland and the Maritime Provinces.

"From the Beginning" Campaign Scores for Virginia Showman

Profitable experience with a policy of urging the customers to see pictures from the beginning is recorded in a letter from Elmore D. Heins of National Theatre Corporation in Roanoke, Va. Mr. Heins is general manager over four houses, the American, Roanoke, Park and Rialto. The American, completed in 1928, cost a million and a half, and rates highly as an institution for its region.

Mr. Heins, with twenty-five years of experience behind him, operates on policies calculated to create and maintain the motion picture habit among his patrons. That includes newspaper copy, placed exactly and always where Roanoke expects to find it, and the use of his own screens for the building of policy patterns and goodwill. In the course of a letter, responding to an inquiry from THE HERALD, he writes:

"That feature pictures should be seen from their beginning, does not require a college education, and only ordinary intelligence to see the importance of this.

"Millions are spent on our pictures, and goodness only knows how much entertainment is lost, when these costly productions, and most of them interesting and entertaining, are not seen from their incipiency.

"The producers have no idea how much they have lost in the past by not advocating and developing a movement encouraging the suggestion that the feature pictures be seen from their start. The Motion Pictures Are Your Best Entertainment was a waste of money. It should have been spent for the reason that we are now discussing. Every feature should have a slogan of some kind, suggesting the reason why the picture should be seen from its beginning, and, once started, it should be kept up. The effort should never cease.

"Some will say that our business is one of continuous showing, which is all true, but those who just want to drop in any time, they can still do so, and this constructive policy, which I am not the only one that advocates, certainly will be in my opinion, one of the finest things that our business has ever attempted.

"In the summer I ordered a trailer which read:

> We suggest that in order to enjoy the full benefits of the entertainment offered by the features shown in this Theatre, that you make an effort to see them from the beginning. Phone 4323 for starting times.

"A trailer covering the above was then shown in all four of our theatres, and the phone calls immediately jumped to such an extent, that we next had the telephone company check our calls with a meter, which indicates the number of calls that were not completed, etc., and the calls were so many, and the incompletion so great, that it was necessary for us to install a trunk line system, and within a few days our phone number became 8171, but the additional phone that would ring was 8172, in the event that 8171 was busy. The telephone company is also reserving numbers 8173-74-75, as we confidently expect to need five telephones. The telephone company advise us that our phone 4323 is the busiest telephone in Roanoke.

"The following order was placed later for four new sound trailers, and when these trailers are shown, we will have a greatly increased number of calls, as this is the power of suggestion.

> WE HAVE A NEW TELEPHONE NUMBER
> In order to better serve our patrons, we have added additional telephone lines. JUST DIAL > and you will get one of our telephone connections.
> 8171
> You will enjoy the pictures more by seeing them when they begin. You will be cheerfully given the starting times of feature pictures shown at the Park, American, Roanoke or Rialto Theatres, by dialing our trunk line number—

"On the back page of our local papers, we have for over twenty years, without missing a single issue, run our theatre programs as indicated by the enclosed clipping. If you pass anyone on the street, who has a newspaper, and will ask him the question, what picture is being shown at the American Theatre, you will find that ninety-nine times out of a hundred he will turn to the back page immediately and tell you. This is where consistency has paid. The other three theatres located here, which we do not operate, are also advertised on this same page at the bottom of the page, and you will note that the paper has also taken advantage of our position by placing their radio program alongside it, which also makes our advertising more effective.

"I am convinced that if the trade papers would pave the way in a crusading manner, and encourage the film companies to take some action covering this suggestion, that our industry would be given an impetus."

Witt Named Standard Pictures Ad Director

George Laganas, president of Standard Pictures Distributing Company of New York City announced on Tuesday the appointment of Peter Witt as director of advertising, publicity and exploitation. Mr. Witt will also be in charge of procuring product for distribution from this country and abroad.

The new appointee was formerly personal European representative of Samuel Goldwyn in London.

De Bra Says Resentment Bars Commercial Films

Theatre patrons resent advertising films on the screen because they have paid for entertainment, Arthur De Bra, of the community service department of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, told a luncheon meeting of the National Association of Accredited Publicity Men, in New York, on Tuesday. Mr. De Bra cited this resentment as one of the many reasons why so few of the many commercial films produced each year reach theatre screens.

FOX BEATS 'DRUMS' ALONG MOHAWK, RKO TAKES 'ALLEGHENY' TO THE HILLS

Two Location Premieres Continue Trend Begun Last Season; Local Populace Supplies Parades and Proclamations

The blazing of exploitation trails for new Hollywood product from the studio to the exhibitor and his customers through bright arc-light, top-hat-and-ermine "world premieres" on Broadway and Hollywood Boulevard, has been discontinued. There hasn't been a single "big ballyhoo" opening on either of the country's two main theatre thoroughfares this season, for the first time in memory.

Instead, the distributors are leaning more and more to "world premieres" in the field, in the locale of either story, star's birthday or whatever excuse might be identified with the field spot selected, witness Warner Brothers' "Dodge City" premiere at Dodge City, Kansas; Paramount's "Union Pacific," at Omaha, birthplace of that western railroad; Jack Benny's "Man About Town," shown at Benny's home town, Waukegan, Illinois, and, more recently, Columbia's "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," shown within the shadow of the Halls of Congress.

This week, and in the days following shortly thereafter, Twentieth Century-Fox again will turn to the new method of attracting mass attention for new product with a single stroke from the field through radio, press and parades, taking its new Darryl Zanuck production of "Drums Along the Mohawk" into the five principal towns in the Mohawk Valley of New York.

On Friday, RKO was to screen "Allegheny Uprising" in Pittsburgh, where the townsfolk are celebrating the 100th anniversary of the incorporation of Allegheny.

RKO will go back to the field again on November 15th, to Rocky Mount, N. C., to "unveil" its first Kay Kyser musical feature, "That's Right, You're Wrong," in the town Bandleader Kyser calls home.

Warners, on Wednesday, held a "world premiere," for "Elizabeth and Essex," in Philadelphia. Probable reason for selecting that place for the first public showing of the historical play of early England is its large concentration of Warner theatres. Jack L. Warner and son from Hollywood, Major Albert Warner, Gradwell Sears, S. Charles Einfeld and Joseph Bernhard were on hand. The home office said Wednesday night that the first day's gross at the Boyd theatre, in Philadelphia, was $4,500, over the house record by $400.

Warners this week also arranged for seven "top" nationwide radio broadcasts to "ballyhoo" their "Roaring Twenties" with James Cagney and Priscilla Lane.

Next to set an advance date for the field was Paramount, which will take its "Seventeen" to Indianapolis in January, to the home of Booth Tarkington, author of the play.

Two Days of "Mohawk" Celebration

Two days of Mohawk Valley celebration, culminating in Thursday's premiere of "Drums Along the Mohawk," got under way Wednesday when Mayor John Boyd Thacher met Joan Davis, Arleen Whalen, Lynn Bari and Arthur Shields, of the cast, at the Albany railroad station, as they arrived.

"OZ" BALLYHOO FOR SOUTH AMERICA

M-G-M's "The Wizard of Oz" will be introduced to South America by way of special half-hour radio programs in Spanish and Portuguese, starting at 8:00 P. M. (E.S.T.), November 16th, from General Electric's shortwave stations in Schenectady, N. Y. The film will open the following day in Buenos Aires and Rio de Janeiro.

Station WGEO, which will carry the Spanish program, is beamed on Buenos Aires. WGEA will carry the Portuguese program, beamed on Rio.

Transcriptions of Judy Garland's songs and an account of the casting and production are to be included.

Dinner Precedes Showings

Wednesday night Mayor Thacher and Walter T. Brown, secretary to Governor Herbert H. Lehman, were the principal speakers at the Twentieth Century-Fox dinner at the De Witt Clinton Hotel.

Mayors of Albany, Schenectady, Gloversville, Amsterdam, Utica, Little Falls, Ilion and Herkimer issued proclamations making the premiere date "Drums Along the Mohawk Day."

Thursday morning, State Superintendent of Police John A. Warner provided a day-long state trooper escort for the autos which carried the 20th Century-Fox players, exploitation men and entourage, with the first celebration scheduled for Gloversville, where the Mayors of Little Falls, Herkimer, Ilion and Gloversville met the parade at the city line with band, etc. Two parties were held in Gloversville, a luncheon and a cocktail, with descendants of the original Mohawk Valley settlers on hand and the four cast members receiving presents of gloves. First premiere was at Schine's Glove, with a cocktail party following in the Schine Circuit home office.

Next stop was at Amsterdam, where the Chamber of Commerce gave a dinner, with a parade of floats, teams of oxen, covered wagons, etc. The stars also appeared at the Rialto, in Amsterdam.

Schenectady, at Fabian's Proctor theatre and special General Electric fire works, followed with the windup at Fabian's Palace, Albany later.

On the side, Charles C. Gordon, who operates the Olympic, at Utica, feted Jane Withers and Walter D. Edmonds, author of the story. The Olympic had sold reserved seats at $2.50 top. A tea was given by historical societies at Baker's Conservatory, with reserved seat ticket holders on hand and a tie-up with Station WIBX, Utica, arranged. Mayor Vincent Corrou of Utica was master of ceremonies on a tour of the city.

Indians in warpaint, from the Watertown reservation, also took part in the Gloversville, Amsterdam and Schenectady, while the lone Albany "red men" included a Seneca chief's son and half dozen braves from the tribe.

In Albany, Station WOKO set up a half-hour broadcast at the Palace theatre with Governor Lehman, Mayor Thacher and the stars appearing before the microphone.

Electric light poles along Pearl Street and State Street, Albany, to the DeWitt Clinton hotel were decorated with flags and shields. All stores within 14 blocks of the theatre were decorated with flags and window displays. A special local radio broadcast brought local officials and descendants of some of the original settlers of the Valley.

Fox home office exploitation men in the territory for the purpose were Rodney Bush and Louis Davidson, who, together with Thomas H. Bailey, northeastern division manager, from Boston, Charles E. McCarthy, chief from New York, and others were on hand for all "premieres."

Newspapers throughout the area carried extra columns of copy concerning the background of the picture, how it was made, location difficulties, etc.

M. N. Grassgreen, Fox manager, screened the picture in Albany Tuesday for local newspapermen and area exhibitors.

The Albany premiere was arranged in cooperation with Lou Golding, division manager of the Fabian Circuit, and Alex Sayles, of the Palace.

During the height of the Mohawk Valley observations, Kate Smith was giving a nation-wide CBS broadcast, Thursday evening, as timed by Fox to give maximum exploitation introduction for the 45 day-and-date engagements scheduled for the picture next Friday, national release date. Seventy-eight stations were to carry the program.

Fox's national exploitation campaign for the picture will include 3,000 billboards in 20 cities throughout the United States and special assist advertising material to be used in 45 cities.

The Kate Smith program was transferred from New York to Hollywood for the special "Drums" broadcast, the first time that a complete radio show has been moved that far to broadcast a motion picture.

In addition to the broadcast, there were announcements on four daily programs which Kate Smith has and on other national programs controlled by Young and Rubicam, the advertising agents for Kate Smith's sponsors. Fox claims the picture had the biggest radio "plug" any Fox picture has had since "Alexander's Ragtime Band."

Pittsburgh Sees RKO's "Allegheny"

The steel center of Pittsburgh on Friday held its first "world premiere"—that of RKO Radio's "Allegheny Uprising," at Loew's Penn Theatre, at $2.50 top admission.

More than 50,000 turned out Friday for the climaxing events of the three-day civic celebration, held as the high spot of the 100th anniversary of the incorporation of the City of Allegheny, now Pittsburgh's North Side.

Mayor Cornelius D. Scully, head of the Allegheny Centennial Committee of One Hundred, which sponsored the observance, led the multifold delegations of civic, socialite, professional and patriotic groups and dignitaries participating.

They were joined by a retinue of movie "bigwigs" from New York and Hollywood, including Producer P. J. Wolfson; S. Barret McCormick, RKO publicity and advertising chief; Neil H. Swanson, author of "The First Rebel," upon which the film was based, and Claire Trevor, its star.

The premiere was highlighted by a coast-to-coast broadcast from the theatre stage and a parade-pageant.

Five stations broadcast from the stage over NBC's blue network, contributing nearly ten hours of time to the fete.

Miss Trevor topped a cast which presented a sketch from "Allegheny Uprising" on the air. Mayor Scully and Maurice Spitalny's NBC orchestra rounded out the air radio show.

A unique broadcast over the same station was the radioing of a press interview from the star's suite at the local Hotel William Penn. Other stations aided with interviews, feature broadcasts, advance "plugs" and special broadcasts, over WJAS, WCAE, WWSW and KQV.

More than 1,000 marchers, ten bands and dozens of floats, covered wagons, ox-carts and period exhibits made up a 14-block-long parade to the theatre Friday afternoon. Pathe newsreel covered this, the premiere and other celebration phases. One hundred policemen along the line of march wore backwoods' coonskin caps. They later acted as "bodyguard" for Miss Trevor.

Mayor Scully, Miss Trevor and local and visiting celebrities reviewed flag raising ceremonies from special stands constructed at the theatre.

Grand Marshal of the parade was Col. George E. A. Fairley, Pittsburgh Director of Public Safety.

The festivities began Thursday morning with the arrival at Pennsylavnia Station of the star and her party. A full day of stunts, interviews, broadcast and other activities followed.

Miss Trevor participated in the parade and was guest of honor at a tea tendered by the heads of Pittsburgh women's organizations, also taking part in several press stunts previously arranged.

Following the premiere, she was guest at a dinner attended by 700 leading citizens in the Chatterbos Room of the Hotel William Penn.

Miss Trevor also dedicated KDKA's new transmitting unit in suburban Allison Park and was honored at a breakfast for 125 advertising men invited by the station for the event. Among those attending was Major Lennox Lohr, president of NBC.

Incident to the dedication, Miss Trevor placed a microfilm copy of the picture's script in the KDKA "Time Capsule," in Allison Park.

Pittsburgh's leading department stores and all five-and-ten emporiums cooperated in the premiere program. Window displays and large scale advertising tie-ins were arranged by them.

The stores participating included Rosenbaum Co., Boggs & Buhl, Kaufmann's, Joseph Horne Co., Meyer Jonasson, Gimbel Brothers, Frank and Seder, Sears & Roebuck and Spear's.

Local theatre people who directed the campaign were Harry Kalmine, Warner zone manager; Charles E. Kurtzman, manager of Loew's Penn; Mike Cullen, Loew's division manager; C. J. Latta, assistant to Mr. Kalmine; Joseph Feldman, advertising and publicity head of Pittsburgh's Warner office, and his assistant, James Totman. Those representing RKO, under the direction of Mr. McCormick, were Charles Levy, Louis J. Allemann and Carl Rigrod.

RKO's Second Field Show Next Week

Kay Kyser, radio swingster, called North Carolina's "No. 1 Boy," from Rocky Mount, will be welcomed on November 15th with a big homecoming celebration. Governors of North and South Carolina and Virginia have been invited to attend, with other notables. The occasion will be accented in two Rocky Mount movie houses with the "world premiere" of "That's Right, You're Wrong," with personal appearances by the star and his regular weekly coast-to-coast radio broadcast at both places.

"BABY" LE ROY WILL MAKE A "COMEBACK"

"Baby" LeRoy, the baby star of a few years back, reenters the films as the star of Paramount's "The Biscuit Editor", that company announced last week.

It was revealed, also, that Paramount has kept the child on its payroll, for just such an eventuality—his reemergence as a juvenile instead of a baby star.

Rocky Mount townfolk will participate with an old-fashioned dance in one of the planter's warehouses. Ten thousand persons are expected to dance to the Kyser band strains.

Bands from Duke University, North Carolina University, Wake Forest, the local high school, Legion post and military units will head the parade.

The Center and Carolina theatres of the Kincey Circuit will show "That's Right, You're Wrong," with time out for the parade and an early closing for the homecoming dance to be broadcast.

Kyser will arrive at Rocky Mount on the morning of the 15th where after greetings from home town folks and notables from the district he will be driven with his mother, Mrs. P. B. Kyser, in the "flivver" he owned as a boy to his home on Sunset Avenue. Throughout the day and night, Kay will be honored at various functions. He with other members of the cast will make personal appearances at the twin-theatre premiere.

H. S. Orr, manager of the Center theatre and chairman of the affair, reports the cooperation of 20 local committees, with Mayor J. Q. Robinson the honorary chairman.

Following this, Kyser's first film musical will open in 250 theatres throughout the country over the Thanksgiving holiday. National release is November 24th.

"Elizabeth and Essex" Opens in Philadelphia

For the "world premiere" of Warner Brothers' "The Private Lives of Elizabeth and Essex," starring Bette Davis and Errol Flynn, which took place Wednesday night at the Boyd theatre, Philadelphia, a series of screenings were held for executives of the Motion Picture Forum and the Motion Picture Committee of the Federation of Women's Clubs as well as for the Superintendant of the Department of Visual Education, principals of schools and teachers, radio commentators and newspaper writers, and motion picture critics.

On the radio, spot announcements were taken on seven stations a week in advance of opening, and an "inquiring reporter" stunt was worked in front of theatres with the reporter interviewing passers-by on the coming premiere.

Philadelphia "fathers" decorated Chestnut Street from 18th to 20th with flags, banners and shields. On the Mastbaum theatre, a banner was hung announcing the premiere.

Twenty-thousand score cards carrying theatre copy on the reverse side were distributed at the Temple-Bucknell football game, and an additional 20,000 were given out at the Penn-North Carolina game. Menus of restaurants carried announcement copy. 350 window cards were posted, while 100 small window cards went to schools, 10,000 post cards were mailed to Women's Clubs. 20x30 library display card was prepared for all libraries in the city showing the historical aspects and carrying theatre copy. 10,000 heralds were sent to the colleges of Bryn Mawr, Haverford, Beaver, LaSalle, Temple, Rosemont, Swarthmore, Drexel, and the University of Penn.

Following its bow in Philadelphia, "Elizabeth and Essex" will have simultaneous openings in 200 key situations during its week of national distribution, November 11th. These will be preceded by special advance campaigns planned under the supervision of Charles Einfeld, advertising and publicity director, who is in New York now for the purpose.

Warners Set Seven Cagney Broadcasts

A record number of coast-to-coast radio broadcasts for a single picture is claimed by Warners who announce air exploitation for "The Roaring Twenties" over seven national programs during the next ten days. These include interviews, dramatizations of the script and song "plugs" of the tunes featured in the film. Among the programs to ballyhoo the Cagney-Lane feature, are:

"Strange as It Seems," CBS hookup, Thursday evening; Bing Crosby's show, NBC network, featuring an interview with Mark Hellinger, associate producer and author of the picture, Thursday; Kate Smith Hour, CBS hookup, November 10th, this in addition to spot "plugs" over Miss Smith's ten daytime national broadcasts during the same week; John Messner, NBC net work, will present a cavalcade of "The Roaring Twenties" songs; Lux Radio Hour, CBS network, will feature an interview with Mark Hellinger; John Gambling and "His Gamboliers," over MGS hookup, will present two broadcasts on successive mornings this week; and Richard Himber, NBC hookup.

United Artists Plan Advance Drives

Monroe Greenthal, United Artists' director of exploitation, is in Hollywood conferring with producers and publicity officials to form plans for an extensive advance exploitation campaign on new films.

Campaigns for pictures in early stages of preparation are being mapped as well as current sales promotion ideas on pictures finished or in work.

Mr. Greethal's stay in Hollywood is indefinite.

11th Annual Amateur Film Show April 5

The 11th annual international show of amateur motion pictures will be held April 5th, at the Barbizon Plaza theatre, New York, on April 8th at the Newark Art Club and on April 14th at Dartmouth College, according to announcement of Duncan MacD. Little.

All films entered must be received at 33 West 67th St., N. Y., not later than March 1st, 1940. All films must be 16mm and may be black and white or colored, silent or sound (on film or scored with records). If scored with records, detailed cue sheets, and if possible appropriate records, should accompany the film. It is requested that films run between 8 and 15 minutes.

"BLUE SKY" COMMISSIONS, STUDIO-AGENT PARTNERSHIPS RULED OUT

Actors Win Strict Regulation of Managers When Board Ratifies Agreement; Fees Limited to 10 Per Cent

Hollywood's actors, after years of strenuous battling, succeeded Monday in effecting a strict regulation of agents and managers of stars and players, and in limiting agents' commissions to ten per cent, thereby stopping the tactics of some agents over two decades in charging actors whatever commission they thought the traffic would bear—15 per cent, 20 per cent, even more.

The commission now allowed agents in motion pictures is the lowest in any theatrical field, and the regulations governing their conduct toward and relations with player clients are the strictest, far stricter, for example, than the stipulations set forth by Actors Equity for "approved managers" operating in the legitimate theatre.

Seventy-nine pages of "dos" and "don'ts" for agent-managers and for talent comprise the new "law and order" which will govern their relations to players.

Board Ratifies Agreement

The board of directors of the Artists-Managers Guild, comprised of talent agents and managers, in a meeting ending in the wee sma' hours of Tuesday morning, ratified the agreement for the franchising of agents, as demanded by the Screen Actors Guild. The Actors Guild board has already approved the pact.

Directors of the talent-managers, following the Tuesday session, issued this statement: "It is the consensus of opinion that the agreement is going to work to the advantage of all parties concerned and the fact that a unanimous vote was given covering the ratifications of the agreement is an indication unto itself as to how the full membership feels regarding same."

The pact, which runs to Dec. 31, 1943, not only limits commissions of agents to ten per cent, but also provides for arbitration of all disputes between the agent and the client and establishes rigid control of the entire agency situation involving the disciplining and fining of violators, both agents and actors.

Divorced from Agencies

One of the contract's principal features is the prohibition of participation in a talent agency by any person engaged in the production, distribution or exhibition of motion pictures. Such participation down through the years has brought many conflicts over certain talent agencies where the retention of that agency was reported to be necessary in order to gain employment in the studio of the participating producer or studio executive.

Under terms of the agreement the Actors Guild will immediately upon application grant franchises to agents now members of the Artists-Managers Guild, and the latter group agrees not to adopt a "closed shop" for managerial endeavors.

Members of the Actors Guild are barred from using agents not franchised by the Guild but the measure is not retroactive from September 18, 1938.

Other provisions of the agreement include:

Nothing in the pact shall be construed to abridge or limit any rights, powers, or duties which state or federal authorities have or may have.

The joint consent of the Actors Guild and the Artists Managers Guild is needed for any amendments.

FILM EXPORTS SHOW INCREASE

September exports of photographic and projection goods from the United Artists show an increase over the same month last year, according to the report of the Department of Commerce, Washington. Exports in this field increased $122,000 over the figure for September, 1938, which was $1,286,000. In the same month of this year the figure was $1,408,000.

The first nine months of this year, however, shows a decline of $801,000 over the total of the same period last year. Up to the end of September the total figure for 1939 was $14,114,000 against $14,915,000 for 1938.

The Actors Guild may grant waivers to agents excusing compliance with terms of the basic contract.

The period from October 15th to December 1, 1939, is fixed as the application period.

The Actors Guild must notify the Artists-Managers Guild of its refusal to grant franchises to certain agent applicants who shall have the privilege of arbitration on eligibility qualifications.

Minors' Position

If a minor attempts to disaffirm an agency contract by reason of the fact the minor signed during the minor's minority, the Actors Guild agrees to consider such conduct on the part of the minor as conduct unbecoming a Guild member and is subject to penalties and discipline.

The Screen Actors Guild will negotiate with the Artists-Managers Guild any time after July 1, 1942, with reference to extending the term of the agreement or of making a new one.

The Screen Actors Guild agrees not to pass any rule prior to September 18, 1938, forbidding an actor to pay a maximum commission less than ten per cent of the member's earnings.

If lower maximum commissions are sought by the Actors Guild, and the Artists-Managers Guild protests, the matter is then up to arbiters who, before granting the Screen Actors Guild terms, first, must find: That the level of salaries in the film industry is materially lower than the level for the period from September 1, 1938, to September 1, 1939; that customary services rendered by agents for film actors materially is less than rendered in the same period, or that the relative standing of the film industry as a branch of the entertainment world has suffered materially so as to reduce the motion picture industry to a position of substantially less importance than it occupied in the entertainment world during the aforementioned period.

No agent shall be required to join the Artists-Managers Guild as a condition to receiving a franchise.

The actor or agent has the right to terminate the contract if the actor fails to receive 18 days pay for work performed in the preceding 120 days.

Agency contracts are not assignable by either party.

No member of the Screen Actors Guild may engage the use of the deal through any agent in the film business either partially or exclusively unless such an agent has a franchise from the Guild. Contracts entered into from and after September 18, 1938, are void unless such a franchise can be secured by the agent under this agreement.

Agents' assistants or sub-agents also must have a franchise from the Screen Actors Guild.

Agents agree to use all reasonable efforts to assist the actor in procuring employment for services of the actor as an actor in the film business, to counsel and advise the actor in matters which concern the professional interest of the actor, be truthful in statements to the actor, and not to engage in dishonest or fraudulent practices.

Agents or aides must be available at all reasonable times, and must not share offices and telephones with other agents or aids without the Screen Actors Guild's approval.

No Gratuities

No agent shall receive, directly or indirectly, any remuneration, consideration, gift, gratuity or other thing of value from any producer of motion pictures or any executive (major or minor) of any producer of motion pictures except such gifts as may be customary under ordinary social usages.

Agents, however, may collect commissions when representing as an agent an executive or other employee producer or when representing a producer as his agent.

Agents may collect commissions from the producer for services in providing for the loaning out of the services of the actor provided the actor is under contract to the agent.

No agent shall be entitled to receive commissions based on compensation received by the actor for services to be performed by the actor in any territory in which the agent does not maintain an office capable of servicing the actor.

Agents and sub-agents are subject to a fine not exceeding $5,000, or to suspension or revocation of franchise for the following:

Employment of any person as sub-agent who does not hold the proper franchise; failure to pay over to the actor all moneys belonging to the actor; sharing of commissions, fees, earnings, or proceeds in violation of these regulations; engaging in or being interested in production, distribution, or exhibition of motion pictures; willful and intentional failure to comply with the terms of an award by arbitration tribunal; theft, embezzlement, misappropriation of funds, forgery, fraud, or dishonest conduct; or for charging or contracting to charge in excess of ten per cent commissions.

Double Commissions Barred

Paying of "double commissions," i.e. contracting to pay total commissions amounting to more than ten per cent to two or more agencies, is banned.

Actors must be given full data concerning the ownership of the agency.

If the agency has an interest in exhibition, production, or distribution of films, the Screen Actors Guild may object if it believes that such activity is adverse to actor clients.

If the agent is barred from a studio, he may elect to name another agent.

Franchise fees range from $50 to $2,500, annually, depending upon the agency's gross receipts.

Applications for agents and sub-agents bear the words: "Applicant has never been convicted of crime, involving embezzlement, theft, fraud, forgery, or dishonest conduct. If the foregoing is incorrect, applicant shall strike it out and attach to this application a statement giving all of the details with reference to any such conviction."

Critic Turned Exhibitor Tests Theatre Problems

Finds Public Reaction Best Standard for Criticism

by JULIAN B. TUTHILL

Theatre Editor,
Hartford Daily Times

WHEN a movie critic turns exhibitor he is likely to find that "selling" pictures on a printed page and at the box office demand two different techniques.

If he is a critic who writes to inform his readers rather than to entertain himself, he will find his viewpoints most often justified in the night's grosses . . . for movie audiences are not sophisticated nor are they great respectors of artistic achievement.

Stars rather than stories are more important at the box office; stories rather than stars are often most important in a critic's reaction.

When I took time out this summer to establish a summer picture theater at one of the Connecticut shore resorts, I quite naturally booked in some of the pictures that I had enjoyed as a critic. One of them in particular, was most disappointing at the box office. It was RKO's "A Man to Remember." Those who came, liked it and justified my own enthusiasm . . . but there weren't enough stars in it, and not enough people came. The same thing occurred several times during the first month in which I operated Cinema City.

Associated with me I had two partners known as the Conrose Artists. They are promoters of dance bands and the Palomar Roller Skating Rink in Hartford. They knew nothing about motion pictures.

After a month of heavy losses, they took over the buying of pictures. Contracts which I had signed were broken, we wept across the desks of the New Haven film exchanges, pictures were bought at a figure far below what I had been told was the absolute minimum, and Cinema City started to make money. Not a great deal of money . . . not enough, even, to make up the previous losses before the end of the season. A number of relatively unimportant pictures with good "names" in the cast drew respectable audiences.

It was heartening, however, to find some pictures which combined both a good story well told and a cast of bright luminaries, topping expectations. Among them were "Dark Victory" and "Wuthering Heights," neither of which is what might be considered an "ideal" summer vacation picture.

Sound View, where Cinema City is located, is not a high class resort. It is peopled by average working folk, those who make up the bulk of a city movie audience.

Aside from our patrons' insistent demand for stars and stories with which they were familiar, they asked new releases. There was no evidence throughout the summer that people are willing to wait for good pictures. They'll travel 20 or 30 miles in their car to see a picture they are interested in, rather than wait seven days for it to clear. We had to wait 14 days after New London and seven days after Saybrook for releases. Pictures went through these towns too slowly in many instances and I began to see the evil of block booking and protection as far as the little fellow is concerned.

JULIAN B. TUTHILL

The summer season at Sound View is only 10 weeks long, and there is neither the time to play the turkeys every theater is asked to buy, nor is there sufficient opportunity for profit to permit them to be discarded.

For years my desk at the Hartford Times has been bombarded with arguments for and against block booking. My little soiree as a movie manager has not changed my own opinion regarding such matters. It still seems to me that there is no great hazard in buying pictures in blocks if there can be some access to other product. I don't think any theater has the right to demand protection on more pictures than it can show. It seems to me if a theater having such protection finds that it cannot play a picture within a reasonable time after its release date, it ought to relinquish the print to some other theater. In other words, I believe that protection should start with release dates rather than play dates.

If the New London and Saybrook Theatres along the Connecticut shore are more important spots than Cinema City, which they unquestionably are, they ought to have first whack at the pictures, but they ought not to be in a position where they can hold things up indefinitely.

Several films that played Hartford and New Haven a month ago are still not available to me at Sound View because they haven't yet played New London. That is my only real grievance . . . that and the wobbly stand that distributors take with regard to the price they ask. The business would be vastly more dignified if, instead of reducing prices when it becomes obvious that the established rate is too high, an equitable percentage agreement, without guarantee were worked out. That's the arrangement Warners offered on "Dodge City," and it resulted in a pleasant relationship all the way 'round.

I have lost a considerable amount of money in my first venture as an exhibitor, more than I'll be able to make as a critic for some months, but I have gained something too. I have proven to myself that I am not such a bad critic after all, for I write of the films in the same vein that I would use if I were to meet my next door neighbor on the street and we were to get to talking about it.

The boys who seek to make their own comment a greater literary masterpiece than the show itself are, in my opinion, all wet . . . even if their composition is more brilliant. What we need in this business is more honesty among ourselves, greater consideration of others whose tastes may vary.

RKO Reorganization Hearings Resume Dec. 5th

George J. Schaefer's absence on the Coast caused William Bondy, federal judge, Wednesday in New York to grant a further adjournment of hearings on the RKO reorganization proceedings to December 5th. The board of directors of RKO are postponing a study of a new proposed agreement of underwriting offered by the Atlas Corporation, proponent of the plan, until Mr. Schaefer's return to New York on November 15th, Richard Jones, of Simpson, Thacher and Bartlett, attorneys for Atlas, told the court.

Judge Bondy took the cudgels in defense of Atlas and of RKO as well when minority group representatives launched an attack upon the delay in bringing forward a new agreement. Under any circumstances, Judge Bondy said, he would consult with RKO directors on the fairness of any new agreement before approving it, and Mr. Schaefer's presence would be necessary.

Killed in Auto Crash

A smashup of an automobile carrying Paramount theatre executives Wednesday caused the death of E. Paul Phillips of the theatre's operation department and serious injury to Charles Burton, circuit architect, and L. J. Ludwig, of Paramount's Minnesota theatres subsidiary, who were taken to Waseca Hospital, Waseca, Minn.

The circuit executives were driving from Minneapolis to Sioux Falls, S. D.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

ROCKEFELLER CENTER, New York's $100,000,000 city-within-a-city, got its last rivet Wednesday, a silver one, set to rest by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., leaning on a 60-pound riveting hammer driving into the base of the 14th and last building unit of the Center, at 1230 Sixth Avenue, two blocks south of the 1270 building which houses Quigley Publications, RKO Radio Pictures and other pillars of picturedom.

Presence of Columbia University's Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler at the ceremonies attending the dedication, which completed construction of three square city blocks of office and theatre buildings, acres of gardens and miles of shops and restaurants, reminded the New York Daily Mirror that if one lives to the year 2015 A.D., he will see the Nicholas Murray Butler of that day employing the Rockette Dancers of the Music Hall of tomorrow. In that year, Columbia University, which owns the land on which Rockefeller Center stands, and receives $3,300,000 a year in rent, will inherit, without charge, the entire $100,000,000 development.

Only 135 years ago Dr. David Hosack (who attended Alexander Hamilton after his fatal duel with Aaron Burr, then generously paid the passage to Europe for the disgraced Burr) bought the site in midtown New York for a paltry $4,807.36—plus 16 bushels of wheat.

Dr. Hosack, mocked as "extravagant" at the time, built a Botanic Garden on the site. In 1812 the State of New York bought the land for $74,000, gave it to Columbia two years later, although at the time the University would have preferred $8,000 in cash instead.

Completion this week of the 14th and final building brings out a few statistics, one war note:

Into the construction of Rockefeller Center went enough steel to build 12 battleships.

The 14 buildings in the Center have 21,292 windows, giving steady work to 35 window washers; one window in Building No. 14 takes two men three days to wash, is 200 feet long, two stories high—biggest in the world.

Five million tourists a year visit the Center, its Music Hall Theatre (world's largest, 6,200 seats) and National Broadcasting Corporation's manifold radio studios—no radio studios touch the RCA building structure; they are hung from ceilings, in order to be insulated from noise and vibration.

If and when the "booty" reaches a Nazi exhibitor, Mr. Tanney expects there will be some fun, for few, if any American-made sound systems have ever been used in Germany, due to the strict monopoly maintained by Tobis-Klangfilm Sound over there.

DESTINY

Unknown, Warner Brothers had a most appreciative audience during a late-hour rehearsal preview at their Broadway Strand, the other evening. Uninvited, unheralded, the cleaning women of the house were off in a corner — watching "Dust Be My Destiny".

MR. GROVER WHALEN'S NEW YORK WORLD'S FAIR is gone—so is Mr. Grover Whalen (he's in Scandinavia or someplace). Gone, too, are Meyer Berger's funny fables in the New York Times about the frantic flats of Flushing Meadows, Mr. Berger in his daily reporting having described the place and certain of its personages in a manner that would still the pens of the most critical critters of stage and screen.

The Fair had hardly gotten under way when Meyer Berger called it a "Stark-Mad Steppe," "Bedlam Bog," the "Awry Acres" of a "Muddled Morass." Warming up to his subject he shot a hard one-two with a "Hallucination Heath" and "Haywire" Heath, pulling nary a punch with some more heaths: "Hapless," "High-hat," "Harried" "Haggard" and "Hokum" heaths.

He then called it the "Mad Marsh," and "Mad Meadow," a whole bunch of bogs: "Blunder Bog," "Barmy Bog," "Blatant Bog," "Boondoggle" and "Brainstorm" bogs, adding a special assortment of other epitaphs: "Frenzied Fen," "Quaint Quagmire," "Addlepate Acres" and "Frantic Fen," "Maudlin Moor" and "Fallen-Arch Fen," "Arty Acres," "The Moor of Many Madmen," "Fiddle-Faddle Flat," et al., etc., etc.

To the always-carnationed Grover, himself, Mr. Berger appended: "The Great White Father of Muttering Meadow."

THERE are some peeved chorus girls over at New York's Roxy theatre these days, and they're aiming their arrows at the Mohawk Carpet Mills, Inc., of Amsterdam, New York.

To the Mohawk Mills went the economic pleasure of weaving another "world's largest rug," a two-ton oval running 40 feet by 58 feet, made from 469 rugged sheep, for the lobby of the Roxy, to replace the old oval which for 12 years had stood the strains of the hoofs of 124,800,000 Roxy theatregoers (Mohawk statistics).

Great crowds greeted the unloading of the chenille mastodonic, Monday, from the truck which bore it from Amsterdam to 50th Street and Seventh Avenue. The theatre management had its staff of 59 male workers on hand and their 118 arms heaved as one under the weight.

The Mohawk's publicity writers did nobly up to this point, telling, in eloquent language, of the reception of the rug. But here they slipped—and badly, explaining that the Roxy chorus was there, also, a chorus which the Mohawk Carpet press agents called the "Gay Forty" girls, instead of the "Gae Fosters."

We know of at least four members of the motion picture trade press in New York who are feeling quite kindly toward United Artists these days.

Mr. Raymond's projectionists, being nearest to a roof that is no air bomb repellent, wear steel helmets and have four times the usual fire fighting equipment on hand.

First Love

(Universal)

Deanna Durbin Song Film

Herewith the Joe Pasternak-Henry Koster way with script and camera accounts again for a graceful, eyeable, earable and altogether entertaining Deanna Durbin song film, as dependable a product, commercially and audiencewise, as the studios of Hollywood achieve. In it the young lady sings four songs, each in its proper place and with the accustomed pertinency to narrative, and the emotions of an adolescent in love are dealt with realistically and with no phony underscoring. It's a solid picture.

Miss Durbin graduates from a girls' school in the opening sequence and is back in the class room again at the finale after a series of experiences in the luxurious home of a fabulously wealthy uncle whose fabulously spoiled family make her life miserable while the staff below stairs befriend her. Into this series of events screen playwrights Bruce Manning and Lionel Houser have interjected, undisguised and with good-humored modernization, the better parts of "Pollyanna," "The Ugly Duckling" and quite literally "Cinderella." These combine to produce a singularly refreshing tale.

Robert Stack as the young man with whom the young lady falls in love has little screen time, yet uses it well. Helen Parrish is adroitly detestable as the jealous cousin and Leatrice Joy, returning to films to play the sophisticated mother, stakes out a valid claim on a new screen career. Eugene Pallette as the long suppressed millionaire father who finally takes matters in hand, Charles Coleman as a sympathetic butler and Kathleen Howard as an old maid school teacher who knows all about love and what it does to people turn in three superb performances.

Although a rounded and polished production in every department, formal narrative technique is departed from on several occasions with impressive result. People talk to their images in mirrors and the images talk back. Dancers in a ballroom fade out of the picture without notice when their presence ceases to be important. These and similar uses of the camera and what used to be called trick photography add an important touch of unreality to a story never too seriously pitched.

In common with her previous pictures, this Durbin vehicle is a fine, clean, wholesome entertainment item designed for any and all of the world's peoples of all ages and both genders. Miss Durbin's singing equals her best and her acting continues to mature. This story is somewhat lighter, somewhat more to the comedy side, but no less refreshing and effective than her others. The picture is showmanly material in every meaning of the term.

Accusation of War

The original title of this French importation was "J'Accuse" and what it accuses is war and all the wars of tomorrow. It is not what commonly is known as an entertainment picture, nor is it a propaganda picture in the accepted sense. It cries out against the inhumanness of man, but hammers at the thesis so constantly as to weaken the message. A different approach, especially where the screen is concerned, seems in order when it is considered that for 20 to 25 years the public has been subjected intermittently to gruesome films on the horrors of warfare.

The story is well acted by a competent cast. A French patrol is sent out the night before the Armistice. Only two men return, one mortally wounded. Before he dies he clasps the hand of the sole survivor, placing him in communication with all the dead of the World War. He had assured his fellows that there never would be another war.

The years from the Armistice are spanned swiftly and the survivor becomes blind. The war talk of 1939 arouses him and he is able to see again. He calls to the World War dead to arise and protest. As the mutilated dead march again (portrayed by Les Gueules Cassées, the French mutilated veterans of the war) the living are frightened and the survivor of the last patrol is burned to death.

Abel Gance wrote and directed the picture.

Too Busy to Work

(20th Century-Fox)

Comedy

Now well into its fourth year of consistent popularity, the Jones Family series continues, here, in high gear on a wide open straightaway. This time the regular cast enjoys assistance in the speed, pep and laugh department from the able and agile Joan Davis, who pours into the film a liberal measure of her peculiarly effective slapstick art.

The screen play by Robert Ellis, Helen Logan and Stanley Raud opens with the estimable John Jones so busy being Mayor Jones that the Jones drugstore is approaching bankruptcy. By way of showing him what would happen to the household if his wife neglected her housekeeping as he neglects his store, she takes up amateur acting. From there on complications become many and hilarious, the proceedings winding up in an amateur play which works out as they always do but more so.

Otto Brower's direction is successful in speed, clarity and point. Produced for Sol Wurtzel by John Stone, it ranks high among the pictures of the series, perhaps highest.

Previewed at the Upton theatre, Los Angles, where it had 'em, as the saying is, rolling in the aisles.—W. R. W.

Little Accident

(Universal)

Baby Sandy's Third

Although fitted out with a considerable array of adult names for exploitation use, this third of the Baby Sandy pictures is primarily and completely a background for display of the infant star. Adult roles, handled ably enough, are subordinated to the baby's. Here, it is to be noted, reference to the child is as she and her, stabilizing that detail of identity.

Titled for and derived, very remotely, from a stage play that got itself widely discussed in its day as risque, daring, and the like, the film has been produced and directed by Charles Lamont as a largely and unabashedly slapstick comedy, going back to Sennett for much of its comedy material. Paul Yawitz and Eve Greene shaped their screen play accordingly. It has to do with a baby, left with the usual note in the office of a newspaper expert on baby culture, who writes as a woman but is in fact a man. Complications are of the sort indicated by this start.

Jeepers Creepers

(Republic)

Hillbilly Melodrama

The Weaver Brothers and Elviry return in another of Republic's hillbilly melodramas with the romantic roles taken by Roy Rogers and Maris Wrixon, borrowed from Warner Brothers for this production, while Loretta Weaver, 22-year-old daughter of Elviry, makes her screen debut as the mountain girl constantly seeking the affections of the sheriff (Rogers).

The several wellknown songs, sung by Roy and the Weaver Brothers and Elviry, accompanied by their claptrap musical instruments, include "In the Shade of the Old Apple Tree," "Little Brown Jug" and the more recent "Jeepers Creepers," which was one of the better hit tunes of the season.

"M. K. Durant," unscrupulous financier, discovers a coal vein in hillbilly Pineville. When the mountain folk refuse to sell their property "Durant" puts up the money for back taxes and acquires title. The town folk band together under Rogers and try to drive out the mining company. A forest fire is started by the miners. "Durant" is rescued by "Rogers" and his men. "Durant" returns the land and dissolves the mining company.

With the supporting cast of Billy Lee, Lucien Littlefield, Thurston Hall and John Arthur the picture progresses with a steady, if not swift, pace.

Our Neighbors the Carters

(Paramount)

Domestic Comedy Drama

Charles R. Rogers' second contribution to the Paramount program offers another small town American family confronted with troubles of various kinds but triumphant and happy in the end.

Fay Bainter and Frank Craven as the mother and father give the film the benefit of their long experience and sound ability. Edmund Lowe and Genevieve Tobin in the secondary adult roles have somewhat less congenial material to work with. The youngsters in the family are quite appropriately cast.

S. K. Lauren's screen play, based on Renaud Hoffman's story, is about an old-fashioned druggist whose loss of his store brings him to the edge of ruin, at which point well intentioned wealthy friends seek to give him a trust fund in exchange for one of his children. On this melodramatic turn of events rests the emotional appeal of the piece, a somewhat extreme appeal weighted to counterbalance a measure of implausibility. Individual acting by Miss Bainter and Mr. Craven give this situation its effectiveness. In earlier sequences Mr. Craven and Mr. Loew share some good comedy moments.

Ralph Murphy directed the film in straightaway fashion. It is suitable, as to content and manner, for the type of audience which has indicated solid interest in the several series of family comedy dramas.

The Affair Lafont

(Transatlantic Films)

Melodrama of Motherhood

Maternity, frustrated or too successful, makes the scandal sheet basis for this subject. French linguistic gatherings, the customers who remember and liked the passive pulchritude of Corinne Luchaire in "Prison without Bars," will find her again here.

The production carries a trace of similarity to the American production of happy reception, "The Old Maid," although the Gallic interpretation of whose baby belongs to whom and why does not carry the high grade dressing of its predecessor. Mlle Luchaire preserves her passivity despite the fact that she is exposed to sin, scandal and a gunshot wound from her sister's pistol. Leonid Moguy directed in heavy fashion the sob sister script from Gina Kaus. English superimposed titles were adequate if not always legible.

The picture begins briskly enough with the shooting of "Claire" by her sister, "Catherine Lafont," as the girl is racing to the office of her brother-in-law. "Claire," who has loved a cad unwisely, is able to palm off the baby as belonging to her sister, who it seems is about to be divorced because she is unable to produce an heir. Two years later, "Claire," because the scoundrel father is demanding blackmail money and she has a delayed stirring of maternal instinct, demands her baby. To prevent the expose, the sister shoots her. Anyway, the patient recovers and gives up the child to "Catherine."

The Llano Kid

(Sherman-Paramount)

Outdoor Action with Music

Harry Sherman presents in "The Llano Kid" the picturization of an O. Henry short story which emerges as an outdoor film dotted with music, mostly of Mexican folksong variety. It is Tito Guizar's film, his work in the title role being a step farther in the planned development of his career.

Supporting Guizar are Gale Sondergaard, Alan Mowbray, Jane Clayton, Emma Dunn, Minor Watson, Chris Martin, Carlos De Valdez, Anna Demetrio, Glenn Strange and Tony Roux. Wanda Tuchock paced out her adaptation of the O. Henry tale, "The Double Dyed Deceiver," to fill 70 minutes of screen time. E. D. Venturini directed.

"Llano Kid" poses as long lost son of "Dona Teresa," rich Mexican ranch owner, as part of his plot with two Americans, "Mr. and Mrs. Travers." An outlaw, "Llano Kid" is regenerated through love of his intended victim and betrothed, with an officer of law who trails him from the United States agreeing to let his masquerade go through in view of the fact that the outlaw has killed his real son.

Dead End Kids On Dress Parade

(Warner Brothers)

Military School Drama

The appellation of "Dead End Kids" is a misnomer here; they are as unlike the east side New York ragamuffins they portrayed in "Dead End" as were the "Rover Boys" of another generation. The sharp-tongued, cigaret stunted, beer drinking character that was Leo Gorcey seemed destined to remain. At the start of "Dress Parade" his was the only part reminiscent of the "Kids'" earlier films. But at the end his transformation is the most complete of all.

The setting is a military school, a school, incidentally, that may leave many a former or current cadet slightly giddy with the wonder of it, not to mention the sentimentality cloying the hallowed halls. Neither drill nor sports play a part in the action. The competitive phase emerges on the scholastic side as "Slip Duncan" (Gorcey) crams like mad to lead the school.

"Slip" comes to the school a rebellious character. Partially responsible for an accident that injures "Rollins" (Halop), he is ignored by the other cadets. He sets out to excel in studies and does, but still his schoolmates present the cold shoulder. At the summer maneuvers—the scenes resemble newsreel shots of regular Army sham battles—"Slip" rescues

In-Law Trouble

Appreciation of this classic Yiddish stage drama naturally will find its fullest realization among the racial groups familiar with the original dialogue. Nevertheless, the theme, the mother-in-law versus daughter-in-law contest, is universal in any tongue. The treatment here is broad with a heavy sentimental side but intermittently spiced with humorous native mannerisms. Women are likely to have a particularly good time if the amount of tears shed at the performance attended is indicative. The English superimposed titles are more than adequate.

What the production lacks in setting, camera manipulation and directorial pace is more than compensated by the human story and the expert acting. Berta Gersten, one of the first ladies on the Yiddish stage, offers her fine, matronly looks and an excellent performance. Michael Rosenberg demonstrates capital comic talents. A depiction of religious and folk ways of the characters is interesting in a pictorial sort of way, but impedes the plot.

The woman of the picture's title is a wealthy and shrewd widow, more interested in making a living for her two sons than for herself. One marries a girl from an inferior social circle, who demonstrates her cultural nature by arranging to force her mother-in-law to leave her business and her home. However, the ceremony of confirmation of a grandson unites the group once again.

Seen at an afternoon performance of the New York Cameo theatre, former stamping ground for proletarian pictures rather than personal problem plays, a good sized audience was especially responsive to the comedy business.—JOSEPH F. COUGHLIN.

Legion of Lost Flyers

(Universal)

Aerial Melodrama

Another chapter from the teamwork exploits of Richard Arlen and Andy Devine is detailed in this aerial melodrama of a corps of birdmen who, because of unsavory records, justified or not, have established an outpost squadron of their own away up in the frozen wastelands of Alaska.

The story is a bit far fetched, particularly the miraculous crack-up escapades of the hero-aviator, "Loop Gillan," but the constant take-offs and landings are pictorially exciting, if confusing to plot structure. The writers, Ben Pivar and Maurice Tombragel, have allowed their imaginations to soar. Action fans, however, should have a spine-tingling holiday.

The romantic sequences seemed to have been slipped in to allow breathing spaces for the air aces and refueling for their craft. Of course, there is a good serving of comedy moments, with Devine in the cast. In fact, the laugh lines offered Andy in his present vehicle, especially through the mammoth and stoical cooperation of an Eskimo woman, should have almost as much showmanship value as the main barrel rolling business.

"Loop" leaves the States under a cloud of suspicion for bailing out of a transport plane, goes to an Alaskan airport to join up with some other bent winged flyers, and through the encouragement of "Beef" and "Paula" begins to lift his name from under the ceiling zero of disrepute. By rescuing "Perry," whom "Loops" knows to be the one guilty of the charge, he forces the real culprit to confess by way of the radio, hooked up with a field station.

Flight maneuvers of the film were witnessed at the Rialto filmport on Broadway on a rainy afternoon, a good time for picture watching, if not for actual flying. A packed audience of practically 99 and 9/10 per cent masculine constituency seemed to enjoy the aerial gymnastics in a thorough, if not fully credulous, manner.—J. F. C.

Cohn Says Rumors of Columbia Sale Are False

The following statement was issued Tuesday by Harry Cohn, president of Columbia Pictures Corporation.

"Rumors recently circulated to the effect that the control of Columbia Pictures Corporation is being sold or transferred, or that negotiations are in progress for such sale or transfer, are entirely false and without any basis.

"I have not discussed, nor has any other representative of this company held discussion of any kind with any person or persons, in or outside of the motion picture industry, in connection with the sale of Columbia stock.

"I have instructed the company's attorneys to investigate the origin of such rumors as have been published and to take such steps as they may in their judgment deem necessary."

Meet To Determine "Wind's" Selling

David O. Selznick, the producer; John Hay Whitney, the financier; Nicholas Schenck, president of Loew's, the distributor; Al Lichtman, his assistant; and William F. Rodgers, MGM general sales manager, met at mid-week in New York City to set up sales policies on Mr. Selznick's "Gone With the Wind," and to decide on the "premieres," possibly several of them.

Mr. Rodgers Wednesday afternoon said that no decision had been reached; that announcement by this week's end would possibly convey information about the picture's opening, but not the selling terms.

Any announcement of selling terms would be phrased in a "general" manner, Mr. Rodgers said, indicating further sales conferences with MGM field officials would precede definite information.

STAGE AND FILMS SET NEW PACT TO GIVE HOLLYWOOD AID TO BROADWAY

Minimum Basic Agreement, Awaiting Formal Approval, Would End 2-Year Estrangement Over Royalty Payments

Hollywood motion picture producers and the stage of Broadway, estranged for more than two years because of an argument between the film companies and dramatists over royalty payments for film rights, are about to "bury the hatchet," returning Hollywood backing to Broadway plays.

Concluding more than a year of arguing and negotiating over a new agreement, between the dramatists and representatives of the major companies, the Dramatists Guild of the Authors League of America over the weekend finally released a completed minimum basic agreement governing the licensing of motion picture rights to film-producers who financially back plays. (Complete text starts in adjoining columns.)

Paramount, RKO and Twentieth Century-Fox were reported Wednesday on Broadway as preparing to reenter stage production. In past seasons, Columbia and Warners have been the most prominently identified with stage backing.

Royalty Payments Stipulated

The pact stipulates the royalty payments which the film producer must make in advance to the dramatist and his interests for film rights, starting with a first payment of $5,000, and with additional and higher payments as the run of the play progresses. In no event are these payments returnable to the film producer regardless of whether he purchases the rights.

If the production is abandoned, film rights are lost by the film-producer backer. Films from plays may not be released prior to expiration of one complete season after the play has closed, except by agreement by both sides.

Vote Expected Soon

The agreement becomes effective as soon as members of the Dramatists Guild, play producers and stage managers formally vote approval, which is expected soon. The pact will run from Dec. 31, 1939, for one year.

Hollywood financed stage plays, openly and otherwise, for years, as a means of developing story material and playwrights and discovering occasional new acting talent. Recognizing the potential box office value of films based on exceptional stage hits, bidding among film studios for film rights frequently sent the price out of all proportion to expected returns. When film producers, several years back, started to finance plays, it was expected that because of their backing they would have the inside track on the acquisition of film rights. This soon proved to be a fallacy.

In the Broadway season of 1935-36, Hollywood backed about 30 stage plays, but in the following season, when the Dramatists Guild enforced stiff contractual requirements, for considerably higher financial remuneration of dramatists and other demands, Hollywood backing was given to less than 13 plays. The total dropped lower in subsequent seasons as motion picture producers became further discouraged.

In the last four years of the "estrangement," Actors Equity and other strong forces of the stage have more or less "demanded" that Hollywood return to the support of the stage.

Text of Stage-Film Agreement For Financing Broadway Plays

New minimum basic agreement for licensing of motion picture rights to film-producer financial backers of stage plays, through which Hollywood backing would be returned to Broadway after an absence of two years, follows:

Minimum Basic Agreement for licensing of motion picture rights to financial backer of plays entered into this day of , 19 , between hereinafter referred to as the "Manager", and The Dramatists' Guild of the Authors' League of America, Inc., hereinafter referred to as the "Guild," acting on behalf of all of its present and future members (who are hereinafter referred to as "Authors");

WHEREAS, there is now in effect a Minimum Basic Agreement between the Guild and Theatrical Producing Managers which defines the rights and interests of the respective parties in plays written by members of the Guild and produced by such Managers (which agreement is hereinafter called the "Guild Basic Agreement"); and

WHEREAS, the Guild Basic Agreement as amended provides for the licensing of motion picture rights prior to production, to a motion picture producer who shall finance the stage production of the play (hereinafter referred to as the "Backer"), provided there shall have been negotiated and agreed to a Basic Agreement between the Guild and Managers containing minimum terms and standards which shall control the licensing of such rights; and

WHEREAS, this agreement has been negotiated; and

WHEREAS, the Manager has signed the Guild Basic Agreement and is in good statnding with the Guild,

NOW, THEREFORE, in consideration of the premises and of the terms and conditions and mutual covenants entered into, the parties hereto agree as follows:—

ARTICLE I—SCOPE OF THE AGREEMENT

Section 1—The Effective Agreements

The terms herein contained are the minimum standards which shall control both the production of the play and the licensing of motion picture rights under a contract for the licensing of motion picture rights prior to production of the play, to a motion picture producer who shall finance the stage production. In each instance, an individual agreement (hereinafter called the "Individual Agreement"), which may contain special terms not in conflict herewith, shall be entered into between the Author, the Manager and the Backer. Such Individual Agreement shall recite that it is subject to this Basic Agreement, and shall contain a commitment on the part of the Backer to do and perform all things on his part as set forth herein.

The Production Contract (under the Guild Basic Agreement), this agreement, the Individual Agreement, and the Negotiator's motion picture contract shall constitute the only existing agreements concerning the subject matter hereof. The Negotiator in this agreement referred to shall mean the Motion Picture Negotiator functioning under the provisions of Article IX of the Guild Basic Agreement. Nothing herein contained or contained in the Individual Agreement shall in any wise affect the Guild Basic Agreement under which the play referred to in the Individual Agreement shall be produced, except only as specifically modified in connection with the disposition of motion picture rights to plays produced and backed as herein provided. The disposition of motion picture rights to plays not produced under a valid Individual Agreement shall remain governed by the relevant provisions of the Guild Basic Agreement and by the instructions promulgated thereunder, despite backing of the play by a Motion Picture Producer.

Individual Agreements shall not be valid or effective unless they shall have been signed by all the respective parties thereto and countersigned by the Guild before the beginning of rehearsals of the play.

Section 2—Contractual Relations

If the Manager is a corporation or partnership, the Manager shall, in the Individual Agreement, designate a person (hereinafter called the "Independent Manager") as the person who shall be in charge of the production of the play. Such Independent Manager shall have sold right to act on behalf of the Manager under the production contract; his approval in writing of each member of the cast shall in all instances be first obtained. In the event the Independent Manager shall for any reason cease to function as such, the Manager shall forthwith name a new Independent Manager, who must first be approved in writing by the Author and the Guild. If a person named by the Manager is not so approved the Manager shall name another until a person satisfactory to the Author and Guild is named. The person designated as the Independent Manager must be a Manager in good standing with the Guild, and must become a party to the Individual Agreement and responsible for the obligations of the Manager thereunder incurred during the time he shall have functioned as Independent Manager.

Neither the Manager nor the Independent Manager shall be employed by the Backer or be under contract, verbal or written, with him, nor shall he receive any compensation from the Backer, except under Individual Agreements entered into hereunder; provided, nevertheless, that if a Manager or Independent Manager is under contract with the Backer, under which contract his relationship with the Backer shall not, in the opinion of the Author and Negotiator be in conflict with his duties and interest as Manager or Independent Manager hereunder, then upon revelation of such contract and upon consent of the Author and Negotiator, a person holding such contract may act as Manager or Independent Manager hereunder.

This agreement shall be effective and valid only in respect to plays produced under Individual Agreements made not later than the 31st day of December, 1940.

ARTICLE II—THE PRODUCTION OF THE PLAY

Section 1—The Backing

The Backer shall agree as follows:—

(a) To pay all expenses incurred and in connection with the production and presentation of the play in a first-class manner, (subject to the provisions of Article IV, Sec. 3 hereof) for the period contemplated in this contract including the expense of preliminary and out-of-town tryouts; in cases where the Manager shall be a partnership or corporation, to make available to the Independent Manager a sum of money satisfactory to him and sufficient for such purposes.

(b) Not to take an actor or actress out of the cast during the run of the play or during any continuance of the run in the succeeding theatrical season, for employment by the Backer or Manager in a motion picture or in another play without the written consent of the Author and Negotiator. But the Backer shall be free to negotiate for the services of such actor or actress to commence after the closing of such run and any continuance thereof.

(c) To reveal to the Author all known information respecting any existing contracts or commitments of all proposed members of the cast.

Section 2—The Manager's Obligations

The Manager and/or Independent Manager agrees as follows:—

(a) The profits of the Manager from the production of the play shall be set aside into a reserve fund, which shall be maintained at not less than Fifteen Thousand Dollars ($15,000), and which said reserve fund shall be used for the production and operation of the play on the road with the original and/or with second companies. The Manager shall have the right, within the first 15 weeks of the run in New York, to decide upon such road tour. If the Manager shall decide against such road tour, after the said 15 week period, the amount in the said reserve fund shall be distributed according to respective interests.

(b) The Manager shall furnish each week to the Author and Negotiator a statement of the operating expenses and gross box-office receipts. The Negotiator by his accredited accountant (who may be the accountant of the Guild) shall have access to the records, receipts, check books, and all other books of account, contracts, and other data respecting the production of the play. The reasonable cost of the services of such accountant shall be taken by the Negtotiator for payment out of the initial payment made by the Backer for motion picture rights, before any distribution of the balance of such payment is made.

(c) In all cases where the play is wholly financed by the Backer, the Independent Manager shall in any event receive for himself not less than Fifteen Percent (15%) of the monies paid by the Backer for the motion picture rights. In the event, however, that the Backer shall only partially finance the production and presentation of the play, the percentual payments to the Independent Manager may be modified so that he shall in any event receive for himself such proportion of Fifteen Percent (15%) of the motion picture payments as the Backer's investment bears to the total investment in the production and presentation of the play. The Independent Manager shall not in any event exchange such percentage payments for a stated sum of money.

(d) In contracts for rental of theatres the company's share of gross box-office receipts shall be on prevailing market terms, and no theatre contract shall be made which permits the closing of the run in conflict with the provisions of Section 3, Article V hereof unless a special concession has been agreed upon.

(e) The Manager shall not take an actor or actress out of the cast during the run of the play or during any continuance of the run in the succeeding theatrical season for employment by the Backer or Manager in a motion picture or in another play without the written consent of the Author and Negotiator.

(f) The Manager shall reveal to the Author all known information respecting any existing contracts or commitments of all proposed members of the cast.

ARTICLE III—
THE AUTHOR'S OBLIGATIONS AND PRIVILEGES

Section 1—Road Tour by Author

If the Manager does not arrange a road tour of the play to begin within 15 weeks of the New York opening, or, if the Manager shall, in writing, prior to the expiration of 15 weeks run in New York, state his determination not to arrange for such road tour, and not to tour the New York company after the New York run ends, the Author shall have the right to take out, or arrange with others to take out, such road tour or tours on his (Author's) own account. The privilege of the Author to take out or arrange such road tour or tours on his own account shall not be exercised until the closing of the New York run unless the Manager shall otherwise in writing consent, such consent not to be unreasonably withheld. The Author's right to arrange for such road tour or tours on his own account shall be exercised within three weeks after (a) the Manager advises that he does not intend to send out a road company, or, (b) fails for one week to reply to written inquiries as to his intentions.

Section 2—Continuation by Manager of Run in New York or on Tour

In the event that the Backer exercises his privilege under the terms of Article V, Section 3 hereof, to direct that the play be closed in New York or on tour under the formulas therein contained, the Manager may nevertheless continue the run, although motion picture payments by the Backer would be suspended, subject to the provisions of Article VI, Section 4 hereof.

Section 3—Continuation by Author of New York or Tour Run

In the event that the Backer exercises his privilege under the terms of Article V, Section 3 hereof, to direct the closing of the run in New York City, or on tour, and the Manager shall not desire to continue the run on his own behalf under the provisions of Section 2 of this Article, then the Author shall have the right to continue or arrange for the continuance of the run on his own account. The Manager must notify the Author within 48 hours after receiving closing notice whether he proposes to continue such run on his own account, failing which notification to the Author the Author shall have the absolute right so to continue the run.

Section 4—Taking Over Properties

In the event the Author takes out or continues a road tour, or continues the New York run, under Sections (1) or (3) of this Article, he may (provided the New York run shall have terminated, or at the end of the New York run) (a) purchase the physical properties of the play owned by the Backer at a cost not to exceed Twenty Percent (20%) of the original cost thereof; or (b) rent them at a cost not to exceed Fifteen Percent (15%) of the First Ten Thousand Dollars ($10,000) of gross weekly boxoffice receipts of the production in which such properties are used, and Twenty Percent (20%) of the excess over Ten Thousand Dollars ($10,000), until Forty Percent (40%) of the original cost of the properties shall have been paid, after which no further payments shall be made for the use thereof; or (c) rent the properties at such percentage of the net profits of the production in which the properties are used, as may be mutually agreed upon. If, within three days after the Author requests, in writing, a consideration thereof, the Author and Backer shall not be in accord as to which of the alternatives (a) or (c) shall be adopted, or if the alternative (c) is accepted, what the percentage of profits shall be, then the Author shall have the absolute right to use the properties under the provisions of alternative (b). If the Manager shall be the owner of said properties or some of them, then the provisions of this section shall likewise apply to him wherever reference is made to Backer.

PLAY PRODUCERS FACE CODE CHARGE

Two members of the League of New York Theatres, the producers' organization, were summoned to appear on Tuesday, October 31st before the body to answer charges of violating the code which controls the distribution of theatre tickets. The trial was set for about 12 hours before the code expires. Actors Equity Association met the same day to decide whether the code should be continued or dropped. Equity has held that the League has failed to inforce its own code.

The League attempted to discipline a member once before but no action was taken. However, Equity was expected to extend the code until it could be determined if the producers really wished to enforce it. The League also has summoned a number of ticket brokers.

Gustave A. Gerber, attorney for the Associated Ticket Agencies, held that real enforcement of the regulations could come only when the brokers themselves draft a code.

The Author shall also have the right to take over by assignment from the Manager and Backer any or all contracts for rental of properties, to which assignments permission shall be arranged for in the original rental contract, if possible.

Section 5—Rights and Limitations Respecting Continued Run or Road Tour by Author

(a) No credit shall accrue to the Manager under the provisions of Section 3, Article IV of the Guild Basic Agreement by reason of presentations given by the Author or his licensees in any continued run or road tour hereunder. Provided, however, that the date of closing of the first-class run for the purpose of fixing subsidiary rights and releases thereof under the provisions of Article VIII of the Guild Basic Agreement shall be the date of closing of such run by the Author or his licensees.

(b) The Manager shall consent that the Author may take over contracts of the cast at his option.

(c) If the production taken out or arranged by the Author shall not be a first-class production, it shall not be announced and advertised as being a first-class production.

(d) If the run of the play is continued by the Author in New York City under the provisions of Sections (2) or (3) of this Article and the weekly operating expense under which the play is presented in such continued run is reduced by Twenty-five Percent (25%) or more below the weekly operating expense of the last week of operation by the Backer, then the first-class New York run of the play shall be deemed ended for all purposes under this Agreement and the Guild Basic Agreement, as of the time such reduced budget is effective. But the right of the Author so to continue the play at reduced budget is not otherwise affected.

ARTICLE IV—
BACKER'S OBLIGATIONS AND PRIVILEGES

Section 1—Abandonment of Production

In the event that there is no production in the manner and within the time limited in the production contract and in the Individual Agreement hereunder, or in the event that an out-of-town tryout or run is given and the production is then abandoned by the Manager without opening in Borough of Manhattan, then no motion picture rights shall accrue to the Backer, and all sums advanced by Backer shall be retained, and this agreement and all its terms and provisions shall automatically and without notice come to an end; provided, nevertheless, that the Backer shall have the right, subject to the approval in writing of the Author and Guild, (a) within 5 days after such closing out-of-town or (b) at any time before the day fixed in the Individual Agreement for opening of the play, to substitute another Manager hereunder. The approval of the Guild and the Author to such substituted Manager shall not be unreasonably withheld.

Section 2—The Picture License Agreement

The contract licensing the motion picture rights to the Backer shall be in accordance with the Guild Basic Agreement and this agreement, and in form agreed upon and approved by the parties thereto and the Negotiator, and shall be countersigned by the Guild at the time of the making of the Independent Agreement hereunder. Such contract shall provide that the motion picture to be made thereunder may be released not earlier than after the expiration of one complete theatrical season following the theatrical season in which the play shall have closed in New York; except that such picture may be released earlier if the New York and road runs of the play by the Manager, Author or any other party shall have actually terminated without intent to re-open. "Theatrical season" in this section referred to shall be deemed to end on May 31st of each year.

Section 3—Partial Backing

In the event the Backer undertakes to finance the production and presentation of the play only partially, the Backer shall nevertheless be bound to all the terms and provisions of this agreement and responsible for their fulfillment on Backer's part; and the obligation of the Backer to pay all the expenses connected with the production and presentation of the play in accordance with Article II, Section 1 (a) hereof shall not be affected by the failure of any other party to fulfill his obligation for partial backing.

ARTICLE V—CLOSING THE PLAY

Section 1—Operating Expense and Income

The parties shall arrive at an estimated budget of weekly operating cost of the play (hereinafter called "estimated operating budget"), which said estimate shall be stated in the Individual Agreement. Such estimated operating budget shall include the following expenses and no other:

Share of theatre—Amount of guarantee or first monies, if any; if theatre is held on rental basis, then reasonable rent plus ordinary reasonable operating expenses of the theatre;
Director's royalties—not to exceed Two Percent;
Author's royalties;
Salaries of Cast;
Stage Manager;
Assistant Stage Manager;
Extra Stage Hands, if any;
Booking fee of the play on the road;
Office expenses—not to exceed One Hundred Fifty Dollars ($150) a week;
Share of advertising, posters, heralds, etc.
Company Manager;
Business Manager—not to exceed One Hundred Dollars ($100) a week;
Press Agent;
Necessary Insurance;
Replacement of props;
Dues of League of New York Theatres;
In plays with music; conductor; share on musicians; three heads of departments, if necessary; wardrobe woman; assistant and dressers, if necessary; necessary stage hands; replacing, repairing and cleaning costumes;
Transportation and hauling.

In applying the formula for closing in Section 3 hereof:

(a) The actual amount paid for operating expenses in each week (hereinafter called the "operating expense") shall be used regardless of the amount stated as the estimated operating budget; except that in no event shall the sum so used be in excess of Twenty Percent (20%) of the estimated operating budget;

(b) The income to the Manager (hereinafter called the "gross receipts"), where the production is on a sharing basis, shall be considered the company's share of the gross box-office receipts in excess of the guarantee, if any; and the gross receipts, where the theatre is taken on a rental basis, shall be considered the box-office receipts, less rent and ordinary reasonable operating expenses of the theatre.

Section 2—Cuts and Reductions

The Manager shall apply, when necessary or advisable, for salary and royalty cuts and other reductions to reduce the operating expenses, and shall notify the Author and Negotiator promptly upon so doing. In the event that the Manager does not so apply, the Author shall have the right to apply therefor on behalf of the Manager and in his name; provided, however, that such application may not be made subsequent to three days after the Author shall have received notice of closing.

Section 3—The Formula for Suspension of Production

(a) The Manager may close the play in New York City at the end of the first, second, third or fourth week, if the gross receipts for each said respective week shall not exceed the following percentages of the operating expenses for that week:—For the first week, Fifty Percent (50%); the second week, Sixty-Six and Two-Thirds Percent (66⅔%); the third week, Eighty-

Three and One-Third Percent (83⅓%); and the fourth week, One Hundred Percent (100%). Thereafter, he may not close such run unless the gross receipts shall, for three consecutive calendar weeks, be less than the operating expenses, and for each of such three consecutive weeks, the gross receipts be less than the gross receipts for the preceding week.

For purposes hereof, each week, including the first, shall end on Saturday night. If the play shall open later in the week than Monday night, the computation hereunder for the first week shall be based on the pro rata operating expense and gross receipts for the performances played in that week.

(b) The Manager may close the road tour or tours on consent of the Guild (each company being considered a separate unit) when, from operating expense and gross receipts data furnished by the Manager to the Guild it appears to the satisfaction of the Guild that such tour, for three consecutive weeks, has shown, or is showing that it is an apparently unprofitable venture.

(c) In determining the right to close the play because of deficiency of receipts, neither the week before Christmas nor the week before Easter shall be considered as one of the weeks referred to in this Section.

(d) If the Manager shall, during a run, decrease the established box-office price of tickets, then no week or weeks prior to the effective date of such reduction may be considered as within the closing formula.

Section 4—Notice of Closing

The closing of the play shall not take place in any event after the first week unless the Author shall have been given at least one week's written notice of such closing.

ARTICLE VI—PAYMENT FOR PICTURE RIGHTS

Section 1—Advance Payments

The Backer shall pay to the Negotiator as a first payment at the time of the making of the Individual Agreement the sum provided for therein, but in no event less than Five Thousand Dollars ($5,000); if the play shall have run a second week, in New York, the Backer shall pay the Negotiator an additional sum of Two Thousand Five Hundred Dollars ($2,500); and if the play shall have run a third week in New York an additional sum of Seven Thousand Five Hundred Dollars ($7,500). None of these payments is to be returnable in any event, and the said sums shall be paid over by the Negotiator in the manner provided in the Guild Basic Agreement. The sums so paid shall be an advance upon the further weekly payments provided for in Section (2) hereof.

For the purposes of this section, each week, including the first (regardless of day of opening) shall end on Saturday night, and payments for the second and third week shall become due if any performances are given in such respective second and third weeks.

Payments under this section shall be made to the Negotiator not later than four days after the close of each said week as so defined.

Section 2—Payments Based on Run of the Play

(A) The Backer shall pay to the Negotiator for each week the play shall run (except as provided in Section (3) hereof) a sum fixed in the Individual Agreement based upon the gross weekly box-office receipts in New York and on tour, which sum shall not be less than the following:—

1. For plays operating on a weekly operating budget of Seven Thousand Five Hundred Dollars ($7,500) or less per week:—
   (a) For the first fifteen weeks of the run in New York, Fifteen Percent (15%) of the first Five Thousand Dollars ($5,000); Twenty Percent (20%) of the next Five Thousand Dollars ($5,000); and Twenty-Five Percent (25%) of the balance over Ten Thousand Dollars ($10,000) of such receipts.
   (b) For the next fifteen weeks of the run in New York, Fifteen Percent (15%) of such receipts.
   (c) After thirty weeks of the run, Twelve and One-Half Percent (12½%) of all such receipts.
   (d) For the run or runs on Tour, Ten Percent (10%) of all such receipts.
2. For plays operating on a weekly budget of more than Seven Thousand Five Hundred Dollars ($7,500), but not more than Fifteen Thousand Dollars ($15,000) per week:
   (a) For the first fifteen weeks of the run in New York City, Ten Percent (10%) of the first Five Thousand Dollars ($5,000); Fifteen Percent (15%) of the next Five Thousand Dollars ($5,000); and Twenty Percent (20%) of the balance over Ten Thousand Dollars ($10,000) of such receipts.
   (b) After fifteen weeks of the run in New York City, Twelve and One-Half Percent (12½%) of all such receipts.
   (c) For the run or runs on tour, Ten Percent (10%) of all such receipts.
3. For plays operating on a weekly budget of more than Fifteen Thousand Dollars ($15,000) per week:
   (a) Seven and One-Half Percent (7½%) of the gross weekly box-office receipts throughout the run in New York City.
   (b) For the run or runs on tour, Five Percent (5%) of all such receipts.

(B) The percentage payments for motion picture rights shall in each week be governed according to the schedule in this Section set forth, according to the actual operating expenses for such respective week, regardless of whether the operating expenses shall from time to time shift from one of the three above named categories to another.

EXHIBITORS FIGHT PARI-MUTUEL BETTING

The proposed amendment to the New York state constitution to legalize pari-mutuel betting at race tracks will be submitted to the voters at the election on Tuesday, November 7th, and exhibitors in the State are cooperating with other business and civic groups endeavoring to enlist public opposition to the measure.

The independent theatres are especially interested in the matter. The M. P. T. O. A. of Western New York considered the question at a general meeting in Buffalo on October 30th. Similar meetings have been held by circuit heads and independent theatre men in New York City.

(C) Payments for plays which open outside of New York City shall be at a rate not less than the minimum weekly payments in Subdivision (A) hereof set forth for tour runs, except that no payments need be made for the first three weeks of road playing before the New York opening of dramatic productions and five weeks of musical productions; but no motion picture rights shall accrue to the Backer unless and until there shall have been an opening in the Borough of Manhattan, failing which opening in Manhattan, the payments made under this subdivision shall not be returnable to the Backer.

(D) All payments hereunder shall be based upon the weekly receipts from all sources whatsoever, including any and all sums over and above regular box-office prices of tickets received by the Manager, or by anyone in his employ, from ticket agencies, brokers or other persons, and any other additional sum whatsoever received from the performance of the play.

(E) Payments by the Backer hereunder for each week shall be made not later than Wednesday of the succeeding week. The Negotiator shall pay over such sums in the manner provided in the Guild Basic Agreement.

Section 3—Suspension of Payments for Picture Rights

No percentage payments need be made by the Backer for any week in which the gross receipts of the play shall be less than the operating expense for that week.

Section 4—Payments After Manager or Author Takes Over Play

In the event that the Manager, on his own behalf, continues the production under the provisions of Section 2, Article III hereof, or the Author or his licensee continues the production in New York or takes the production out on tour under the provisions respectively of Sections 1 and 3, Article III hereof, the Backer shall not be liable for operating expenses beyond the time fixed by him under the provisions hereof for closing in New York, or on tour. But in such event the Backer shall make motion picture payments to the Negotiator at the percentage agreed upon in each week or weeks in which the gross receipts of such continued run or road tour exceed the operating expense of such respective week or weeks.

Section 5—Resumption of Picture Payments

In the event that the play shall close because of strike, illness of a member of the cast, or for any other reason, but with the intent to resume the presentation of the play, picture payments under Article VI shall be resumed upon such re-opening.

ARTICLE VII—SPECIAL CONCESSIONS

Section 1—When Called For

Where circumstances arise as a result of which either Manager or Author desires special or specific concessions in this Basic Agreement, they, or either of them, may apply to the Guild for permission in the particular case, to waive or modify any of the provisions of this Agreement; and under such circumstances the Guild may, in its discretion, waive or modify particular provisions of the Agreement in each particular case. The Guild may prescribe conditions for such waiver or modification. The Guild agrees that no discrimination shall be exercised, it being the intention that special or specific concessions made to one Manager be made to others similarly situated if warranted by the circumstances.

Section 2—Procedure

Whenever a concession is requested, the matter shall be submitted to a meeting of the Council of the Guild, which shall be held within ten (10) days of the request. Such matter shall be determined by those present and voting at any regular meeting or any special meeting called for the purpose by a majority vote unless otherwise specified herein.

ARTICLE VIII—ARBITRATION

Section 1—Obligation to Arbitrate

Any claim, dispute, difference, misunderstanding, controversy, or charge of unfair dealing arising under or in connection with or out of this agreement or the Individual Agreement, and any difference between the Guild and the Manager or Independent Manager arising out of the subject matter hereof shall be submitted to arbitration. Each of the parties to the Individual Agreement shall agree that the decision of a majority of the arbitrators shall be final and binding; and the ruling and directions, if any, of such arbitrators shall be carried out and fulfilled by each party affected thereby.

In the event that any controversy or question arises involving the subject matter hereof concerning a situation not specifically provided for in this agreement, then the rights, privileges, remedies and obligations of the parties to the Individual Agreement in respect to such matter or thing shall be determined by arbitration.

The procedure under this Article shall be the same procedure as outlined in Section 2, Article XV of the Guild Basic Agreement; except, however, that in lieu of the provisions of Subdivisions (d) and (e) as contained in said Section 2, Article XV of the Guild Basic Agreement, the Arbitrators shall be appointed as follows:

(a) The Guild shall appoint two arbitrators who, if the Author is a party to the proceedings, shall be approved by the Author; the Manager shall appoint one arbitrator, and the Backer shall appoint one arbitrator. These arbitrators shall be appointed within seven days from the mailing of the complaint. When the Guild is a party to the proceeding, it may appoint as arbitrator a member of the Guild other than an officer, and such member shall not be disqualified merely because of his membership in the Guild.

(b) The arbitrators so appointed, or a majority of them, shall, within ten days from the date of the mailing of the complaint, appoint a fifth arbitrator. In the event that the arbitrators so chosen, or a majority of them, shall not agree upon a fifth person within said ten days, then the fifth arbitrator shall be selected by the Executive Secretary of the American Arbitration Association.

(c) The arbitrators shall have the power to fix damages against any party to the Individual Agrement for a breach on his part in such sum as they shall deem fair and reasonable under the circumstances.

Section 2—Guild Action

If, as the result of an arbitration wherein the Manager or Independent Manager is complainant, an award is rendered against the Author, the Guild shall discipline the Author in such manner as in its discretion it shall deem advisable; and if the award is rendered against the Manager or Independent Manager where the Author or the Guild is complainant, the Guild may in its discretion declare such Manager or Independent Manager in bad standing.

ARTICLE IX—AMENDMENTS

This agreement may be amended at any time upon negotiation of such amendments by the Guild and the Managers.

Warners Sell Music Sales Corporation

Warner Brothers this week sold the Music Sales Corporation to Paul Gerwitz of New York. The deal concluded Warners' participation in the music retail business. The film company will confine its activity to publishing through Music Publishing Holding Corporation and its subsidiaries, Harms, Inc., M. Witmark & Sons, Remick Music Corporation and New World Music Corporation.

The Music Sales Corporation operated concessions in department stores as retail outlets for sheet music.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

CLOUDS OVER EUROPE: Laurence Olivier, Valerie Hobson, Ralph Richardson—You will be able to get along without this one. It has a rather "screwy" plot but the English English is delivered at machine gun speed to the extent that I found it difficult to understand much of it. We had a fair house the first night and how they did stay away the second! Running time, 79 minutes. Played October 8-9.—Dr. G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

FIRST OFFENDERS: Walter Abel, Beverly Roberts, Johnny Downs—A very fine program picture good for any situation. Business normal.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

LITTLE ADVENTURESS, THE: Edith Fellows, Robert Fiske, Jacqueline Wells—We played this on a double bill with "Hopalong Cassidy" to best weekend business in some time.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MR. SMITH GOES TO WASHINGTON: James Stewart, Jean Arthur, Edward Arnold, Claude Rains, Guy Kibbee, Eugene Pallette, Beulah Bondi, Ruth Donnelly—I have just seen one of the greatest emotion pictures of my life. It is a film called "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington." I am filled with song and tears and I am sitting on a mountain peak watching a new run rising over this land, States with a new insight on kindness, greatness—a new realization of the meaning of truth and freedom. For once, and it is a rare occasion indeed, I am proud to be connected with the cinema industry; thankful of the privilege to be one of that army of theatre managers whose duty it now is to make certain that every citizen in his community is on hand when "Mr. Smith" comes to town. My one regret at this moment is that a lack of foresight and of faith—however excusable because of Hollywood's notoriously high percentage of disappointments—caused critics of motion pictures to exhaust all of the superlatives in our language, so that when a truly great film arrives, sincere praise cannot be properly bestowed.

The tears were in my eyes when the picture closed, and, all during, the power of the production caused the back of my neck to crawl. I am just as tough as any of you, possibly as sophisticated. Perhaps it is all done mechanically out there in Hollywood; perhaps you will cross this off as another rave and start licking your fat thumbs to count dollar bills, but some day you will wander in and see it and if it doesn't get you, doesn't make you all Stars and Stripes Forever inside, it is not because you are "superior" and British, or heartless and Nazi; it is because you are stupid and lost.

"Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" should be shown to every member of the Senate and Congress, and if the outcome of this exhibition were a law making it compulsory for every citizen of the U. S. to see it, then I should be satisfied—even if an extra 10 per cent of the gross were exacted by the Government to go toward supporting not only those nearsighted men of movies who continue to feel the public must be treated as though possessing their own ignorance, but also those who, failures and in poverty, have attempted poison the roots of our democracy. Played October 20-25.—C. T. Cooney, Jr., Waldo Theatre Corp., Waldoboro, Maine. General patronage.

First National

ANGELS WASH THEIR FACES: "Dead End Kids," Ann Sheridan, Ronald Reagan, Bonita Granville, Frankie Thomas—This picture pleased on a weekend and drew average or better, so believe that these kids do have some following. Not quite up to their best, but an entertaining picture that you are not ashamed of.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

CONFESSIONS OF A NAZI SPY: Edward G. Robinson, Francis Lederer, Paul Lukas—Was looking for good business on this picture but was disappointed. People just don't go for this stuff, which was no fault of the picture, as most of them that did see it liked it. Running time, 102 minutes. Played October 6-8.—O. W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Rural and small town patronage.

DARK VICTORY: Bette Davis, George Brent, Humphrey Bogart, Geraldine Fitzgerald—Another hit from W. B. that did a good business. Running time, 104 minutes. Played October 14-15.—Robert Dittrich, Viking Theatre, Cranfills Gap, Texas. Small town patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box-office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

DAUGHTERS COURAGEOUS: Lane Sisters, Gale Page, John Garfield, Fay Bainter, Donald Crisp, Jeffrey Lynn, Dick Foran, May Robson, Frank McHugh—This did not come up to expectations and did not equal "Four Daughters" but it is a pleasing picture. Priscilla Lane gives very good performance and has good support from the rest of the cast. This should do over in small town. Average business. Running time, 107 minutes. Played October 13-14.—Miss Jean L. George, Jubilee Theatre, Deloraine, Manitoba, Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

DUST BE MY DESTINY: John Garfield, Priscilla Lane—Picture well received. A little difficult to sell but trailer does a fair job and word of mouth does the rest. A picture that is different not only in fact but in that it did some business. Running time, 88 minutes. Played October 8-10.—E. A. Reynolds, Strand Theatre, Princeton, Minn. Small town and country patronage.

DUST BE MY DESTINY: John Garfield, Priscilla Lane, Billy Halop, Bobby Jordan—Good picture; good business. Two of the "Dead End Kids" are in it. Running time, 88 minutes. Played October 15-16.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

DUST BE MY DESTINY: John Garfield, Priscilla Lane—Great team. I may be prejudiced and braggadocio when I say that I picked that Lane gal for stardom after seeing her in her first picture. Most natural bit of femininity ever to hit the flickers. When this doll passes her youthful stage she will be ripe for heavy dramatic parts and the ultimate successor for Bette Davis. Good business and people liked it. Running time, 88 minutes. Played September 23-28.—Stanley Lambert, Rialto Theatre, Racine, Wis. General patronage.

EACH DAWN I DIE: James Cagney, George Raft, Jane Bryan, George Bancroft—A mighty good action picture that is too tough for Sunday but a good one for any other night. Prison stuff but it still goes if presented right, and this pictures does just that. Not worth the money as Warner found out, but will do all right and will please.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

ESPIONAGE AGENT: Joel McCrea, Brenda Marshall, Jeffrey Lynn, Frank McHugh—Very good and very timely for me. Did better than average business. Everybody does good work and this new gal, Brenda Marshall, was liked by the audience. She has flashing dark eyes and a way of tossing her hair that had the playboys of the town wishing they could meet up with a gorgeous donkey like that. Running time, 83 minutes. Played October 7-10.—Stanley Lambert, Rialto Theatre, Racine, Wis. General patronage.

NO PLACE TO GO: Fred Stone, Gloria Dickson, Dennis Morgan—Another little "quickie" that did not have much or go any place. All right for double bill only. Just another picture. Running time, 55 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

OLD MAID, THE: Bette Davis, Miriam Hopkins, George Brent—I was afraid that the title and costumes would kill this one but we did average or better and pleased most everyone, including the men. Women will get a big kick out of the picture and enjoy the cry. Bette Davis does herself credit, maintaining her usual high quality performance, even the minutest details. Run it and tell the women about it. They'll get there.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BLACKMAIL: Edward G. Robinson, Ruth Hussey, Bobs Watson—Another good picture from MGM. Ideal midweek or Saturday closing picture. Brutal in spots, crammed with action and has them on the edge of their seats many times. Built up with the proper shorts you have an ideal evening's entertainment. Played October 4-6.—E. A. Reynolds, Strand Theatre, Princeton, Minn. Small town and country patronage.

DANCING CO-ED: Lana Turner, Richard Carlson, Artie Shaw and His Orchestra—Looks good enough for holdover time any place. Lana Turner is everything Metro claims her to be and we predict bright stardom for her. She comes here at a time when we need sparkling new personalities like hers. Our patrons raved about her, wanted more of her pictures. Artie Shaw's band is a great asset to selling the feature. Running time, 84 minutes. Played October 14-17.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

FAST AND FURIOUS: Franchot Tone, Ann Sothern—"Fast and Furious" is an ideal midweek picture. Picture well paced with laughs and not a dead moment. Tone back in good graces again. It isn't big but will please them all. Running time, 70 minutes. Played October 11-15.—E. A. Reynolds, Strand Theatre, Princeton, Minn. Small town and country patronage.

LADY OF THE TROPICS: Robert Taylor, Hedy Lamarr—Enough mean things have been said about this film. After all, could you make a better one? Address all replies to MGM Studios. Played September 14-15.—C. T. Cooney, Jr., Waldo Theatre Corp., Waldoboro, Maine. General patronage.

MAISIE: Ann Sothern, Robert Young, Ruth Hussey, Ian Hunter—Not bad. Although the title does nothing to indicate it, this is about half Western, but I think it will be enjoyed by most any sort of audience. Running time, 74 minutes. Played October 15-16.—Dr. G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

MIRACLES FOR SALE: Robert Young, Florence Rice, Henry Hull—This seems to be one of those mystery things, so much so that not more than a small fraction of our patrons ever found out what it was all about, and I believe our people would rather see pictures that can be followed without putting the old brain in extra high gear. Running time, 71 minutes. Played October 13-14.—Dr. G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

MUTINY ON THE BOUNTY (reissue): Clark Gable, Charles Laughton, Franchot Tone—Held up good for return run. Still remains one of the few truly great pictures ever made and never fails to thrill audiences. Running time, 130 minutes. Played October 10-13.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

THEY ALL COME OUT: Rita Johnson, Tom Neal—Here is a picture that is both entertaining and educational. You probably can not get them to "Come Out" in vast numbers, as the cast will not appeal and the title has not much drawing power, but everyone who sees the picture will be glad to have taken a chance on it. Running time, 89 minutes. Played October 6-7.—Dr. G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

THUNDER AFLOAT: Wallace Beery, Chester Morris, Virginia Grey—A swell picture that drew extra business and pleased them all. Very timely and, with Wallace Beery as the hardened old salt to bolster the dull moments, this went over in a big way. Had a hot date, thanks to Metro, and a marvelous print, nearly new.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

THUNDER AFLOAT: Wallace Beery, Chester Morris, Virginia Grey—Another Wallace Beery picture. Big, lovable Wallace that is admired by all in another good picture. I was somewhat in doubt about this one as a heavily German community and "Confessions of a Nazi Spy" folded, but this one, while dealing with submarine warfare in the last World War, does alright. It is good any day of the week and shorts should be light and fast as picture deals entirely with sea and its troubles. Chester Morris OK. Very little romance. Running time, 95 minutes. Played October 15-17.—E. A. Reynolds, Strand Theatre, Princeton, Minn. Small town and country patronage.

THUNDER AFLOAT: Wallace Beery, Chester Morris, Virginia Grey—Good picture; good business. Not the best Beery ever made but it will please the men. Shows the sinking of submarines by depth bombs. Running time, 94 minutes. Played October 18-19.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

VACATION FROM LOVE: Dennis O'Keefe, Florence Rice—Don't let this one slip up on you as we did. It's a real fine comedy. Everybody liked it. Business just fair.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

WIZARD OF OZ, THE: Judy Garland, Frank Morgan, Ray Bolger, Jack Haley, Bert Lahr, Billie Burke, Margaret Hamilton—This is a pretty picture and there is some mighty clever stuff recorded in the film but we certainly didn't break any house records. Played this on Sunday against our better judgment, due to insistence of exchange personnel, and know that a weekend would have done better. It's one of the problem child things that they make and someone has to pay the freight but if you can buy it right, run it.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

WOMEN, THE: Norma Shearer, Joan Crawford, Rosalind Russell, Paulette Goddard, Joan Fontaine; Mary Boland, Virginia Weidler—Classy. Excellent. Extended runs in any spot. Different and a credit to any house. Running time, 131 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

Monogram

ROSE OF THE RIO GRANDE: Movita, John Carroll—A fair picture that did only average business. Running time, seven reels. Played October 7-8.—Robert Dittrich, Viking Theatre, Cranfills Gap, Texas. Small town patronage.

SKY PATROL: John Trent, Marjorie Reynolds, Milburn Stone—Pleased the kids and aviation fans. Nothing colossal but got by OK. Running time, 61 minutes. Played October 14-17.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

Paramount

CASSIDY OF BAR 20: William Boyd, Russell Hayden—Weekend the biggest Saturday night that we had for some time. That's the answer.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

DEATH OF A CHAMPION: Lynne Overman, Susan Paley—A good program picture that pleased a small crowd, due, no doubt, to night football as the main competition.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

JAMAICA INN: Charles Laughton, Maureen O'Hara, Leslie Banks, Emlyn Williams—This one merely pulled the Laughton fans but at that there were quite a few. I sold Laughton as "the paunchy, suave egotist, the moronic terror of 'Jamaica Inn' ". Capitalize on the fact that the book sold over one million copies. Those Britishers had better learn to talk slower or enunciate better. The patrons burn because they miss lines of dialogue. This seems to be true with all English made product. (As if you folks didn't know it!) Running time, 97 minutes. Played October 14-17.—Stanley Lambert, Rialto Theatre, Racine, Wis. General patronage.

MAGNIFICENT FRAUD, THE: Akim Tamiroff, Lloyd Nolan, Patricia Morison, Mary Boland—That's it, "Magnificent Fraud."—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

$1,000 A TOUCHDOWN: Joe E. Brown, Martha Raye—One of the best Joe Brown pictures for the past two years. Patrons enjoyed it very much. It was really funny and had lots of laughs. Running time, 75 minutes. Played October 15-16.—S. J. Backer, Avon Theatre, Hankinson, N. D. Rural and general patronage.

ST. LOUIS BLUES: Dorothy Lamour, Lloyd Nolan, Tito Guizar—A good picture that did only an average business because of a fair. Running time, 87 minutes. Played September 29-30.—Robert Dittrich, Viking Theatre, Cranfills Gap, Texas. Small town patronage.

STAR MAKER, THE: Bing Crosby, Linda Ware, New Sparks, Louise Campbell—The best that Crosby has had for some time and that was due largely to the talented children that he had of all ages. As far as scenario goes, there was none. This Linda Ware has a swell voice, sensational in a 14-year-old girl.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

STAR MAKER, THE: Bing Crosby, Louise Campbell, Ned Sparks, Linda Ware—Our patrons like Bing, so with good support from his cast and with Sparks as his usual caustic self, this proved good box office. Appeals to young and old alike. Running time, 94 minutes. Played September 18-19.—Miss Jean L. George, Jubilee Theatre, Deloraine, Manitoba, Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

Republic

IN OLD MONTEREY: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, George Hayes—These westerns seem to be getting better but I don't break any house records with them. Have had their salesman tell me what they do in other spots but we can't do it and as far as we are concerned they are just another western with a premium on them.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

KANSAS TERRORS, THE: Three Mesquiteers (Robert Livingston, Raymond Hatton, Duncan Rinaldo), Jacqueline Wells—Average western picture suitable for Friday-Saturday. Running time, 60 minutes. Played October 20-21.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

BACHELOR MOTHER: Ginger Rogers, David Niven, Charles Coburn—You can play this and be confident that all your patrons will enjoy it. Lots of rollicking fun. Ginger Rogers will not only please her old fans but make new ones. Niven gives splendid performance. Running time, 80 minutes. Played October 9-10.—Miss Jean L. George, Jubilee Theatre, Deloraine, Manitoba, Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

FIVE CAME BACK: Chester Morris, Lucille Ball, Wendy Barrie, Kent Taylor, John Carradine, Allen Jenkins, Joseph Calleia, C. Aubrey Smith, Kent Taylor, Patric Knowles, Elisabeth Risdon—I have just been sitting for over an hour on the edge of my seat and I am pleased to report that RKO at last is responsible. Not since "The Informer" have I had the pleasure of witnessing as fine a socalled "B" picture from this company.

"Five Came Back" is one of the most entertaining, most exciting, perfectly paced and neatest films we have shown all year. It all bears out my contention that a capable group of players, none of them "stars," socalled, skillfully blended into an excellent story, will always result in a picture worthy of notice, while the countless super-colossal films, basing their bid for merit on a camera hogging pair of stuffed "stars" moving around and meandering across the screen with their faces hanging out, result in waste. To have Charles Boyer at the controls would have meant close-ups of eyes filled with haunting memories and back flashes to aged mothers in churches. Hedy Lamarr, as a passenger, would have entailed much footage devoted to eyes and eyelashes and a 1,000 feet of dewy and tropical verdure. Gentlemen, as examples, I give you the new era of "starless" pictures, good pictures with players underplaying the action and the story. On land, I give you "Stagecoach"; on the sea, "U-Boat 29"; in the air, "Five Came Back." Played September 26-27.—C. T. Cooney, Jr., Waldo Theatre Corp., Waldoboro, Maine. General patronage..

IN NAME ONLY: Cary Grant, Carole Lombard, Kay Francis—Cary Grant should never take a part as he does in this picture. He is the pawn of two women, fighting each other to possess him. No action and not much opportunity for Cary Grant to show off his natural enthusiasm. However, the "names" will pull enough to give you a good return for your investment. Running time, 94 minutes. Played September 29-October 3.—Stanley Lambert, Rialto Theatre, Racine, Wis. General patronage.

IN NAME ONLY: Carole Lombard, Cary Grant, Kay Francis—The old triangle: woman marries for money and then husband falls in love with pretty widow, but again love triumphs over lust for monetary means. K. Francis takes role of gold seeker to perfection. Splendid performances by Carole and Cary. Little less than average business. Running time, 92 minutes. Played October 16-17.—Miss Jean L. George, Jubilee Theatre, Deloraine, Manitoba, Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

WAY DOWN SOUTH: Bobby Breen, Sally Blane, Alan Mowbray—Very short. This means you have 63 minutes running start on the audience and you had better make use of it because they come out fast and you can never tell but what there might be a Metcalf or an Owens in the audience. Running time, 63 minutes. Played September 19-20.—C. T. Cooney, Jr., Waldo Theatre Corp., Waldoboro, Maine. General patronage.

State Rights

AMERICAN GANG BUSTERS, THE: John Dillinger, Alvin Karpis, "Pretty Boy" Floyd—Here's the picture that will pack the house and please. The criminal lives of these vicious desperadoes that ended with the G-Men, including Clyde Barrow, Bonnie Parker, "Machine Gun" Kelly and Bruno Richard Hauptman. Book it and dust off the SRO. Running time, 72 minutes. Played October 17.—S. J. Backer, Avon Theatre, Hankinson, N. D. Rural and general patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, THE: Basil Rathbone, Nigel Bruce, Ida Lupino—Mildly diverting.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

ARIZONA WILDCAT, THE: Jane Withers, Leo Carrillo, Pauline Moore, Henry Wilcoxon—Just fair. Did slightly better than normal business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

ELSA MAXWELL'S HOTEL FOR WOMEN: Linda Darnell, James Ellison, Ann Sothern, Elsa Maxwell, Lynn Bari—The story of young women making their way in a large city, their lives, their loves and their fear of growing old. Typical of Elsa Maxwell's saying, "Any girl in her right mind never buys her own dinner." The ladies enjoyed this but the men were not so enthusiastic. Just average business. Running time, 81 minutes. Played October 6-7.—Miss Jean L. George, Jubilee Theatre, Deloraine, Manitoba, Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

INSIDE STORY: Michael Whalen, Jean Rogers—Just a little picture suitable for the lower half of a dual. Running time, 61 minutes. Played October 10.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

JESSE JAMES: Tyrone Power, Henry Fonda ,Nancy Kelly, Randolph Scott—We played this on a return in place of some that didn't mean a thing and at bargain night prices. Did a nice business and pleased as good as the first run. Many came to see it again and if you can get a decent deal on this picture, I would say run it.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

KENTUCKY: Loretta Young, Walter Brennan, Richard Greene—Just as good as it ever was and we did a nice business on the return at bargain night prices. Had plenty come to see it again and if you can buy it right, book the picture for a return in place of some punk you don't want to run.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

MY LUCKY STAR: Sonja Henie, Richard Greene, Joan Davis, Cesar Romero, Louise Hovick, Billy Gilbert—An interesting little picture with enough of everything in it to please most any theatregoer. As usual, the ever popular Sonja Henie (she rates second to none here) was outstanding as both a skater and an actress. Particularly impressive was the tinted ice ballad based on "Alice in Wonderland." The boys were also pleased with the comedy supplied by the Davis-Ebsen duo, Miss Davis coming very close to bringing the house down, especially when she informed Sonja that they were to share the same "cell' together. Cesar Romero also crashed through with another fine performance, but the audience here was very disappointed in Richard Greene and Louise Hovick. "Pistachio Nuts" Gilbert was his usual argumentative self, adding a bit of comedy in his own inimitable style. Running time, 90 minutes. Played October 21.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

RAINS CAME, THE: Tyrone Power, Myrna Loy, George Brent—It took India and its terrific rains to bring out the true character of an English noble woman; from a women whose only thought was of herself to a woman who found a love so great that she gave up her life in order that it might not be destroyed. "Lady Esketh" as portrayed by Myrna Loy, Tyrone Power and George Brent give outstanding performances. All in all you can't miss on this picture. Running time, 101 minutes. Played September 29-30.—Miss Jean L. George, Jubilee Theatre, Deloraine, Manitoba, Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

RAINS CAME, THE: Mryna Loy, Tyrone Power, George Brent—Very good production that pleased the average movie fan. 20th Century is leading the parade. Running time, 104 minutes. Played October 8-10.—S. J. Backer, Avon Theatre, Hankinson, N. D. Rural and general patronage.

RAINS CAME, THE: Mryna Loy, Tyrone Power, George Brent—Excellent. Extended runs in any spot. Pleased to good business. Running time, 102 minutes. —W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

SECOND FIDDLE: Sonja Henie, Tyrone Power, Rudy Vallee—Tyrone "Jesse James" Powers scores another hit and the beautiful Sonja shares the honors. The cast includes Rudy Vallee and Mary Healy. An excellent musical that you can't help but enjoy. Running time, 87 minutes. Played October 15-17.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

STANLEY AND LIVINGSTONE: Spencer Tracy, Richard Greene, Nancy Kelly, Walter Brennan, Charles Coburn, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Henry Hull—Another box office hit from Fox. Outstanding performance by Spencer Tracy. He braves unknown perils of the dark interior of Africa and conquers. One of the highlights of the picture is Tracy's speech in defense of his belief in Dr. Livingstone when all but a very few friends doubted him. It has action, drama and romance plus W. Brennan's added humor to make this an unforgettable show. Running time, 101 minutes. Played September 29-30.—Jean L. George, Jubilee Theatre, Deloraine, Manitoba, Canada. Small town and rural pat-patronage.

STORY OF ALEXANDER GRAHAM BELL, THE: Don Ameche, Loretta Young, Henry Fonda—A wonderful attraction that drew only ordinary business. Played September 13-14.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

United Artists

CAPTAIN FURY: Brian Aherne, Victor McLaglen, John Carradine, June Lang, Paul Lukas—Very, very good. It has story, action and some comedy, and if this is the result of unit production they could make a lot more and business would be better (and that, I understand, is how UA produces). It certainly gets results. Aherne, McLaglen and Carradine right up on top of their roles all the way. But June Lang is rather stilted in her acting. I would say, a little more experience. She has an attractive presence, but she did not seem sure in her small role.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

CAPTAIN FURY: Brian Aherne, Victor McLaglen, Paul Lukas, June Lang—We didn't do much on this picture of the Australian Robin Hood and have never been able to sell English made or dialect pictures to our patrons. However, this is one of the better action pictures and if you can get them in, they'll like it because the action is fast.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

FOUR FEATHERS: John Clements, June Duprez, C. Aubrey Smith, Ralph Richardson—An outstanding production. Honors to John Clements for his superb performance. The best color photography I've seen for some time. A sure-fire hit at box office. Best business I've done this fall. Running time, 115 minutes. Played September 15-16.—Miss Jean L. George, Jubilee Theatre, Deloraine, Manitoba, Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

MAN IN THE IRON MASK, THE: Louis Hayward, Joan Bennett, Joseph Schildkraut, Warren William, Alan Hale—This picture drew well and it deserved the support it received. The acting all was tops and Miss Bennett more attractive than I remembered her and she did fine work as did all the characters. I, too, thought that some were stock shots but that was not apparent to the audience, I am sure. No matter. The picture pleased.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

THEY SHALL HAVE MUSIC: Jascha Heifetz, Andrea Leeds, Joel McCrea, Gene Reynolds—I was a bit afraid of this one before we played it but, Friend Exhibitors, there is absolutely no need for fear. Just play it. If Governments would put musical instruments into the hands of our children instead of guns what a grand place this old world would be. Jascha Heifetz and his violin are superb and, although he plays quite a few long selections, yet it never grows monotonous in any place. Gene Reynolds practically steals the show. He's a young star who has everything it takes and then some. Everyone enjoyed this show. Running time, 101 minutes. Played September 22-23.—Miss Jean L. George, Jubilee Theatre, Deloraine, Manitoba, Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

TOPPER TAKES A TRIP: Roland Young, Constance Bennett, Billie Burke—This, if I remember right, does not measure up to the first one. And for my audience Billie Burke with her fluttery, affected, squeaky voice puts three strikes on any picture. They don't like her and they are vocal about it. It got by as usual and it has its moments.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

Universal

BIG TOWN CZAR: Barton MacLane, Tom Brown, Ed Sullivan—Played with "Unexpected Father." No one seemed to like either one of these.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

HAWAIIAN NIGHTS: Johnny Downs, Mary Carlisle, Constance Moore—A swell little feature. Laughs, swing and good native sequence. Running time, 65 minutes. Played October 21-24.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

SPY RING, THE: William Hall, Jane Wyman—Average "B" entertainment. Nothing to get excited about. Running time, 63 minutes. Played October 10-13.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

THREE SMART GIRLS GROW UP: Deanna Durbin, Nan Grey, Helen Parrish, Charles Winninger, Robert Cummings, William Lundigan—Positively aces. Couldn't ask for a better picture. Upped average business for a good three days. Running time, 122 minutes. Played October 18-20.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

TWO BRIGHT BOYS: Jackie Cooper, Freddie Bartholomew—Average entertainment that got by in good shape. Running time, 67 minutes. Played October 18-20.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

UNDER-PUP, THE: Gloria Jean, Robert Cummings, Nan Grey, C. Aubrey Smith, Virginia Weidler, Ann Gillis—A picture that movie houses were made to show. Sparkles with down-to-earth goodness and brought us excellent comments. Gloria Jean is definitely a hit. Running time, 89 minutes. Played October 21-24.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

UNEXPECTED FATHER: Mischa Auer, Baby Sandy—Played with "Big Town Czar." No one seemed to like either one of these.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

UNEXPECTED FATHER: Mischa Auer, Baby Sandy—A picture that is a picture. Absolutely tops in all respects. This boy, Auer, has something on the ball that they all like. Do not waste this one on a double or bargain night as it is good for the best playing time in the week for a short run. A comedy that will certainly bring them in. Running time, 78 minutes.—A J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

WHEN TOMORROW COMES: Irene Dunne, Charles Boyer—A wonderful show in all respects but we had to show to too many empty seats. It must have been too highbrow. Anyway, the draw is very poor. The story starts from nowhere and gets there. In our small midwestern town it is just another picture good for midweek date only. Running time, 95 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Warner Brothers

INDIANAPOLIS SPEEDWAY: Pat O'Brien, John Payne, Ann Sheridan, Gale Page—Good programmer. Second half for the big spots. Stand alone in the sticks. Running time, 81 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

COMMUNITY SING, NO. 1 (Crosby Hits): King Sisters—Tops. This reel is too short; should be made into a double reel. Very good. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

LONE MOUNTIES, THE: Krazy Kat Cartoons—Just another cartoon. Not so hot. Running time, six minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

MONTMARTRE MADNESS: Music Hall Vanities—Not so hot. This series has been a disappointment the whole season. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

PIE A LA MAID: Charley Chase—Real good. If you want a comedy, book this one.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SOJOURN IN INDIA: Columbia Tours—Very interesting and instructive.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

STORY OF ELIAS HOWE, THE: Fools Who Made History—The first of this series is very good. Heavy, so run with a light feature, action or comedy. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BOOKWORM, THE: Cartoons—Good cartoon in color. Running time, seven minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

DOG DAZE: Our Gang—Usual Gang comedy that pleased the kids.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

FOOTBALL THRILLS OF 1938: Pete Smith Specialties—Swell for your sport fans. Pete Smith picks out the highlights of eight big games, then shows them to you in marvelous photography. Every good play pictures in detail with Pete Smith doing the explaining.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

GOLDILOCKS AND THE THREE BEARS: Cartoons—A very good cartoon, worth a date. Third time I had it set and finally got it.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

HELP WANTED: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—You cannot go wrong on a Metro short. Excellent as is this top series of the industry. Running time, 19 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

YANKEE DOODLE GOES TO TOWN: Passing Parade, No. 6—Better get this right now. Swell short that will make you feel right to be an American citizen. Not propaganda but swell stuff.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

Paramount

DESERT ADVENTURE, A: Grantland Rice Sportlights—These boys really get the job done with their little bow and arrow. Exciting sport reel and swell for action program.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

MUSIC THROUGH THE YEARS: Jan Garber and His Orchestra—This is a swell musical and you'll enjoy every minute of it. Will please all classes of patronage and worth a date on your best time.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

BROTHER GOLFERS: Turnesa Brothers—No good for small towns where there are only a few golfers in proportion to the audience. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

MYSTIC SIAM: Magic Carpet Series—Just a filler.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

SAND HOGS: Adventures of the Newsreel Cameraman—An excellent portrayal of the hazardous duties which confronted those brave men who worked so diligently and so intelligently to construct the beautiful Lincoln Tunnel, that we might travel between New York and New Jersey with speed and comfort. If you haven't booked this one yet, do so at once and give your patrons a break. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

STRANGER RIDES AGAIN, THE: Terry-Toons—Awful. Fox certainly makes very poor cartoons.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Universal

GOING PLACES: No. 64—Excellent, as has been this entire series throughout the past season. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Vitaphone

BROADWAY BUCKAROO: Red Skelton—I didn't see this but the help said it was very good.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

DANGEROUS DAN McFOO: Merrie Melodies—Swell. Do not miss this one. Plenty of laughs. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

DEAN OF THE PASTEBOARDS: Vitaphone Varieties—If you think you can play a good game of cards, see this short. If you have been wondering why you couldn't find the pea in that good old "three shells and a pea game," see this short. For its type it's OK. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

DEFYING DEATH: Floyd Gibbons' "Your True Adventure" Series—Good, as are most of this series.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

HOBO GADGET BAND: Merrie Melodies—This cartoon is just different enough to be good and worth a date on most any program.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

JEEPERS CREEPERS: Looney Tunes—Entertaining black and white cartoon. Running time, seven minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

LARRY CLINTON AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—A fair orchestra short with some good singing by Bea Wain. The boys here were not particularly impressed with the numbers, the only one having any appeal being "Old Folks." Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

PORKY'S HOTEL: Looney Tunes—Good enough black and white cartoon. Running time, seven minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theater, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

POW WOW: Technicolor Specials—A very nice treatise on the American Indian in color with a glimpse of them at their yearly gathering on the New Mexico reservation. Met them coming home and saw where they had been in this short subject.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

SCALP TROUBLE: Looney Tunes—Another cartoon that did its share of filling in.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

WITNESS TROUBLE: Grouch Club—Very good. Plenty of laughs. Do not be afraid of it. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Miscellaneous

LOUIS-PASTOR FIGHT FILM: As good a fight picture as we have played in some time. It did extra business but nothing like the Louis-Schmeling fight.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Serials

Columbia

FLYING G-MEN: Robert Paige, Richard Fiske, James Craig, Lorna Gray—Ran the first episode and wasn't so crazy about the buy. This company's serial lack that certain something. I still believe that a big market waits for another "Green Archer."—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

SPIDER'S WEB, THE: Warren Hull, Iris Meredith—We have just finished this serial and will say that it did create some interest. They put plenty of action in these but no cast and the direction is terrible. Don't know why someone can't make a good one again.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

Film Quiz Planned

Motion Picture Specialties, Lester S. Tobias general sales manager, has acquired for the United States "Keen-o-Kwizz," a series of motion pictures applying the radio quiz principle to the screen. The first series will cover 13 weeks. Each film contains 10 questions which the patrons are to answer on specially prepared cards. "Keen-o-Kwizz" is declared by Mr. Tobias' office to be free from lottery.

Six All-Negro Films

Argus Pictures will produce six feature pictures with all-Negro casts. The first, yet untitled, will be a comedy drama with a cast including Gladys Snyder and Florence O'Brien of "The Swing Mikado," Monte Halley, Sheldon Brooks, writer of "The Dark Town Strutters Ball," and F. E. Miller. The film will be directed by Arthur Dreifuss and distributed by International Roadshows.

RKO To Release Garmes' Film

"And So Goodbye," independent production made by Lee Garmes, will be released through RKO. The picture is from a story by Mildred Cram and Adele Comandini. The picture will be made in the East, with Charles Winninger, C. Aubrey Smith, Harry Carey, Maria Ouspenskaya, Binnie Barnes, Jean Parker and Richard Carlson. A. Edward Sutherland will direct.

Christie-Monogram Deal

W. Ray Johnson, Monogram president and Al Christie, comedy producer, are discussing a possible three-picture deal. The films would be made at the Eastern Service Studio. Al Christie has just directed "Everything Happens to Ann" for Arcadia Pictures.

Rice To Head Dramatists Guild

Elmer Rice will succeed Robert E. Sherwood as president of the Dramatists Guild at the election next Tuesday. He has been nominated for the post and is assured of election.

New Orleans Manager Retires

J. A. C. Miller, manager of the Lafayette theatre in New Orleans, has turned over control to the Merrie Shows, Inc. Mr. Miller has been in ill health. Charles Levy, head of Merrie Shows, assumed management of the Lafayette.

John J. O'Connor, RKO theatre head, has taken over control of the Des Moines Orpheum which was being operated under a pool arrangement by the A. H. Blank circuit. The pool was terminated by mutual consent.

U. S. FURTHER EASES PROCEDURE IN KEY TRUST CASE AGAINST MAJORS

Williams Calls Trial Before March Unlikely; Interrogatories Simplified; Extension to November 15th for Answers

The United States Department of Justice seems to be beginning to take into account the problems confronting the major motion picture companies in their complex legal preparations against the Department's "key" anti-trust attack, in the socalled New York case, in which suit the Government seeks to divorce production-distribution from exhibition, and change other forms of policy and procedure of the business.

"Breathing Spell" Indicated

After setting out at the beginning with an expressed determination to push its attack to an early conclusion, and battling the majors through the early months of the preliminary court skirmishes, the Department last month gave indications of an "easing-up." Paul Williams, assistant to Thurman Wesley Arnold, U. S. assistant attorney general in charge of trust prosecutions, said that a trial before March, 1940, was unlikely, giving the distributor defendants assurance of a "breathing spell."

The Department then agreed to an extension to November 1st of the date for the answering of complex interrogatories demanded of the majors. This week the Department further relaxed its stand by agreeing to narrow some of the interrogatories. At the same time, it granted still another extension, to November 15th, of the date for the defense either to prepare answers or object to the interrogatories as filed.

New Aide Appointed

However, personnel of the Government forces arrayed against the motion picture industry were strengthened this week by the appointment of William P. Farnsworth, at one time second to Sol A. Rosenblatt in administration of the industry's NRA Code, as a special attorney in the anti-trust division of the Department of Justice, assigned to assist Paul Williams, special assistant to the Attorney General in charge of film prosecutions.

Mr. Farnsworth's first connection with the administration was during the Hugh Johnson days when he was a deputy administrator in the motion picture division of the National Recovery Administration. He was later connected with Hallie Flanagan's Federal Theatre Project.

Appointment of the former N. R. A. official was seen in Washington as a step by the Department of Justice in preparation for actual trial of some of the several cases it has filed against the major and large independent circuits in various sections of the country, which are now going through the preliminary maneuver stage.

At one time Mr. Farnsworth produced Broadway shows, following his embarkation on a legal career. In 1933 he joined the NRA. At the time NRA laid off some 1,500 of its personnel Mr. Farnsworth stayed on and from March, 1937, to August of the same year he was New York administration officer of the Federal Theatre Project. After this work he returned to law practice.

No one, however, in corporate, operating or legal circles within the defendant major companies, has outwardly expressed any expectation of abandonment by the Government of its case on the basis of the Department's new easier procedure.

MORE GRAND JURY PROBING ON COAST

Further U. S. Grand Jury proceedings in the film income tax and labor cases which are being pressed in Los Angeles by the Department of Justice will be initiated within a few days, it was disclosed last Friday in Washington by Attorney General Frank Murphy.

The work in Los Angeles is "not finished," according to Attorney General Murphy, although it had been understood that the initial proceedings had been completed when a transcript of the testimony was forwarded, two weeks ago, to Washington by Charles Carr, special assistant to Frank Murphy. No decision has been reached in the cases, the Department chief said, although a quick termination following the collection of additional evidence which is now being sought. Attorney General Murphy denied that any offer of settlement has been made in any of the income tax cases.

"Satisfactory Progress," Reports Williams

A partial agreement by the Government to narrow some of its interrogatories to specific cases in the New York anti-trust suit was reached Monday in New York after a conference between attorneys for the majors and Paul Williams, special assistant U. S. attorney general.

Mr. Williams termed "satisfactory" the progress made by himself and the attorneys for the majors on the difficult question of interrogatories. He also said that he did not expect answers to be made to both interrogatories from the Government and the majors for at least two or three months. According to him, the interrogatories which will be filed in addition to the one already submitted by United Artists will not cause the Government any difficulty in its answers.

Judge Advises Majors To Settle Out of Court

Majors charged with keeping desirable films away from an independent theatre were advised last Friday by Federal Judge William H. Kirkpatrick at Philadelphia to settle out of court. Otherwise, the judge indicated that the ruling would go in favor of the Landis theatre, Vineland, N. J., which seeks an injunction to "smash monopolistic practices by a combine which gives chain theatres preference on runs of feature films."

The case has been under consideration since July. On October 20th the judge summoned to his chambers William A. Schnader, former attorney general, and Morris Wolf, attorneys for the 13 defendants, and State Senator Harry A. Shapiro, counsel for the Landis theatre. The judge told the conference that "the plaintiff was entitled to some redress" and suggested an "amicable settlement."

Warners operates two theatres that compete with the Landis in Vineland.

The defendants in the action are: Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.; Warner Brothers Circuit Management Corp.; Warner Bros. Theatres of New Jersey; Warner Bros. Theatres of Pennsylvania; Vitagraph, Inc.; Paramount; RKO; Loew's Inc.; Twentieth Century-Fox; Columbia; Universal and United Artists.

Revised Interrogatories Served in Florida Suit

The Washington Operating Company, which runs the Cameo and Surf theatres in the Miami area, has served revised interrogatories on Paramount Enterprises, Inc., Wometco circuit and the major distributors. John W. Holland, federal district court judge, sustained the objection of defense counsel that the original interrogatories were directed at officials of the companies rather than at the companies.

Henry K. Gibson, attorney for the Washington Operating Company, requested in the revised interrogatories that the individual replying for the company state his official position. Questions asked included matters pertaining to sales personnel and sales policies. The questions try to establish grounds for the charge of monopoly which the plaintiff has brought against the defendants. An attempt is made to determine if the theatres of Paramount Enterprises and the Wometco circuit received special prices, cancellation privileges, allowance for advertising and other expenses. The questions likewise seek to ascertain the policy of the distributors towards independent theatres.

Vitagraph was served with 53 interrogatories, Paramount 50 and the others—Loew's, Universal, Twentieth Century-Fox, RKO-Radio and Columbia Pictures—38 questions. The answers must be submitted within 15 days, but the companies are expected to file objections in federal court on November 7th.

Depositions Taken In La Crosse Suit

Attorneys in the $1,000,000 suit of the La Crosse Theatres Company against the Welworth Theatres Company, Minnesota Amusement Company, Twentieth Century-Fox, United Artists, Paramount and other companies collected last week depositions from officials of theatre companies. Depositions were taken from W. D. Burford, Aurora, Ill., official of the La Crosse Theatre Co.; M. Levy, Minneapolis, Twentieth Century-Fox representative, and Ed Ruben, Minneapolis, president of the Welworth company.

The suit was introduced by the La Crosse company about a year ago. The defendants, the theatre companies and film distributing companies are charged with operating in restraint of trade.

Westway-Edgwood Injunction Hearing

November 15th has been set by federal district court judge, Calvin W. Chestnut, in Baltimore, for hearing the injunction application of the Westway Theatre Company against the Edgwood Theatre Company and seven major companies. The judge has informed the attorneys for both sides of the decision.

Wright Assigned To Griffith Case

Robert L. Wright, special assistant attorney general, has returned to Washington from duties in Chicago in order to work on the Government's anti-trust suit against the Griffith Circuit in Oklahoma.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor
GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

The "What" and "Why" of Showmanship

That's a happy term coined by Elmer Rhoden—"showbusinessman"—which could apply to the theatreman possessing a well-secured sense of promotional balance in exercising his showmanship. Let's say he's the kind of a lad who restrains his enthusiasm over a project until its possibilities can be charted in recognizable boxoffice channels. That would only be good business, defined perhaps in terms of "what" and "why". Campaigns reported here recently can be pointed out as sound examples of this what-and-why procedure in dealing with various phases of exhibition. For instance:

The city of Huron, South Dakota, celebrates an annual Cow-Hen-Sow Day in recognition of the commercial importance to the community of these agricultural assets. Invitations are limited to farmers and rural residents in the trade territory. Everything is free, including movies. The three Minnesota Amusement theatres are turned over to the committee by City Manager Jim Eshelman for special morning shows, the expense of which is borne by the cooperating merchants.

That's the "what" of the tiein. Eshelman explains the "why" this way:

"First, unquestionably we get many people in our theatres on this day who return as steady customers. Second, our community standing is strengthened by cooperating with the Chamber of Commerce and merchants. Third, this program of motion picture entertainment keeps out any other form of opposition amusement that might otherwise be brought to town for the occasion."

Recently detailed in these pages, the "what" of Wally Cowen's campaign on "Beau Geste" at the Princess in Modesto, Calif., was a concentration of his campaign upon the farm folks and rural trade. The "why" was based on the unsettled weather the week previous to the opening, which delayed harvesting of the grape crop. Writes Wally:

"This led us to believe that farmers and harvesters would have time on their hands to come to town in response to our campaign. That they did so is shown by the attendance, mostly from out of town, which gave us a very satisfactory gross we would not have gotten otherwise."

From the time he dated in "Stanley and Livingstone" at the M. & P. Uptown, Bath, Me., Francis Gooch worked over a "what" concerning original newspaper reports that might have been carried in the local press, long ago, on the famed controversy upon which the story of the picture is based. Gooch thumbed back through the daily's files and found his material in the 1872 volume. The "why" was translated into a feature, written by the Round Tabler, incorporating quotes from the early stories, in addition to a strong buildup for the date.

"The feature was given unusual space and position," Francis reports, "because both the editor and the publisher were pleased to have the fact brought home to readers that the paper was going strongly nearly 70 years ago."

There is no one certain formula for successful showmanship, since it is made up of many differing factors that defy analysis. The nearest thing to it is a process of elimination of every "what" that cannot logically be linked to a profitable "why".

It may be a bit on the fabulous side, but the story is still being told of the exhibitor who wanted to put on a high school football pep night as a tiein with the "Hunchback of Notre Dame".

It is pleasing to have members point to this department as a consistent source of boxoffice aid. But the best expression of these services is in evidence when Round Tablers who have been frequently mentioned here on the work they are doing are selected for better jobs.

That immediately would concern Chuck Shannon of the Warner Pittsburgh district, just promoted to the circuit's new Boulevard, and Dave Martin to Fox West Coast's United Artists in Inglewood, California. Both are deserved breaks to men who rate them, as will be endorsed by members who follow them in these pages.

Round Table In Pictures

With his assistant pulling an inquiring reporter gag, Lou Hart at Schine's Glove in Gloversville sent his sound truck out as advance on "Stanley and Livingstone", covering the main streets of every nearby town. To those correctly answering questions relating to the explorer and reporter, guest tickets were awarded.

Panel below is a permanent display promoted by Jim Eshelman at the Huron in Huron, S. D., in prominent store window. Clock, the property of the store, carries copy above to the effect that folks always have time for a good show. Scene stills and plug for current and forthcoming attractions are included, in addition to institutional copy.

Walking book-bally was used as an advance on "Wizard of Oz" by Manager Earle H. Bailey at the Harris-Warren in Warren, Pa. Cutouts of the various characters in the picture were pasted on either side of the book, together with title, cast and playdates. That lad with the broad smile is Earle, himself.

Tying in with the local election for "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington", Dick Walsh, Lafayette Theatre, Buffalo, built an election booth, ballot boxes, etc., for his lobby display. Standings of local candidates were changed daily on blackboard. Display also consisted of regulation voting machine which was loaned by local election board for the occasion. Also planted around the booths were scene stills from the picture.

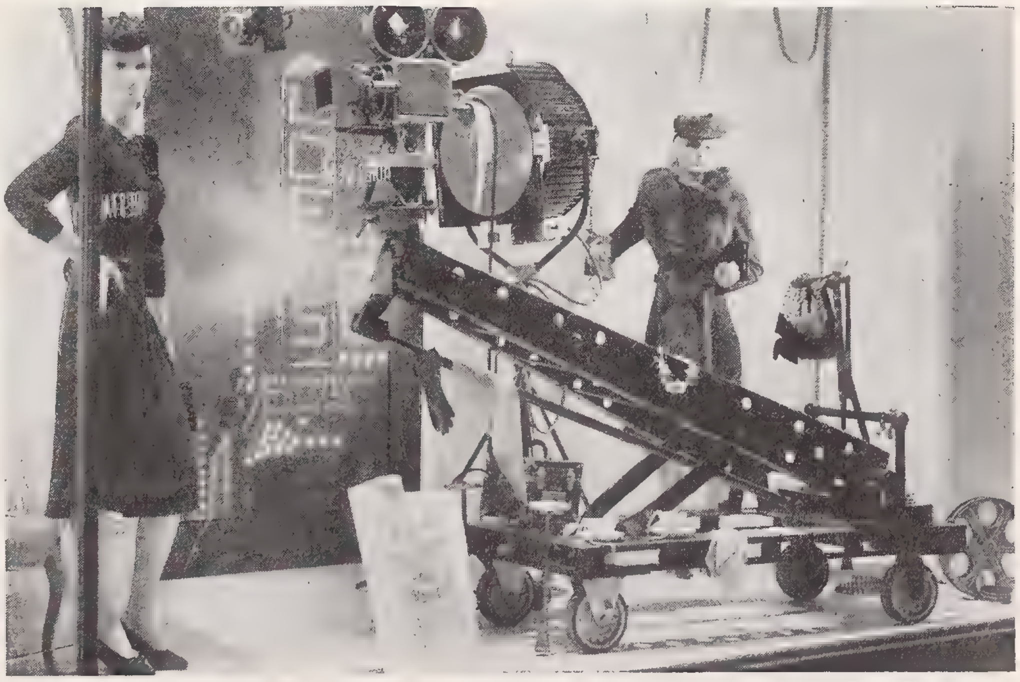
5TH AVE GIRL

The city fathers of Waterbury, Conn., granted permission to Ed Fitzpatrick at the Poli to affix "Fifth Avenue Girl" street signs to available lampposts around the main stem and business intersections. To be noted at right are the small white arrows with title, pointing to the general direction of the theatre where the marquee held an advance plug for the picture. Signs were put up at peak traffic hours to gather crowds to watch the doings.



The first time in Toronto that a store has given six windows to any one picture is reported by Stan Gosnell of Loew's Theatre for his date on "The Women", display at right being representative of the elaborate flash. Further picture atmosphere was supplied by Gosnell who included such shooting appurtenances as boom, klieg lights, cans of film, etc., etc., store furnishing the background. In addition to the windows, the theatreman secured three quarter-page ads with full picture mention.

"FIRST" OF THE "LAST"

Selection of the Fortnighters in the first two-week preliminary period of the Fourth and Last Quarter of the year finds 30 entrants selected for Appointments as the Competitions near their 1939 finish. As usual, who they are and where is noted here. It may further be noted that most of the names mentioned are of theatremen who have been in the thick of the battle since the beginning.

The Second Fortnight of the Quarter is now current. In all, there are just four two-week periods until the finish of the Quarter and the selections for consideration in the Annual Awards. This selection will be from among entrants conspicuously represented in the Quarterly honors, and the scoring for the rest of November and December will no doubt have some bearing on the final choices.

Gumbel Utilizes Neon For Street Bally Sign

Reported by Hap Hasselo as being a ballyhoo that knocked John Q. Public right off its local pins was the ingenious neon sign devised and constructed by his projectionist, Fred Gumbel at the State Theatre, in Worthington, Minn. The sign itself, measuring some 22 by 28 inches, had batteries placed in a small box with wires running up the metal tube to the neon.

Sign, which could be switched on and off at will, proved to be a street stopper. Entire cost being $5.00 for the tube and 75c for the lumber used in construction. Sign weighed 20 pounds, and when the bally man stopped to rest, there was always a crowd of interested spectators who gathered to admire and read the theatre message.

Street Ballys Featured In Recent Lampe Activities

Lad dressed uniform of the French Foreign Legion paraded the streets of Syracuse, as part of Gus Lampe's "Beau Geste" campaign at the Keith Theatre, back banner carrying title, cast and play dates. After opening of the picture a large trough full of sand was planted on busy corners and same boy in uniform traced title, theatre, stars and playdates in the sand.

Through tieup effected with the Syracuse Herald on "Honeymoon in Bali," Lampe planted an add-a-line contest with unfinished limericks on the picture run daily, guest tickets going to those submitting best "last lines." While for "Star Maker," lad dressed in cap and gown with back banner sang "School Days" as he worked through downtown area. Large victrola promoted from store was used out front playing hit tunes from picture, music stores were tied in featuring window displays of music and mounted stills and radio coverage included spot announcements, transcriptions, etc.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Wright Builds Entrenchment For "Bombs Over London"

Big punch of Erle Wright's "Bombs Over London" campaign at the Strand in Syracuse was a sidewalk display consisting of an entrenchment built of sandbags inside of which was an old anti-aircraft gun captured in the last war. At each side were two large rapid-fire guns which were obtained from Army headquarters and next to which was a boy dressed in full field equipment.

Four-foot cutout bombs with red lights attached hung from under marquee, windows of boxoffice and all front glass doors were strapped with paper tape, similar to those used overseas to protect windows in case of air raids, sound effect records of airplane and machine gun were used on loudspeaker from roof to marquee and window cards were planted in strategic spots about town.

Author of Story Tied to Opening of "Roaring 20s"

Centering his campaign for the world premiere of "Roaring Twenties" at the Spreckels in San Diego around the fact that Mark Hellinger authored the film, Lou Metzger landed newspaper stories with art work on the ex-columnist, together with photos and copies of wires from various celebrities. Blowups of these wires were also prominently displayed in the theatre lobby. Featured in the theatre was a 40 by 60 display containing large photo of the journalist, together with his wire and picture copy.

Street bally consisted of man dressed to represent the outstanding character of the picture, "Old Man Prohibition", with back copy reading "Remember me? I helped you sow your wild oats in the 'Roaring Twenties,' now at the —," etc. Special front was created for the opening, with giant cutout head of Cagney, with stills as panels on either side. Special 24-sheets were made up on silk screen process, with figures of Cagney and Lane measuring 10 feet in height. These were posted in the best locations in town ahead of opening. Additional outside billing was gotten through the posting of half-sheets on municipal trash cans.

Celebrities Wire Congrats

For his opening day ad Metzger ran copy of congratulatory telegram from New York addressed to Hellinger at the theatre and signed by such celebrities as Winchell, Sobol, Vallee, James Walker, Bert Lahr, J. C. Flippen, and others. Following day's ad carried copy of Hellinger's wire to Metzger in acknowedgment.

Boxing Gloves Distributed By Pollock on "Golden Boy"

On the recent Friday the 13th, Les Pollock at Loew's, in Rochester, used as his street bally on "Golden Boy" a man dressed to represent a fight manager who was sent out to distribute small tags on which were printed "Who says Friday the 13th is unlucky? Your luck will change when you see," etc.; attached to card were miniature celluloid boxing glove charms.

Wurlitzer Music Store devoted an entire window to display of violins with scene stills and tiein copy as did beauty parlor, department store and large paint store, whose tiein copy was to the effect that artists using their paints would find they had as much punch as the picture.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Mitchell's Novelty Envelopes

Distributed on streets to store clerks, office girls and at beauty parlors were the teaser envelopes used by Round Tabler J. L. Mitchell at the Genesee Theatre, in Waukegan, Ill., as an advance on "Bachelor Mother." Outside carried copy reading: "Something every baby needs. Look inside!" In the envelope was a pink slip attached to which was a safety pin picture copy, cast and playdates.

The 'What's What' About Display Ads On the Next Pages

(3) Instead of piling copy into this 120 lines on 2 col., for "Mr. Smith" at the Strand, Portland, Me., Leo Young concentrated the selling atop with an endorsement under his signature. Body of ad then was kept for title, stars and cast, with cut of leads making a neat eye-catcher.

(4) To cover as wide a boxoffice horizon as possible on "Mr. Smith" at the Alvin, Pittsburgh, the Tyson-Hoel ad forces of Harris Amusement adopted the conversational slant for first-person emphasis about the date. The reverse "if" panels were intended as eye-stoppers, copy leading easily into the further endorsement in the circle. Size: 90 lines on 2 col.

(5) Impressed by the MGM trade ads in the Herald on "Tropics," "Kal" Kalberer dug into the newspaper mat services to find something similar. The 55 lines on 2 col., here reproduced carries out the light handling the Round Tabler strove for on the date at the Indiana, Washington, Ind.

(6) A bit of circusing in display was the appeal decided upon by John LaDue for attention to his coming show at the Warner-Strand, Akron, Ohio, and reported by district head, Dick Wright. The equal worth of both attractions was indicated with the ad in four columns on 95 lines, copy divided to point up both pictures. Layout was held together with the reverse circle in center emphasizing the two features and theatre.

(8) The cuts of the three leads, and tag line above were selected as the big calibre selling points in Everett Callow's 135 lines on 2 col. for date on "The Women" at the Boyd, Philadelphia. The Warner zone ad head capitalized on the attraction's wide ad-

TALENT QUEST HELD ON "STAR MAKER" BY LOEW'S

In view of the success during the summer of beauty contests, swing sessions, etc., Loew's Theatres have arranged a series of talent quests in conjunction with "The Star Maker", based on the amateur night idea.

Preliminaries were held in 15 houses, winners appearing in the semi-finals in the various New York boroughs. These winners will compete on the stage of Loew's State on Broadway for the grand finals and cash prizes.

To publicize these events each of the 70 Loew theatres displayed posters and distributed heralds and application blanks. Trailers were shown and contests advertised.

Important Space Promoted For Jubilee Celebration

The industry Golden Jubilee celebration was tied in by Kal Kalberer for his date on "Hollywood Cavalcade" at the Indiana, Washington, Ind., by displays of modern projection equipment together with the projector used in the first local picture theatre. Prominent windows were obtained for showing of professional Hollywood camera, recording devices and amplification units, all borrowed from local commercial production plants. Papers thought well enough of the exhibits to run front-page stories.

For the Jubilee publicity in Chicago, full pages were promoted from the dailies. The Herald-American ran a page headed: "A Tribute to the Motion Picture Industry" describing highlights in the past 50 years, copy also urging readers to "see a movie tonight." The Times used a full-page half tone headed "Half a Century of Progress," institutional copy flanked by panels calling attention to the paper's amusement advertising and critic personalities.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Memoriam Editorial Secured By Baker for "Nurse Cavell"

Manager Arthur Baker of the Circle Theatre, in Indianapolis, Ind., cooperated with the Indianapolis Star for a memoriam editorial devoted to Edith Cavell as a boost for the engagement. The editorial was used on October 21th, just 24 years after the famed nurse's death.

Blowups from the Star's issues of 1915 covering the tragic episode were used for display in the lobby. Another valuable angle in Baker's campaign was finding and spotting on the radio of an outstanding World War nurse.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Newsies Sell "Geste" for Tully

Dressing one of his staff in a regulation French Foreign Legion uniform, Ralph Tully at the Central, in Biddeford, Maine, sent him out on streets with back banner heralding the opening of "Beau Geste." Another street stunt consisted of oufitting the Daily Journal newsies with imprinted Legion hats which the lads wore three days ahead and currently as they sold their papers.

Warner-men Flood City With Special Edition on "Babes"

Recent promotional activities in Warner Philadelphia Theatres circles from Everett C. Callow, zone publicity head, featured a tiein with the Daily News, tabloid sheet, that concerned a replate and extra run on behalf of "Babes in Arms" at the Boyd. After the regular run on opening day, paper made over front page and page three with picture copy, page one occupied exclusively with head reading: "Babes in Arms Take Phila. by Storm." Inside page carried three-line banner head, action shot of Rooney and Garland, scenes from the picture and stories.

The extra run of 30,000 copies was distributed, starting at seven o'clock, to main traffic centers, bus and subway terminals and transfer points. By 8:30, the downtown district was covered and by 10, half hour after regular edition of the daily, all theatre copies had been distributed by the special Warner force. Theatre paid cost of the papers, a first time in local history that a front page was promoted for a picture tiein, before the regular edition appeared.

Swank Screening for "Women"

Conducted by WCAU, leading local station, was advance invitational screening for "The Women" and fashion show, sponsored by Warners for showing at the Boyd and reported by Callow to have attracted newsworthy audiences, the event getting a heavy play in the press. Canopy and carpet were laid out front of the station with prominent names announced as they arrived over special broadcast which included the fashion show.

Toward selling newspaper and society women on its service, Postal Telegraph was promoted by the Warner-man to distribute a trick compact, the face of which was a miniature telegraph blank which took indelible ink. To the gift was appended a message from "The Women" in feminine handwriting. As a direct appeal to men, professional models were engaged to place asters—a man's flower—on coat lapels of passersby at prominent corners. To avoid duplication, the stunt was pulled only on one day.

Exploitation Briefs Here & There

Guest tickets were awarded by Bill Johnson to entrants submitting the best ads on "Only Angels Have Wings" as an advance on that date at the Opera House, in Millinocket, Maine. Other contests for which prizes were awarded was one in which readers were instructed to look through the national and fan magazines and submit all the ads found on the picture. In addition, tickets were also offered on a camera slant, participants asked to take pictures of anything with wings, with a promoted camera going to the winner.

Six girls on as many bicycles, each with a title letter on her back was the street bally used for "Maisie" by Manager D. M. Dillenbeck of the Rialto, in Bushnell, Ill. Also ahead of playdate, theatreman promoted a midget auto racer which with banners was driven about town and into the nearby towns. During run of picture car was stationed in front of theatre.

Obtained by Orville Rennie, manager of the Rivoli Theatre, at Hastings, Neb., was a double truck on "Wizard of Oz." Based on the old coloring gag, which focuses the attention of the entire family on the attraction, the only cost to the theatre was a little leg work or passes for the kids. Banner across top of pages carried picture copy and small cuts of the various characters portrayed; in addition, each merchant's ad included picture mention.

Recent activities reported on by Don Nichols, at the Virginia Theatre, in Harrisonburg, Vt., include the distribution of red overprinted newspapers which when folded carried the large scare word "War." On unfolding balance of title "Clouds Over Europe" were plainly visible together with play dates.

For his "Lone Ranger" serial, Don dressed a lad in cowboy attire with front and back banner carrying selling copy. Water-glassed on sidewalk directly in front of his house were giant title letters, etc.

Much comment and goodwill was secured by Wally Allen recently during his run of "The Old Maid" at the Kentucky, in Lexington, Ky., when he advertised his show as "not for children." A one-sheet also stressing this angle was planted in front of boxoffice. Through tieup with local shoe shop, fan photos of Bette Davis were distributed, merchant's ad on back defraying all costs.

Tying up local chain grocer, H. P. Haggar at the Castle Cinema in Merthyr Tudfil, Glamorganshire, England, for "Blockade" secured 12 windows all containing displays of bread and tins of beef. In the center of each display was card reading: "Innocent women and children are deprived of these through a blockade, see the film at," etc., etc. For theatre display, war appliances were featured in the center of which was an illuminated card containing the closing dialogue of the picture as spoken by Henry Fonda.

vance by using his space mostly as an artistic announcement, a few lines of copy planted to tiein the play.

(13) In a 40 lines on 2 col., "white," Hal Kopplin, Miami Wometco circuit ad head, aimed to translate the story-triangle of "Intermezzo" into familiar settings by quoting each of the characters involved so that the title would be clearly understood. Kopplin's use of the oval for credit lines also held the three panels together.

(14) With three different show components to sell, Bob Paskow, Warner New Jersey zone ad head, sought for a closeknit handling of the display for the Stanley, Jersey City, so as not to neglect the names in each attraction, though concentration on "Bali" was obviously aimed for. Straight copy panel for personal of Artie Shaw was selected for further emphasis. Size: 100 lines on 2 col.

Rules for the Quigley Awards

Awards are now voted on single exploitations and not on complete campaigns as formerly. This includes goodwill and institutional ideas, as well as those on pictures.

Each Quarter is divided into two-week preliminary contests.

Winners in each preliminary are appointed Fortnighters.

Entries of Fortnighters in each Quarter are judged for Quigley Quarterly Plaques, Medals, Citations.

Quarterly Plaque, Medal and Citation Winners are appointed Quartermasters.

Entrants registering the best records of Quigley Plaques, Medals and Citations in the four Quarters will be eligible for the Grand Awards judging.

There are no classifications of population or situation. Everyone starts from scratch.

Every theatreman everywhere is eligible to compete.

All product is eligible—features, shorts, serials. Also stage shows, amateur presentations, etc.

More than one idea may be included in one entry but Preliminary Awards will be voted for best individual idea.

No fancy entries are necessary. With the usual "evidence", submit brief description and "reasons why" an entry should be considered.

At this writing, the first Fortnight period in the last Quarter has been completed. Four Fortnights then remain before the end of the year. It is to be kept in mind that, with everything else equal, theatremen who score more often in the Fortnighters will receive greater consideration in voting the Quarter-Master Awards.

Bluebook School

Conducted by F. H. RICHARDSON

ANSWER TO QUESTION NO. 2

Bluebook school question No. 2 was: (A) What is the exact width of a 35-mm film sound track? (B) What characteristics of the film concerns the projectionist most? (C) Describe, in detail, correct method of making film splices.

The width of the sound track is given on page 174 of the Bluebook, as 0.084 of an inch, which refers to the projector scanning width. However, J. A. Prater answers thus, which goes into detail. He says, "The exact width of a 35-mm sound track may be almost anything from a few thousandths of an inch (during unmodulated portions of bilateral variable width track), to a maximum width for variable density track of one-tenth of an inch (see Figure 55, page 179, of the Bluebook). The maximum width of a sound record for variable width track 100 per cent modulated is 0.071 of an inch.

"The width of sound track which should be scanned at the projector soundhead aperture is 0.084 of an inch with an allowable tolerance of 0.002 of an inch."

(B) G. N. Daniels says, "Those characteristics of the film that most concern projectionists are: (1) Will it produce 'rain' when projected? (2) Is it pliable or dry and brittle? (3) Are its perforations in essentially perfect condition as to their edges?—since if worn, abraided or pulled out of shape a 'rock-steady' screen image cannot be projected while they are in use. (4) Are all splices properly made, and strong? (5) Are the films free from oil and reasonably free from dirt? (6) Do they have the necessary, discernible changeover cue marks? (7) Has the tail end of each or any reel been 'decorated' with punch or other cue marks?"

(C) I think I must use Brother Prater's answer to this one, too. Here it is:

"(1) Cut both ends of film perfectly straight across, leaving the proper amount for lap. Two general methods of lapping are shown in Fig. 60, page 188, of the Bluebook. My own preference is the narrow splice, since it is not as stiff as the full-hole type and none of the splice is visible on the screen.

"(2) Moisten the emulsion with water for the width of the lap on the stub end. No method has yet been devised for dependably removing all the emusion and yet none of the celluloid without moistening.

"(3) Using a suitable metal guide to prevent scraping off more emulsion than the exact width of the lap, scrape off all of the emulsion and slightly roughen the celluloid underneath. A safety razor blade may be used for this, but it has one important disadvantage. The edge is so delicate that after a very few scrapes, small nicks will appear. Such a ragged edge cannot possibly remove emulsion evenly and entirely without repeated strokes, and sometimes not then when held snugly against the guide bar each time. However, if the razor blade is first ground to a square edge by holding it upright and passing it several times across an oil or carborundum stone, a sturdy and excellent scraping edge will be formed. Such an edge will last for several months of ordinary projection room use, and may be resharpened with only a few strokes across the stone.

"(4) Using the same guide and scaper, slightly roughen just the width of the lap on the celluloid side of the other film end to remove all dirt and grease and give the film cement a better surface to act upon.

"(5) Use the best cement obtainable. Standard prepared cements sold by reliable theatre supply dealers are more dependable than drugstore mixtures. Remember also that non-inflammable or slow-burning 'safety' film requires different cement than the regular nitrate film. Regardless of what kind of applicator is used, the cement must be flowed onto the area of film to be lapped. My own method of doing this is to hold the film with the scraped end downward, as near to vertically as it is convenient to work with. Lift the cement brush from the bottle without touching the neck, leaving as much cement on the brush as will remain without dropping off. Then touch the brush lightly to the film only very near the edge of the cut, and pass it rapidly across the full width of the film. A definitely wet, slightly rounded up but narrow 'bead' of cement should be left across the full width of the film.

"(6) Once the cement has been applied, the sooner the splice is lapped and pressed together firmly and evenly over its entire area the better. This job cannot be done satisfactorily by hand alone, even if it were not necessary to match the ends exactly. A good mechanical splicer must be used in order that sprocket holes and film edges may be lined up accurately and that heavy and even pressure may be applied quickly. The pressure should be maintained for at least six seconds—ten are better.

"(7) Remove from splicer, wipe off any excess film cement with a clean cloth, and inspect the splice to see that cement has reached every part of the lap. Poor contact can usually be detected by a lighter appearance when the splice is viewed from the celluloid side of the film. Avoid bending the film sharply or applying severe strain while the splice is still fresh."

Question No. 6

(A) Describe four methods of providing plate voltage to amplifiers.

(B) What filament power supply do amplifiers require?

(C) Name and describe four methods by means of which filament power supply may be provided for amplifiers.

Testimonial in Albany For Bernard Mills

Bernard Mills, former Republic exchange manager in Albany, was feted by 100 industry friends at the Ten Eyck last Monday. Mr. Mills is now associated with Jack Berkowitz, former Republic franchise holder in B-M Pictures. He was presented with a wrist watch by Bernard G. Kranze, RKO branch manager, who acted as toastmaster.

Rabbi Solomon Goldfarb, Reverend William R. Charles and Brother Charles, all of Albany, wished Mr. Mills success in his distribution business. Other speakers included M. A. Silver, Warner zone manager; Louis R. Golding, Fabian district manager, and Jack Berkowitz, Buffalo. Congratulatory wires were received from Meyer Schine, Simon H. Fabian, Harry Thomas and James R. Grainger.

New Holiday Trailer

A new Thanksgiving trailer of National Screen Service includes a Thanksgiving greeting from the exhibitor to his patrons and a tribute to the holiday itself. The sound is RCA High Fidelity.

"George Washington Carver," a feature based on the life of the Negro scientist, has been completed by Bryant Productions. The film was directed by Ben Parker, from a story by Robert L. Shurr. Ira Greene was in charge of production.

On this and the following page appears an alphabetical index to the titles of all features listed in this week's Release Chart, with additional information for the exhibitor.

The number immediately following the title is the production number. Also given is information regarding the classification of the subject matter. A melodrama is denoted by the abbreviation Mel., Comedy by Com., Comedy-Melodrama by Com.-Mel., Musical by Mus., Musical Comedy by Mus.-Com., Western by West. If the production is made in color, the letter "C" appears in parenthesis after the classification. Thus: Com.-Mel. (C) denotes a Comedy-Melodrama in Color.

At the extreme right of the line containing the title of the production is the name of the distributor.

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1939-40 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

IN COURTS

Stoneman Damage Action Dismissed

The suit of David Stoneman against Sam Katz, Felix E. Kahn, Sam Dembow, Jr., Marion Coles, Ralph Kohn and Frederick Metzler, former directors of Paramount-Publix, for $75,000 damages, was dismissed this week by Louis A. Valente, New York supreme court justice.

The court ruled that Mr. Stoneman had failed to prove damages on a claim that the defendants had issued a fraudulent financial statement to him to induce him to lease the Empire theatre in Portland, Me., and dismissed the suit without allowing the jury to pass upon it.

Dismissal Sought In Tri-States Suit

R. D. Goldberg, Omaha circuit owner, has petitioned for dismissal of the federal court suit filed by Tri-State Theatres, which seeks a restraining order to keep Mr. Goldberg from opening the State theatre, closed for many years.

Mr. Goldberg in his petition contends that Tri-State is attempting to interfere with interstate commerce and to maintain a monopoly of first run theatres in Omaha.

To Seek Dismissal

A notice was filed this week in U. S. district court in New York by Walt Disney Productions, Inc., RKO and Technicolor that they will apply on November 10th for an order dismissing the patent infringement suit brought by Vincent I. Whitman. Mr. Whitman contends that "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" and "Pinocchio" infringe upon a patent obtained by him in 1935 for the production of animated films and asks for damages, an accounting and an injunction.

Reorganization Plan Approved

The plan of reorganization of French Motion Picture Corporation was confirmed this week by William Bondy, federal judge, in New York. The plan calls for payment of priority claims in full and a dividend of 15 per cent for general unsecured creditors.

Disney Decision Reversed

The appellate division of the New York supreme court this week reversed a decision of Justice Philip McCook made May 11th, and allowed Harry Stockwell to examine Walt Disney Productions, Ltd., and the RCA Manufacturing Company before trial. The suit seeks $100,000 damages, claiming breach of a contract whereby Stockwell, who was the "Voice of the Prince" in "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," was not to have his recordings used for any other purpose than in the film. It is claimed that RCA dubbed the singer's voice from the film, and make records.

Brady Files Appeal

William A. Brady this week filed notice of appeal in New York supreme court from a dismissal, after trial, of his suit for $250,000 damages and an injunction against Bamberger Broadcasting Service, Inc., Mutual Broadcasting System, Blackett-Sample-Hummert, Inc., and the Charles E. Phillips Chemical Company. Mr. Brady charges the broadcasting program, "Way Down East," infringed upon rights he claims to hold to a play of that title.

20 Pennsylvania Cities To Vote on Sunday Shows

Twenty communities in Pennsylvania will vote on whether to ban Sunday shows and sports in Pennsylvania at the election next week. The drive is being led by Dr. William B. Forney, president of the Lord's Day Alliance, who promises a much stronger attack in 1940.

The law provides that local options on Sunday shows and sports may be voted upon each five years. The 1936 legislature passed the law and many communities took immediate advantage of it. In referendum 164 municipalities, including Wilkes-Barre, approved Sabbath shows; 153 rejected them.

The question of allowing showings on the Sabbath will be decided in the following communities:

Bristol Township, Bucks County; Forty Fort, Luzerne County; Shingle House, Potter County; New Philadelphia, Schuykill County; Elkland, Wellsboro, Blossburg, Mansfield and Westfield, Tioga County; Roscoe, Washington County; Koppel and Freedom, Union County; Coalport and Bigler Township, Clearfield County; Mt. Penn and West Reading, Berks County; Black Township, Cambria County.

New Photophone Installations

RCA Photophone sound reproducing equipment will be installed in several houses in the south. The houses are the new Miller, Augusta, Ga.; the new Palace, McComb, Miss.; the new Georgia Theatres Service Corporation's house in Elberton, Ga.; the Webb theatre, Gastonia, N. C., and Don Reda's new house at a Blue Diamond Coal Company camp at Bonny Blue, Va.

Capra Company Incorporated

Articles of incorporation of Frank Capra Productions have been filed at Sacramento, Cal. The company was formed by Mr. Capra and Robert Riskin.

Sigmund Weintraub

Sigmund Weintraub, 65, Yiddish actor and theatrical agent, died of a heart ailment on October 26th. After retiring from the stage 20 years ago, in partnership with Edwin A. Relkin, he booked Yiddish attractions on the road, in South America and in Europe. He was born in Bessarabia and came to this country at the age of 16. He made his theatrical debut with Boris Thomashefsky's Company. He played with Jacob P. Adler, Bertha Kalick and Jacob Kessler. Also he had directed the Liberty theatre.

Milton W. Hall

Milton W. Hall, 25, manager of the Strand theatre in Plainfield died in Marshfield, Wis. He had been ill for the past ten months and is survived by his parents and two brothers.

Albert Weedland

Albert Weedland, manager of the 43rd St. Queens for the Century Circuit, died October 27th. He had been employed by the company for about ten years. His wife, a brother and a child survive.

Helda T. Fazenda

Funeral services were held November 1st at the Pierce Funeral Home in Hollywood for Mrs. Helda T. Fazenda, the mother of Louise Fazenda (Mrs. Hal B. Wallis). Mrs. Fazenda, 81, died in Van Nuys on October 30th, following a long illness.

OBITUARIES

Alice Brady Dies; Film, Stage Star

Alice Brady, star of silent and sound motion pictures and many stage hits, died on October 28th in New York City. She was the daughter of William A. Brady, Broadway producer, and Marie Rene, danseuse. From her first stage appearance in the chorus of "The Mikado" in New York in 1910 until her last screen role in "The Young Mr. Lincoln" of this year, Alice Brady has played many parts and won great fame. In 1937 she was awarded the Academv Award for the best supporting actress for her role of Mrs. O'Leary in "In Old Chicago."

On the stage Miss Brady appeared in "Forever After," "Sour Grapes" and many other plays. She played Meg in "Little Women" in 1912. Her first part in motion pictures was played in 1914. By 1923 she had appeared in over thirty pictures. Among her silent film successes were those in "The Gilded Cage" and "Bought and Paid For." She played on the stage again for years and returned to Hollywood in 1933. Since that year she worked for MGM, Paramount, First National, United Artists, Twentieth Century-Fox, and Universal, Warner Brothers and RKO-Radio and appeared in more than 25 pictures.

The funeral was held privately on October 30th and she was buried in Sleepy Hollow Cemetery, Tarrytown.

Leslie J. Spiller

Leslie J. Spiller, 40, theatrical producer, died in New York on October 27th. Mr. Spiller was born in London where he grew up with Charlie Chaplin. He came to the United States in 1920 and soon was theatrical press agent for John Cort and Harry A. Florsheim. Later Mr. Spiller was chief assistant to Louis Werba in the theatrical business in the Queens and Brooklyn. After that he was associated with A. L. Erlanger. Mr. Spiller produced with Leo Bulgakov in 1933 "One Sunday Afternoon." His last Broadway venture was "The Hook Up" in 1935. Last summer he managed the Brighton theatre at Brighton Beach. His widow, Mrs. Margaret Spiller, survives.

Emjo Basshe

Emjo Basshe, 40, writer and director of plays, died October 28th in New York. Mr. Basshe was born in Vilna which was then part of Russia and came to this country in 1912. He was associated with the Provincetown Playhouse from 1919 to 1926. In 1927 he was one of the five founders of the New Playwrights Theatre. Among Mr. Basshe's plays are: "Adam Solitaire," "Earth and the Centuries," "Doomsday Circus" and "Thunder-Cock," which was the prize offered by the University of Chicago for the best unproduced play of 1935. He won a Guggenheim fellowship in 1931. He directed "Roll, Sweet Chariot" and "Turpentine."

I. M. Wolan

I. M. Wolan, 55, prominent neon-light manufacturer and well known to the theatrical trade, is dead. His wife and five children survive. He had been ill almost a year.

Louis Damm

Louis Damm, pioneer exhibitor and operator of the Damm Theatre in Osgood, Ind., died after a lingering illness.

NOT OUR WAR

THE arms embargo has been lifted and American industry becomes a vendor to Mars in a world which is hell-bent to engage in the industry of war. Possibly nothing else could be done about it. Destiny is, in the large, a headlong movement, and at the moment civilization seems to be a tender manifestation which appears now and again between ice ages and floods, geographical and social.

The impact of the war, so far, upon the motion picture needs no pointing here.

But this does seem a time for observing that there is in this same American industry a sober, purposeful understanding that is not part of the madness of the Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse.

Forthright expression came in our own industry, the other day, in "Kodak", that remarkably competent staff organ of the Eastman Kodak Company at Rochester, which included as a special supplement a statement from the National Association of Manufacturers, reading, in part:

American Industry Hates War.

War destroys lives. War wrecks homes. Economic chaos and years of crushing depression are its inevitable aftermath. It imperils representative democracy. Free institutions are among its early victims. Ultimately no one can escape the ruin of war.

American industry wants peace. Peace is the lifeblood of progress. Peace must be the national objective.

Industry's position on this matter has been stated repeatedly and there must be no misunderstanding about it.

The United States can stay out of war.

Emotionalism can betray us into war.

A public will to peace, coupled with wise public policies and affirmative action to this end by our government, will keep us out of war. A fatalistic attitude that war is inevitable for us is absurd. It presupposes that America cannot conduct itself intelligently to preserve peace and its own interests.

Europe's problems do affect us, but our domestic problems still must come first.

Eastman has posted this all over the 110 buildings of Kodak Park. This publication in MOTION PICTURE HERALD posts it before its fifty-odd thousand readers. The statement needs circulation.

AND A LOT OF IT

NEWSREEL cameramen, swashbucklers of the action front, are of a breed that never grows old. They think and live and work and play in terms of action. They are as persistently determined as a sales manager, as frolicsome as a sophomore in a cane rush. Their humor bites, their jokes are most positively practical.

Now Mr. U. K. Whipple of the Hearst newsreel organization, operating under the trade name of News of the Day, is notable both for skill and sober reliability. His gentle pastime is gardening.

Early in the season, with a day off to spend, Mr. Whipple motored away into New Jersey to a town where the Barnum & Bailey circus was showing, on an errand of earnest, personal importance.

At an hour calculated by a conspiracy of his conniving camera colleagues, the New Jersey police, and the guards at the George Washington bridge, received an anonymous telephone call:

"Look out for a car, number so-and-such . . . one guy in it . . . search him for dope."

As Mr. Whipple, hurrying home, neared the bridge, he was flagged down by a motorcycle policeman. In the rear of the car were two conspicuous large burlap bags.

"What'you got there, buddy?"

Mr. Whipple glanced back and snapped: "Elephant dung."

"What did you say?"

"I said elephant dung . . . you heard me."

"Wise guy, eh . . . come on to the station."

At the police station two able, suspicious, and annoyed policemen poured the contents of the bags on the floor and fingered through and through the contents. Handful by handful they became at last convinced that it was indeed elephant dung, and of the purest.

At last Mr. Whipple's strange cargo was reloaded and he was free to go—except that the police just had to know what he was doing with two bags of elephant dung.

"For the garden—nothing better for gladiolus—they're Cape bulbs from Africa, you know." And then he drove away.

THE AGENTS

READING again those details of the 79-page code of alleged agreement between the Screen Actors Guild and the directors of the Artists Managers Guild, one is minded to repeat here with emphasis the oft-made assertion of the editor that whatever might be wrong with the agents was wrong with the whole of Hollywood.

Repeatedly this publication has been urged to make attack on the "agents" who were being credited with all that was wrong, and some of what was right, about relations between talent and employer.

Examination, in situ, showed that no agent ever made a questionable deal, or could have made a questionable deal, if there was not available someone with whom to make it—and with understanding.

The agent is always in the middle, where he belongs, and he lives off of it. His sole power comes out of payrolls which he does not sign. That puts the issues up to where?

THE other day an old man, M. Edouard Branly, who had considerable to do with the evolution of wireless telegraphy, leading up to radio telephony, celebrated his birthday in a Paris home peacefully quiet, and without a radio set in it. It was his ninety-fifth anniversary. "It bothers me," he said, "to remember that I had something to do with inventing it." At that age no doubt he has heard more than enough about everything.

FIVE HUNDRED women of Lynn, up in Massachusetts, members of a secret society auxiliary, have petitioned the theatres there not to show pictures featuring players who have been divorced. Lynn is a shoe workers' town. Presumably they want pictures of girls who walk home.

Labor Says "No"

WHEN HOLLYWOOD'S PRODUCERS substantially invited William Bioff back into the picture, and he became chairman of the conference of American Federation of Labor studio unions, the move had very little indeed to do in its esoteric internal aspects with a basic problem of labor. His incumbency today, however, has very much to do with it.

Labor has said "No" to Hollywood producers' request for relinquishment of that recent 10 percent pay increase to IATSE. Further Mr. Bioff has documented the "No" with such observations as: "Perhaps the system of distributing the industry's reward is lopsided. Too few seem to be taking out too much and too many seem to be getting too little." He particularized, too, observing, "There are 246 contract employees at one studio whose last annual earnings totalled $7,800,000. Of this 46 persons received $7,000,000."

Labor asks for figures on the dollar significance of the impact of war on the world gross of the screen. (See page 18.)

Vine Street Twitters

WITH YOUNG JAMES ROOSEVELT, Goldwyn vice-president, now in New York, Hollywood had gossip that he and Samuel Goldwyn "had been having words" and that Mr. Roosevelt was leaving the first of the year "to become a producer on his own."

Considering a possibility that this was another of Sidney Skolsky's arrows-in-the-air longshots, inquiry was addressed in New to Mr. Roosevelt who responded surprisingly, "No comment." That could mean anything—and possibly does.

Meanwhile reflection was to be had that perhaps some of the expectations of collateral and unspecified values in the acquisition of the president's son by Hollywood were fading.

Also Hollywood reported Fred Storm, of recent acquisition by the Goldwyn establishment, with Roosevelt blessings, was in or bound for New York and was not expected to be back for quite a while. He has a New York assignment, Goldwyn publicity in the metropolis.

Speaking of the curiosities of Hollywood's politics, entertainment was also to be had discovering that Jackson Parks, who was press agent for Technicians Local 37 and later the United Studio Technicians, engaged in writing blasts against such figures as William Bioff, Frank Strickling and John Gatelee of IATSE in their recent bitter fight, is now employed by the "Conference of American Federation of Labor Studio Unions," headed by Mr. Bioff and including IATSE groups. So now Mr. Parks, once called "Poison Pen" by Mr. Gatelee, is now engaged in arranging favorable attention for his former targets. Unquestionably Mr. Parks can be expected to be more than passingly familiar with his subject matter and his clients.

Mr. Skolsky, mentioned above with reference to his zeal in shooting from the hip at the slightest crackling of a twig in the bushes, has endeavoured to scoop the world on the annual poll of exhibitors by MOTION PICTURE HERALD and FAME on the "money-making stars" of the last year. He purports to report on the top three positions. He does not.

Further, since the poll is not yet complete his endeavour is in the nature of the impossible.

The results of the poll will not be out until MOTION PICTURE HERALD issues them. The results will, by present trends of the vote, probably surprise Mr. Skolsky and some of his contemporaries.

More "Medals"

FOR SOME YEARS NOW it has been routine for magazine promotion departments to look about for new fields to exploit, and then suddenly to discover the motion picture. With radio skimming off the cream and a lot of the milk of national advertising, the national magazines have been recently amazingly attentive to the art of the cinema.

And so it comes that this week William Randolph Hearst's famously successful and long prosperous Good Housekeeping announces discovery of a mission—"to stimulate development and expansion in the field of short subjects." It has formed a committee to select each month "three outstanding shorts." They will be "voted a short of distinguished merit by Good Housekeeping's Shorts Preview Board."

There is a suggestion of trade consciousness in the observation that a number of readers are opposed to double features. Maybe they haven't heard that it's the features that get national advertising.

Newsreel Cup

HOLLYWOOD regularly gets "Oscars" for its feature pictures, but the motion picture newsreel has received no recognition, until now. W. French Githens and his Embassy Newsreel Theatre on Broadway will present a cup to the American newsreel producing the most outstanding newsreel subject of the year as selected by a committee. January 15, 1940, is the first award date, and awards will be made annually thereafter.

War on ASCAP

A WAR CHEST of $2,000,000 for "armaments" to battle the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, is to be established by the National Association of Broadcasters—meaning, principally, NBC and CBS, which, for years, have been irritated no end over the royalty payments required of them by ASCAP for their public performance of music composed and published by ASCAP members.

Forty different attacks have been made on ASCAP in 25 states in the past two years, inspired, for the most part by broadcasters, but in which other public performers of music participated, including interests representing dance halls, theatres and other forms of amusement. Anti-Ascap laws are the main line of attack.

Led by Neville Miller, their president, members of the Broadcasters' Association feel that the $4,000,000 paid by them each year to ASCAP—out of an average gross income of $150,000,000—is "too stiff" a price for the right to use ASCAP music, and so this week they moved to establish a music library of their own, forming Broadcast Music, Inc., financed by a $2,000,000 stock issue and contributions, permission for which was asked Monday from the Securities and Exchange Commission at Washington. The registration certificate listed $400,000 in anticipated stock sales and $1,600,000 from the issuance of licenses to broadcasters to use the organization's own music. Broadcasters will subscribe to the stock.

If the plan does not materialize by February 1st, it will be abandoned. The broadcasters pay ASCAP slightly less than five per cent of their annual gross from time sales only.

The Real Business

MOST INTERESTINGLY SIGNIFICANT in its many inferences, of current manifestations on the national scene is the flood of personal appearances of Hollywood "names" on theatre bills, and assorted promotional public appearances. For the moment there is something akin to a personal appearance industry.

Substantially it may be said that all Hollywood is committed to the policy—except Samuel Goldwyn, that gifted Mr. Goldwyn who so often manages spectacularly to be "included out."

In general, theatre showmen approve. Walter Vincent, however, thinks it always depends on the special case, and emphatically George P. Skouras is opposed, with the assertion: "The real business of motion picture theatres is to show films." (See page 13.)

Trade Relations

UNDER THIS HEADING it might be observed that this week there were none. It developed that Frank Murphy, United States attorney general, is minded that the "majors," meaning the defendants in the Government's anti-trust suit, may if they like talk with the Department of Justice about their "trade practise code" but there must be a stipulation that it would have no place in any defense, in "any Government prosecution," now or in the future.

This was Mr. Murphy's response to visitation from Harry Brandt, president of the Independent Theatre Owners Association, New York, and Milton C. Weisman, counsel. They wanted a softening of what they deemed Thurman Arnold's hardboiled attitude on the trade practise code.

Mr. Arnold, be it remembered, said adoption of the code, as it was submitted, would lead to further prosecutions.

A move to try to soften Mr. Arnold by approach to Mr. Murphy, in the opinion of students of the scene, could not be expected to be highly fruitful. Mr. Arnold is a very independent assistant attorney general, more rather a special attorney general. He has more than two hundred lawyers on his staff and the Democratic patronage machine named none of them. (See page 27.)

Clyster Direction

WHEN SOUND came into the films the director's megaphone went out. Now comes its electrical equivalent, so Warner Brothers tells an amazed Hollywood, with "a tiny bone conductor" and radio receiver, which is applied to the actor "next to his spine and under his clothing." With an off-stage microphone the director can shove his instructions and admonitions up the actor's back, firmly, invisibly, inescapably, and perhaps even profanely, without affecting the sound recording. It is even possible, says the press release, to transmit "inspirational music . . . without a record on the sound track." Warners' sound department, directed by Major Nathan Levinson, is credited with developing the device. Imagine, if you will, such applications as a football line "wired for sound." First application is being made on the sets, and cast, of "Brother Rat and a Baby."

A kindred device, evolved by the industry's Number One radio engineer, was used in New York a number of years ago to trap a blackmailer, who unknowingly broadcast to detectives in an adjacent taxi. It's a big story that'll never be written.

Renewing Pledge

BISHOPS from among the 125 Bishops of the Roman Catholic Church in the United States will open their annual meeting on Monday in Washington, where their Episcopal Committee on Motion Pictures, in a separate session, will formally affirm renewal of the pledge taken every year by Catholics to avoid immoral motion pictures.

The Bishops' motion picture committee probably will act along about midweek, and then present their suggestion for pledge renewals to the general Bishops meeting in their assembly at Washington's Catholic University. Each Bishop then directs procedure in his own diocese.

The motion picture committee consists of John T. McNicholas, Archbishop of Cincinnati; Hugh C. Boyle, Bishop of Pittsburgh; John F. Noll, Bishop of Fort Wayne, Ind.; Stephen J. Donahue, Auxiliary Bishop of New York; John J. Cantwell, Archbishop of Los Angeles.

This year's pledge renewal will be the fifth, taking place, as usual, on the Sunday within the Octave of the Feast of the Immaculate Conception, which feastday is on December 8th.

The Reverend John J. McClafferty, Executive Secretary of the Legion of Decency, will take his annual report on Legion activities and observations to the Bishops' meeting.

Television Tries

HIGH UP on Helderberg Mountain, outside of Schenectady, in a trig little laboratory and 130 miles away from the antennae atop the Empire State Building, General Electric Company engineers at the National Broadcasting Company are conspiring to break the horizontal line limitations of television. They are at work, with encouragement, on re-broadcasting pick-ups through "booster" stations. Success would tremendously increase the practical scope of the television field per producing studio.

Alfred H. Morton, television vice-president of NBC, discusses today's television status. (See page 23)

"Downtown" & Color

A RIPPLE of undercurrent interest passed through hopeful Wall Street this week on a report that "there may be something doing in Cosmocolor soon," with intimations that production deals with Franklyn Warner for two features for RKO release, and Paramount for shorts, would initiate a period of expansion. Cosmocolor is a two color process kindred to the Prizma of years agone. It is currently in successful use for industrial pictures, under budget limitations that do not permit the higher costs of the three color Technicolor process. David Blankenhorn, formerly of "downtown," is the most active figure in Cosmocolor. The project is said to include some Atlas-Odlum interest. Some special opportunity is now seen by its promoters in what they fancy is a new budget consciousness in Hollywood.

Cosmocolor's royalty of $1,000 a reel of finished negative and a half a cent a foot is calculated to make the typical additional cost per feature, with about a hundred prints for distribution, in the vicinity of $18,000 over black and white.

Talking with Italy

INTERNECINE FOIBLES being what they are, the week's resumption of endeavour at solution of the Italo-American film problems was accompanied by expressions in print which confuse, obfuscate.

This much may be said: now for the first time in some ten months there is official procedure. Will H. Hays of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., was recently in touch and communication with consular and diplomatic authorities of the Italian Embassy in Washington.

No new American pictures have gone into Italy since January 1, last, and the principal distributors have liquidated their exchanges in Italy. A number of old American pictures, in the hands of Italian distributors, have been in circulation in recent months.

THIS WEEK IN PICTURES

WEDDING IN LONDON. War and blackouts did not prevent the marriage last Monday of Hope Williams, above, manager of the London office of Quigley Publications and widow of the late and famed J. D. Williams; and Peter Burnup, staff member of News of the World, in London.

HUNCHBACK, 1939. Charles Laughton, above, assumes the distorted makeup which brought the late Lon Chaney, below, his greatest fame. The Laughton "Hunchback of Notre Dame" is being veiled in a bit of mystery by the RKO studios. No stills, they say, showing him fullface will be published until the film is released.

"MOON & MOUNTAIN" GIRL. The Kate Smith radio hour theme song last week heralded a program devoted entirely to exploitation of the 20th Century-Fox "Drums Along the Mohawk." The singer is shown above with her host, Louella Parsons, at a Hollywood cocktail party which preceded the broadcast and premiere of the film.

GUESTS AND CAKE. Alfred Hitchcock, right, another big name, contemplates a particularly luscious Hollywood birthday cake, while Joan Fontaine contemplates Mr. Hitchcock. The confection is one of three presented to George Barnes, cameraman, by David O. Selznick, producer, Mr. Hitchcock, director, and the cast and crew of "Rebecca," being produced on the Selznick International lot in Hollywood. Miss Fontaine and Laurence Olivier are starred in the film.

LATIN AMERICAN DAY at the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers luncheon in New York, below. Speaking is Armando Miranda, distributor for Monogram Pictures in Puerto Rico, guest at the luncheon, which was sponsored by Teatro al Día. Listening intently to Señor Miranda's indictment of American companies' trade practices are H. Albán Mestanza, Teatro al Día editor; Paul N. Lazarus, Jr., AMPA president, and Nathan D. Golden, chief of the Department of Commerce film division.

NEW YORK, they say, will be grand when it's finished—so will Radio City. Here's John D. Rockefeller ceremonially driving "the last rivet" for the photographers—as master Builder-upper. But above and out of sight the Tearer-downers are at work on the roof of the Center Theatre where new stories in steel are to be written. Mr. Rockefeller was lucky, since they found a place for the last rivet on the street floor.

APPLAUSE. Polite handclapping in the lobby of the Embassy, newsreel theatre on Times Square marks the presentation of a lifelong pass to Mrs. Josephine Graff, a ten year customer, by W. French Githens, president of Newsreel Theatres, Inc. The ceremony was part of an anniversary celebration which included the unveiling of a lobby plaque. Counting from the big hand in the corner are Major A. G. Rudd, general manager; Francis Carter Wood, Jr., treasurer; Courtland Smith, father of the newsreel theatre, and Harry Von Zell, radio commentator.

IN LOCUM. W. Buchanan Taylor, left, has been appointed publicity manager "in locum" for 20th Century-Fox in England by Francis Harley, British head of the company. In less precious journalese he is filling the post pro-tem and de facto during the illness of Roy Simmonds, the incumbent exlegis. Mr. Taylor was lately publicity manager for the firm of Joseph Lyons, Ltd., where he became known for his "attractive newspaper announcements" and where Mr. Simmonds was his assistant before joining 20th Century-Fox.

HOLLYWOOD TURNS TO PERSONAL APPEARANCES

Wholesale Turning Loose of "Name Players" at Theatres and Festivals Follows Star Junkets to Premieres in Field

Personal appearances by "big" film names both for the purpose of exploiting pictures in which they appear and for individual bookings of any picture, are increasing greatly in number and scope.

Virtually every studio in Hollywood has some of its important players making public appearances in motion picture theatres throughout the country, also at festivals, fairs, dinners, dances and other events to stimulate fans' interest in them and their vehicles.

The "big names" making the appearances, for spot bookings and on circuit routes, in numerous cases have rarely if ever gone on the road for this purpose.

The "Why" of It All

Tangible reasons for the rise in personal appearances are: (1) the "between picture" lapses which, due to cutdowns in studio operations and activity as a result of the international situation, are somewhat longer just now; (2) the unconfessed desire of studio employers to determine whether some stars still have box office "it"; (3) to build up new and cheaper talent for new pictures; and, (4) the bolstering of box office grosses at theatres of the studios' circuit affiliates.

The idea prevailing in some quarters about the big stars making personal appearances outside of California in order to beat the heavy state income taxation on top brackets, doesn't bear up. To beat the tax on income of residents of California, the person must live more than six months a year outside of California, which none of the personal-appearancers does, and establish a valid claim of out-of-state residence.

Getting dollars-and-cents data on the fees received by those making personal appearances isn't in the cards without virtually a grand jury investigation. Obviously, the stars' agents and managers, and the stars, themselves, are not conceding anything less than record figures.

Follows Field Trips

This rash of personal appearances started following the successful junkets by 20th Century-Fox to San Francisco for "Alexander Graham Bell," by Paramount to Omaha for "Union Pacific" and by Warners to Dodge City for the picture of the same name.

Although leaders of the Motion Picture's Greatest Year campaign had considered a plan for mass personal appearances of featured players simultaneously in key cities last year, nothing was done about it and the studios this year took up the matter individually.

The enthusiastic responses from the fans, the bundles of newspaper clippings and, more important, the proved creation of a demand to see the pictures treated in this way, have caused publicity directors and exploitation men to lay extensive plans for similar events. Most frequently used are contract players, most of whose contracts have clauses which give the studios the privilege to send them out on the road without added remuneration. The usual deal is that the theatre men pay the expenses of the players' stay in the city, the studio pays transportation.

SAYS ASCAP LOST $100,000

The American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers has lost more than $100,000 in Washington state royalities since the state's 1937 music copyright law went into effect, Irving Caesar, one of the nation's top lyricists, testified in federal court at Tacoma.

"No money has been accepted from the State of Washington since the law was passed in 1937," Mr. Caesar told Archie Blair, special master rehearing the ASCAP appeal against the law. He estimated that ASCAP collects from $5,000,000 to $6,000,000 for the "performance for profit" rights on music controlled by the society.

ASCAP maintains the Washington law requiring that all musical copyrights be registered in order to be valid, violates the Society's constitutional right to do business.

Appearances on Their Own

Personalities making appearances on their own, without strings attached by their studios, are reported to be finding it a lucrative business. Martha Raye, whose contract with Paramount recently expired, and Eddie Cantor, who yearly makes a tour, are breaking records in their respective dates, according to the William Morris Agency, which handles them.

Perennial road tourists are Republic's three western players, Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette and Roy Rogers. Each goes out on tour between film duties.

Autry recently returned from his first personal appearance tour in England and Ireland, breaking attendance records. An illustration of this is the Strand theatre, Dublin, where the previous high mark for a week's gross was $18,000, set by the Isles' favorite, Gracie Fields. Autry, according to his publicity manager, Beverly Barnett, grossed $62,000.

Declared No. 1 Money Making western star the last two prior seasons by exhibitors in Motion Picture Herald-Fame polls, Autry is said to have played to greater audiences in small and medium-sized towns than has any other film personality.

Burnette Has Tour Manager

Burnette, comedian who supports Autry in the Republic musical westerns, has found the touring so lucrative that, instead of booking deals himself, he has acquired a manager, Walter Mattex; an advance man, Al Arkules, and the William Morris agency to handle his affairs. Some time ago, Burnette made one-night stands, split-week dates and full-week spots, for a straight 50 per cent of the gross.

He plans an extended tour of the east, starting with the Atlas theatre, Washington, D. C., November 19.

Roy Rogers this week returned from two weeks of touring the Northwest, having been feted at civic events in Washington and Oregon.

Louella O. Parsons, Hearst film columnist, embarks this month on a six weeks' tour with a troupe of film personages—Arleen Whelan, Joy Hodges, Ronald Reagan, June Preisser, Susan Hayward, Jane Wyman and Mecca Graham. The Leo Morrison office is handling the bookings. Miss Parsons will get $7,500 a week guarantee, plus a percentage of the gross over a certain figure. She pays the troupe's salaries and expenses. Jack Mulcahy, 20th Century-Fox expert in handling entourages, has been granted leave of absence to act as publicity representative for the troupe. The show may run beyond the six weeks. The tour opens November 14th in San Francisco.

Another Morrison agency client, Hugh Herbert, opened last week at the Adams theatre, Newark, and future picture deals will decide the length of his trip.

Tony Martin and Orchestra

Tony Martin organized an orchestra following his retirement from 20th Century-Fox and is making a success of it.

Several reasons are mentioned as accounting for the tours. One, which might be ascribed to wishful thinking, is that there is a growing demand on the part of the public to see entertainers in person, which would mean a harbinger for the return of vaudeville. This is supported by the demands upon radio stations here and elsewhere for tickets to broadcasting studios to see in person the air performers. In Hollywood, the shows using film celebrities regularly are most popular with the ticket seekers, with the interest in new faces, the curiosity of fans and the publicity concocted to develop glamourites.

One thing has proved certain, however. Those most successful in their appearances from both entertainment and gross standpoints, are those who have stage accomplishments, such as dancing and singing. The days of a film celebrity merely bowing and slinking across the stage are nearing their end.

The oft used word "sensational" can easily be applied to the dual appearances of Mickey Rooney and Judy Garland in New York and Washington, in connection with "Babes in Arms," their MGM vehicle. Rooney, a real trouper, was called back to Hollywood for "Young Tom Edison," while Miss Garland continued on tour of 12 Eastern cities.

Eddie Cantor has with him another MGM starlet, Leni Lynn, a singer.

Queen of Festival

Metro sent Ann Rutherford to South Carolina to become queen of the annual cotton festival, and she stopped over in several Southern cities. Nelson Eddy and Jeanette MacDonald, known to the music field before entering pictures, are going on separate concert tours following their dual starring vehicle, "Lover Come Back to Me," at MGM. Bert Lahr and Ray Bolger, also known in other fields before working in films, made personals in connection with "The Wizard of Oz." Spencer Tracy recently trekked to Detroit, and East Orange, N. J., ostensibly to interview friends and relatives of Thomas Edison, whom he will portray in "Edison the Man." The trip drummed up considerable newspaper space. Howard Strickling, MGM publicity director, accompanied him.

Ruth Terry, singer who plays opposite Pat O'Brien in Wanger's "City for Sale," embarks next week on four or five weeks in the East, acting independently of the studio but cooperating in that she will be booked with or prior to the opening of the picture.

But Not Goldwyn

One studio stands out as not encouraging personals by its contract folk, and that is Samuel Goldwyn's. A Goldwyn executive explained that it was felt that personals do not contribute much to the success of the picture, except in the case of Jon Hall, who did appear with his first picture, "Hurricane." The studio sent him East to acquaint audiences with him.

The New York World's Fair and the San Francisco Golden Gate Exposition provided many opportunities, which were taken, for tours. The New York exposition declared "days" for film stars who were made guests of honor for the moment.

The only film personality to be honored by both fairs was little Gloria Jean, who enjoyed, in addition, a civic fete at Scranton, Pa., in connection with the opening of "The Underpup," her first picture at Universal. She also appeared at the Chicago opening of the picture at the United Artists theatre.

Air Show Guest

Joy Hodges, another Universal contractee, was guest at an air show in Birmingham, Ala., and later at the annual Wichita Penny Ice Fund benefit. The New York fair also acclaimed her. Mischa Auer toured the East for four weeks recently.

Paramount, encouraged by its success with the "Union Pacific" opening, did the same thing with "Man About Town," at Waukegan, Ill.; "Our Leading Citizen," at Van Beuren, Ark., and has been particularly active in sending its players about. The principal reason, however, is to acquaint the public with its new stock players, collectively known as "The Golden Circle."

J. Carroll Naish, Susan Hayward and Olympe Bradna journeyed to Detroit for the "Disputed Passage" premiere, after going to Minneapolis for the Centennial exposition there with Patricia Morison. Miss Morison later went to Portland, to which city Maureen O'Hara, Charles Laughton's protege, traveled for the opening of "Jamaica Inn," Paramount release. A troupe of Paramount players went to Chicago, Sioux City, Omaha, Des Moines, and Salt Lake City for openings of "What a Life," and Dorothy Lamour made a few jaunts in connection with "Disputed Passage."

Another of Republic's contract groups, Elviry and the Weaver Brothers, although starred now in motion pictures, still saunter back to the personal appearance route on which they are quite well known.

A Record for "Rochester"

Eddie "Rochester" Anderson, who on radio and film programs is the valet to Jack Benny, embarked upon a tour, opening in Los Angeles at the Paramount theatre recently, and established a gross attendance record topped only by Mae West. He played other theatres of the Fanchon and Marco affiliation and set a few marks which have yet to be beaten. He just completed a tour with Betty Grable.

Warners' publicity department under S. Charles Einfeld and Robert Taplinger has embarked upon a policy of building up younger players through personal appearances. During the Warner-Fox West Coast product argument, in which the distributor sold away from Fox West Coast and to independents, the studio sent out a troupe of young players to take bows at the houses buying Warner product. These included Gloria Dickson, Ronald Reagan, Lya Lys, James Stephenson, Dennis Morgan, Jane Gilbert, Lucille Fairbanks, William Lundigan, Rosella Towne, Claire Windsor and Jean Parker, all of whom traveled ten Western cities, including Seattle, San Francisco, Portland and Berkeley. Ann Sheridan was sent East to New York and other nearby points for six weeks in the campaign to build her up as the "Oomph Girl."

EXPEDITE U. S. MAIL, LISBON TO PARIS

The French Air Service this week announced the creation of a new direct airline between Paris and Lisbon, Portugal, to facilitate the expedition of air mail and passengers landed there from the United States by the transatlantic Pan American clippers.

Hitherto the connection has been made by train. It is expected the air route will reduce the air mail time between New York and Paris from the present five to eight days to four days.

Albert Goldman, postmaster at New York, this week denied reports which, he said, were current that transatlantic air mail srevice was either being discontinued or curtailed. Two trips will continue to be made weekly, he said, with planes leaving Wednesdays and Saturdays, both from Lisbon and New York.

With air mail service by sea considerably curtailed and subject to delay, Mr. Goldman said air mail loads were constantly increasing.

"Dead End" Kids in Act

Warners' erstwhile "Dead End" kids—or the erstwhile Warners "Dead End" Kids—have now embarked on a personal appearance jaunt, their contracts with the studio having expired. After much difficulty in bringing their agents together, the youths worked out a routine for an act, success of which is not yet known.

Twentieth Century-Fox, which last week conducted quite an expedition to Fonda, N. Y., for the purpose of exploiting "Drums along the Mohawk," has sent many of its players on tours to popularize them. While the treks have not been so elaborate as that for "Alexander Graham Bell," they nevertheless are carefully planned. Exploitation of "Submarine Patrol," which followed "Bell," took Marjorie Weaver, Arleen Whelan, Slim Summerville and Richard Greene to San Diego.

Jane Withers, another Fox contractee and among the first ten Money Making stars of the HERALD-FAME exhibitors' poll, goes on an annual personal appearance jaunt, without connection with the studio.

Then, too, Sonja Henie, the queen of the silver skates, continues her annual circuit of the ice rinks, each year bringing new gross attendance records for her to establish. She was signed for films after being seen on skates, and her pictures, according to the poll, were something to gladden an exhibitor's heart.

Columbia, while not going into the situation heavily, has the Three Stooges, who do personals and stage work, under contract for work in Jules White's short subjects. In the current George White show in New York, the trio takes time out to travel to Hollywood to complete their film assignments.

Most spectacular of forthcoming personal appearances is the world premiere of Selznick-International's "Gone with the Wind," some time in December, at Atlanta, Ga. Clark Gable and Vivien Leigh, stars, are certain to be present, according to present plans.

Constance Bennett Tour

One of the biggest name stars on a personal appearance tour is Constance Bennett. Her salary has been estimated at $6,500 per week. She opened in Columbus on October 20th and also appeared in Cincinnati, Cleveland and Buffalo.

The William Morris Agency is handling personal appearances for Joe E. Brown, who begins his tour in Chicago on November 8th; Dixie Dunbar, Parkyakarkus; Wally Vernon, Zasu Pitts, Ben Blue and John Boles. There are also negotiations for Johnny Downs, Patricia Ellis, Bela Lugosi and Una Merkle.

Chester Morris made a whirlwind tour of a number of Brooklyn and New Jersey theatres on October 18th-19th. He also has appeared, among other places, in Minneapolis.

Anna Neagle and Herbert Wilcox made a number of personal appearances in connection with the opening in various cities of "Nurse Edith Cavell." The picture, which is being released in this country by RKO, was produced in England by Mr. Wilcox with Anna Neagle in the title role.

Ameche on Eight-Week Trip

Don Ameche is making an eight week tour of South and Central America, covering approximately the same route travelled by Tyrone Power and Henry Fonda a few months ago. Reports state that the Latin American audiences flock to see the Hollywood film stars.

Last week Dick Powell appeared at the New York Paramount. This week Martha Raye is on the stage as part of the show in connection with the theatre's 13th anniversary. Joan Blondell appeared with Dick Powell for two performances on November 1st.

Such vaudeville-screen stars as Jack Haley, Joe Cook and Jimmy Durante have been making personal appearance tours. Joe Cook was held over at the Palace theatre in Chicago and becomes the last performer to appear on that stage, for at least a time, because the theatre is discontinuing the vaudeville policy.

Charles Laughton was to begin a personal appearance tour when his latest picture, "Jamaica Inn," opened in New York. Maureen O'Hara was also to appear at the New York opening. Laughton was taken ill and the tour temporarily postponed. It is expected that the personal appearance tour will start as soon as he recovers.

Teamed for Tours

Priscilla Lane and John Garfield were teamed for personal appearances in New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington and Pittsburgh.

The Lyons Agency has arranged tours for Allan Jones and Irene Hervey.

Ann Sheridan began on October 5th a tour which included New York, Philadelphia, Washington and Pittsburgh. William Holden, star of "Golden Boy," has covered Buffalo, Washington, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Detroit in his tour.

Edward Everett Horton finished a personal appearance tour on September 18th and is now playing in "Springtime for Henry," which will tour Albany, Rochester, Buffalo, Pittsburgh, Columbus, Indianapolis, Chicago and Dallas. The play opened in Baltimore.

The Ritz Brothers opened in San Francisco November 1st. This is the first stop on a tour that will take them to a number of cities. Lupe Velez plans a tour after her latest picture is completed. Marie Wilson and Henry Armetta have made recent personal appearances in New York theatres.

"Dick Tracy" in the East

Ralph Byrd, the "Dick Tracy" in Republic's pictures, is making an Eastern personal appearance tour. George Offerman, Jr., is also on a tour of cities in the East. Mary Carlisle appeared in person recently in Brooklyn. Zorina also made a personal appearance at the New York opening of her latest picture. She has left the cast of a new musical which was in rehearsal to take the starring role in "European Plan," Twentieth Century-Fox.

An additional number of motion picture actors and actresses are reported planning personal appearance tours. The list includes: Charles Butterworth, Stuart Erwin, Edmund Lowe, Marion Martin, Claire Trevor, Raymond Walburn and Tom Brown.

Operators Note Limitations

In general, operators of large theatre circuits feel that personal appearances of Hollywood stars in their theatres is very good business if the price is not too high and if the individual personality is suitable to stage performance.

Joseph Bernhard, general manager of Warner Brothers Circuit, said: "Personal appearances of motion picture stars in the theatres are added attractions and their value depends on the drawing power of the individual star. We will book any available star if we believe they have drawing power." Mr. Bernhard said that at present none is scheduled for the Circuit.

Walter Vincent of the Wilmer & Vincent circuit held that motion picture actors and actresses want too much money, 100% if they could get it. Mr. Vincent said that from his "long observation a personal appearance depends on the personality of the actor and actress and what they have to offer." He believes that it is much the same with radio personal appearances. Some stars have helped and others hurt themselves. According to Mr. Vincent, there is no absolute law, except that "has-beens" are definitely no attraction for personal appearance work.

Opposes Appearances

George P. Skouras, president of Skouras Theatres, held the opposite opinion. Mr. Skouras said, "Personal appearances of film stars is a short way to make money. Personal appearances destroy the illusion that the screen creates." He feels it is not good policy to have film stars appear on a stage and be seen as ordinary humans. The exception to this rule are the few motion picture personalities who can perform successfully on a stage.

Mr. Skouras said that radio personal appearances of motion picture actors and actresses constitute real competition for the theatre. Persons stay at home instead of going to the theatre. But personal appearances in the theatres are not competition of the same nature—just a wrong way of doing business, because, Mr. Skouras held "the real business of motion picture theatres is to show films."

The availability of screen personalities is considered a definite check on personal appearances. Film stars ordinarily do not have time between pictures to make long tours. Furthermore some motion picture performers do not like to appear on a stage and reject all requests for personal appearances.

A number of motion picture players appear each season in Broadway plays. Katharine Hepburn and Tallulah Bankhead head the list that are now on Broadway. Paul Muni will appear in "Key Largo." A number of other Hollywood actors and actresses are reported considering parts in New York plays.

Personal appearances on the radio are not detailed in this study, but a large number of motion picture personalities are on regular radio programs and many others make "guest" appearances. In Hollywood and New York these radio shows built around film personalities play to large free audiences in the radio studios.

Personal appearances of film personalities in theatres, it was pointed out, has an adverse effect on motion picture rentals and often in the type of picture shown. The exhibitor feels that when he is paying a big price for a personal appearance he must get an inexpensive picture. Otherwise the total expense would exceed possible grosses in many theatres.

The Motion Picture Associates, of New York, this Thursday held a luncheon at Dinty Moore's restaurant, with actor Dick Powell and his wife, Joan Blondell, as honor guests. Prizes also were awarded to members who led in solicitation of advertising for the association's journal, in connection with the annual dinner dance at the Hotel Astor on November 25th.

University Uses Micro-Photography To Keep Student Class Records

The scholastic records of the more than 12,000 students at Temple University in Philadelphia will be preserved in motion picture films in a new experiment in enrollment recording, it has been announced by the university administration.

Profiting by the experience of its Sullivan Memorial Library, which recently undertook the preservation of hundreds of rare volumes through a process of microphotography, the university, beginning with the new semester, started to record by motion pictures thousands of student registration cards. Thus, the necessity for storing the cards in extensive space will be eliminated.

According to Millard E. Gladfelter, registrar of the university, this is the first time that an educational institution has inaugurated the project in the east.

Beginning with each new school year, every student will not only be required to pose for the customary "passport" type of photograph, but his or her class cards, showing scholastic grades, will be filmed and stored away in compartments occupying 1/100*th the space taken up hitherto by cumbersome filing devices. For instance, the entire student enrollment of* 12,000 cards now may be kept in a single small desk drawer, as against about 100 similar receptacles under the old system.

When the cards are filmed, they may be seen at any time through the use of reading machines which project the records on a miniature motion picture screen.

Through the use of micro-photography, Temple's library has catalogued approximately 100,000 films of manuscripts printed in England before 1550. University officials are considering expanding the use of film records to other departments and school activities, athletics included.

Dramatist Guild Approves Pact

The Dramatists Guild at their annual meeting, held this week at the Hotel Lincoln, New York, approved the new minimum basic agreement for licensing of motion picture rights to film-producer financial backers of stage plays, through which Hollywood backing would be returned to Broadway after an absence of two years. The complete text of the basic agreement appeared in the November 4th issue of MOTION PICTURE HERALD, starting on page 52.

Legitimate stage producers, although they have approved the amendment in conferences, will not formally vote until later this week.

Elmer Rice was elected president of the Dramatists Guild to succeed Robert E. Sherwood. Reelected officers are George Kaufman, vice-president; Richard Rodgers, secretary; Luise Silcox, treasurer, and Edward C. Carpenter, chairman of the board.

Mr. Sherwood was named to the executive board to serve until 1942, as were George Abbott, Robert Ardrey, Russel Crouse, Owen Davis, Clifford Goldsmith, Lillian Hellman, Sidney Kingsley, Arthur Kober, and George Middleton. Maxwell Anderson and Leopold Atlas serve to 1941.

Guild representatives to the board of Authors League elected are Gene Buck, Marc Connelly, Phillip Dunning, Moss Hart, John H. Lawson, Albert Maltz, Kenyon Schwartz, A. E. Thomas, Stanley Young and Mr. Crouse.

FILMS RELIEVED OF NEUTRALITY ACT, RESPONSIBILITY ON THE EXPORTER

Copyright Material Such as Motion Pictures Exempted from Requirement That Goods for Belligerents Change Title

Relieved entirely from the application of the cash-and-carry provisions of the new Federal neutrality legislation, American exporters of motion picture films will find their trade with belligerent nations hampered only by such difficulties as may arise in obtaining shipping facilities on vessels sailing under foreign flags.

Adoption by Congress of the amendment offered by Senator Hiram Johnson of California, exempting copyrighted material, such as films, from the restrictions of the cash-and-carry section relieved the motion picture industry from the necessity of meeting the drastic requirements of Congress that merchandise sold for delivery in belligerent countries change title before it could leave the country.

Foreign Buyer Takes Title

Title to every other commodity of export to Germany, England, France and other belligerent countries which may be named by the President in proclamations must be taken over, lock-stock-and-barrel, by the foreign buyer before leaving the United States.

Motion picture exporters will be put to some trouble, although it is not now seen a difficulty, by the prohibition against the transportation of passengers or merchandise to belligerent countries or to "combat areas" specified by the President, in American vessels. It has been the practice of the distributors, in the past, to use American ships wherever possible, but with American vessels ordered out of dangerous waters they will be forced to ship their films on neutral or belligerent vessels, which, of course, are always subject to seizure or sinking at sea.

Adoption of the Johnson amendment was voted by the Senate without debate after the California Senator explained that since motion pictures are leased and not sold they could not comply with the cash-and-carry provisions.

Must Take Entire Risk

When the bill went to a joint conference of both houses, negotiators for the House of Representatives raised no objection to the provision, nor was it touched upon in the very brief debate which preceded adoption of the conference report by the two bodies before sending the bill to the White House for the signature of President Roosevelt.

To obtain the privilege of continuing their foreign business without restriction, however, motion picture exporters will be compelled to take the entire risk of losses in belligerent countries on their own shoulders, there being a specific provision in the new U. S. neutrality legislation that no loss incurred in connection with the exportation or transportation of any copyrighted material, such as films, shall be made the basis of any claim put forward by the United States Government against any foreign country.

Cash-and-Carry Principle

This provision is in line with the cash-and-carry principle, which is designed to limit dealings with belligerents to the point laid down by international law, which specifies that a belligerent may buy anything in any country provided he can pay for it and will take the risks of transportation. The bar to U. S. Government intercession in the case of loss was designed, in the case of other commodities, as a warning to sellers that if they failed to collect for what they sold before it left the country the Government would not act as a collection agency. In the case of motion pictures, the intent is merely to bring that commodity into line with all others—in other words, not to extend to the film industry, in addition to the privilege of unrestricted business, the favoritism of Federal aid which is to be denied to other businessmen.

ONLY ONE THEATRE CLOSED IN CHICAGO

There is only one dark motion picture theatre in Chicago, the Easterly on Lincoln Avenue, according to the film carriers' union, which has serviced 320 theatres in the district, an increase over last year. Film Truck Service, according to D. W. Koener, is servicing six more theatres this year. The film carriers' division of the American Truck Association met on October 24th.

While in the near future there may be no very great increase in exports of motion pictures, it is generally believed that if the war continues for any length of time the Allied nations—Germany does not favor American films—will look to the United States to supply product as their own producing activities are eliminated or drastically curtailed because of more pressing business for men and materials.

To Neutral Countries

This increased demand also is expected to extend to the neutral European countries, which also are in condition for war with their armies at their borders to protect their neutrality.

Probably equally important, too, will be the increased demand from South America, where foreign producers had been working for expanded markets, but more important than the restriction of competing product, it is said in some Washington circles, will be the improved economic positions of neutral countries with things to sell the belligerents, which will be reflected in increased theatre attendance.

Reports in Washington indicate that England and France will proceed slowly with their purchases in the United States, for a variety of reasons, and that caution may extend to motion pictures as well as other commodities. The two countries plan to develop a purchasing program which will prevent their bidding against each other for supplies, as they did in 1914. However, it is anticipated in Washington that both governments realize the need for an adequate supply of motion pictures—for recreation for soldiers at the front and as a means of keeping up civilian morale at home—and will be important markets.

Tri-States Iowa Meeting

A. H. Blank and G. Ralph Branton were present at the first of a series of district meetings for managers and assistant managers of Tri-States Theatre Corp. held November 1st at Davenport. The purpose of the meeting was to form plans for a new drive. Joe Kinsky, Davenport district manager, was in charge.

115 Stations for Fourth Network

A fourth national radio network has been formed to be known as Transcontinental Broadcasting System, Inc., and it is expected to begin operations on January 1st. It will broadcast commercial and sustaining programs 16 hours each day. John T. Adams, of Forth Worth, vice-president of Elliott Roosevelt's Texas State network, is president of Transcontinental.

Mr. Roosevelt, however, said that he had no direct connection with the network, that Mr. Adams had been loaned to head TBS and will open offices in New York. Other officers of the newly formed company are Lester E. Cox, Springfield, Mo.; John Roberts, St. Louis, and William A. Porter, Washington, D. C., vice-presidents; Robert M. Thompson, Pittsburgh, secretary, and H. J. Brennan, Pittsburgh, treasurer.

More than 115 stations from coast to coast will become members of the network, it is claimed. Officers announced that considerable business already has been signed and that more is being closed hourly. Broadcasts will originate in New York, Chicago and Hollywood.

Mr. Roosevelt said that his Mutual-Emerson broadcasts will cease after 13 weeks.

Fred Weber, official of the Mutual system, said that Mr. Roosevelt's Mutual contract runs until September 1, 1941 and that Mutual does not intend to release him from it.

Miller Heads Broadcast Music

Neville Miller, president of the National Association of Broadcasters, was named president of the newly organized Broadcast Music, Inc., at the first meeting of the corporation's board of directors at the Ritz Towers, New York, last week. Everett Revercomb, NAB auditor, was elected secretary-treasurer.

Major Networks Show Gains

Gross time sales over the three major radio networks continued their upward trend in October.

Columbia Broadcasting System, Inc., reports October time sales of $3,366,654, an increase of 41 per cent over October 1938 when billings aggregated $2,387,395. Cumulative time sales for the first 10 months of this year amounted to $27,532,088, an increase of 23.1 per cent over the corresponding period of 1938 when billings were $22,362,927. CBS also calls attention to its error in releasing September 1939 bilings of $2,565,132 when the figure as corrected by the network reads $2,563,246.

The National Broadcasting Company, wholly owned subsidiary of Radio Corp. of America, reports October time sales of $4,219,253 for its combined red and blue networks. This marks an increase of 11.8 per cent over the like 1938 month when billings amounted to $3,773,964. Cumulative time sales for the first 10 months of 1939 aggregate $36,729,622 or 9.1 per cent ahead of the like 1939 period whose billings amounted to $33,676,688.

Mutual Broadcasting System, Inc., October 1939 billings amounted to $428,221, an increase of 23.1 per cent over October 1938 times sales of $347,771. Cumulative time sales for the first 10 months of 1939 amounted to $2,685,038, a gain of 20.8 per cent over the corresponding 1938 figure of $2,222,026.

PRODUCERS BUY 32 MORE STORIES FOR 1940; ORIGINALS SET A LOW

Warners Buy Play Witnessed by Bette Davis; Detective Stories Purchased by Trop; 20th Century-Fox Leads with 6

In October, 13 Hollywood producers acquired 32 properties to continue to fill commitments made to exhibitors at the beginning of the 39-40 product season.

Of the 32 stories purchased, including two published magazine stories, one newspaper serial on the life of Louis (Lepke) Buchalter, 13 were original, the lowest number of original story purchases in more than a year.

At the reported suggestion of Bette Davis, Warner Brothers has spent a reputed $20,000 for the screen rights to the play "The Woman Brown," which Miss Davis witnessed at a try-out while vacationing last summer in New England, and in which she will probably star if and when the picture is produced. Meanwhile J. D. Trop has bought the motion picture rights to the Ellery Queen detective stories that have appeared in novels, magazines and on the air.

Twentieth Century-Fox led the list of purchasers with six acquisitions while Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer followed closely with five. Paramount and Warner Brothers each purchased four stories for possible filming.

U.S. High Court Gets RKO Plea

A review of the amended plan of reorganization for RKO was asked of the United States supreme court this week on behalf of secured bondholders in a petition filed on behalf of RKO and H. Cassell and Company against RKO and the Atlas Corporation.

The appeal for a review of the approval by the second circuit court of appeals presents to the supreme court for the first time, said the attorneys, the issue whether, in the rehabilitation of a solvent debtor under the provisions of Section 77B of the Bankruptcy Act, fully secured bondholders may be relegated to an equity position and required to take securities of less importance than those they originally held.

Attorneys for the Atlas Corporation, proponent of the plan, said that they did not believe the petition would result in any delay.

BIOFF DEMANDS TALENT PAY CUTS AS PRICE OF SCALE REDUCTIONS

Union Negotiator Warns Producers of "Top-Heavy" Payrolls in Rejecting Mannix Appeal to Relinquish Recent Increase

Approximately 12,000 studio workers will give up the ten per cent wage increase wrung from the producers on September 25th, only if the latter reduce "topheavy" salaries of stars, executives, directors, and writers, William Bioff, West Coast representative of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, and chairman of a conference of American Federation of Labor-IATSE unions which met Tuesday in Hollywood, warned.

Reply to Producers

The warning was a reply to, and a rejection of, the producers' demand, in a letter last week by E. J. Mannix, head of their negotiating committee, to Mr. Bioff, that the IATSE relinquish its wage increase, in the interests of motion picture industry economy and harmony.

The unions will try to prevent shutdown of studios—a possibility hinted at by the producers'—but the "responsibility must also be borne by high-salaried producers, writers and directors," according to Mr. Bioff. He continued:

"The wage increase granted to the IATSE costs the producers an extra $3,000,000 annually. Other increases being sought as a result of the IATSE victory would raise the total to $16,000,000 more.

"Before the industry attempts to save $16,000,000 by shaving down the little fellow who makes $25 or $30 a week, there should be a frank discussion and study of industry earnings generally.

"There are 246 contract employees at one studio whose last annual earnings totaled $7,800,000. Of this amount, 46 persons receive $7,000,000.

"Perhaps the system of distributing the industry's reward is lopsided," Mr. Bioff concluded. "Too few seem to be taking out too much, and too many seem to be getting too little."

The meeting of the representatives of the crafts unions indicated further wage demands would be asked for all A. F. of L. unions in studios.

Mr. Bioff suggested a "round-table conference" by the unions, producers, and creative guilds. He asked these groups to reply to the suggestion before another scheduled meeting next Tuesday of the crafts union representatives.

Last Friday the Actors' and Writers' Guilds bluntly rejected invitations by Stephen Newman, IATSE official, to a scheduled conference between producers and the Alliance. The Directors' Guild is understood to have concurred in the refusals.

In New York, meanwhile, after a month's debate, Local 306, the country's strongest projectionists' union, agreed with the major circuits in the New York metropolitan area on a neutral arbiter to complete a five man board which will now decide upon the union's demand for a 25 per cent wage increase for the next two years. The neutral arbiter is Milton J. Handler, associate professor of law at Columbia University. Other arbitrators are Charles C. Moscowitz, operating head of Loew's; Major Leslie E. Thompson, of RKO; Joseph D. Basson, president of Local 306; and Bert Popkin, former Local 306 business agent.

ACTORS WILL SETTLE TELEVISION CONTROL

Television jurisdiction — troubling the actors' world since the advent of the new art, and almost disrupting the newly coalesced ranks of the parent actors' group, the Associated Actors and Artistes of America — seemed destined for settlement this week, as the representatives of the Screen Actors Guild, the American Federation of Radio Artists, and the Actors' Equity were to meet, in New York. Heading the union committees are Mrs. Florence Marston, for the guild; Emily Holt and George Heller, for the federation; and John Lorentz, for Equity.

Even as the present Local 306 officers were leading the union in a fight for higher wages, a definite campaign began for a return to the presidency of Sam Kaplan, who was ousted in 1932 by the IATSE, parent organization and served six months in prison for coercing dissident union members, according to an article in the New York World Telegram of last Thursday.

The union elects officers December 27th. The campaign objective is to have Mr. Kaplan petitioned into candidacy.

The newspaper said its efforts to locate Mr. Kaplan were unsuccessful.

The projectionists' former leader, whose trial in 1932 for accounting of $1,200,000 of union funds, was a sensation—the high point being the discovery in court that he and his two bodyguards were armed—is reported the owner of the Sam Kaplan Manufacturing and Supply Company, at 729 Seventh Avenue, New York, sellers of projection equipment.

He was removed from office by the IATSE, in the midst of the trial.

Efforts to reestablish him earlier this year included an ouster petition aimed at Joseph Basson, Local president. The ouster was voted down.

In 1932, Mr. Kaplan was barred by the Alliance from running again for union office for five years.

Painters Meeting Producers

In Hollywood this week, the Motion Picture Painters' Local 644 representatives met again with producers on a 15 per cent wage increase. The local is to meet next Monday to consider the producers' request that further negotiations be held in abeyance until December 5th.

The International Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators, and Paperhangers of America and the Los Angeles District Council of Painters have approved the threatened strike of Local 644.

There was an annual membership meeting of the Screen Actors Guild Eastern Chapter, in New York, last Friday. On the newly elected advisory council are Stephen Kent, Walter S. Weeks, Jack Harwood, Phillip Ober, and Bert Wilcox, for three years; Ethel Curtis, John Neilan, Frank McNellis, Robert Lynn, and John Hyland, for two years; Joseph McInerny, Clarence Auer, Florence Richardson, John Dale, and Edward Lawrence, for one year.

The members are experiencing more employment than last year, according to the annual report by Mrs. Florence Marston. There are 1,300 members, 650 in good standing.

Further news from the coast indicates enforcement of a closed shop by the International Alliance in independent studios, acting on a reported National Labor Relations Board ruling that certification of the group was unnecessary in the smaller studios, inasmuch as it was recognized that the majority of independent studio workers were IATSE members.

Also on the coast, William Goetz, Matthew Fox, and Samuel Briskin, for the producers, met with William Edwards, chairman of the Screen Publicists' Guild, last week, over a new guild contract, still unsigned.

Injunction Ruled Out

In Los Angeles last week, Superior Judge E. H. Wilson ruled out an application for an injunction by former members of the Studio Technicians' Local 37, to restrain its dissolution. The judge said state courts must decide.

Jay Oliver, of Houston, arrived on the coast last week, as new chief field examiner for the NLRB.

Representatives from the seven regional exchange workers' locals were expected in New York soon for conferences with national IATSE officials, to draw up a basic program for the negotiations which follow the expiration, at the end of this month, of master base rates and local contracts throughout the country. The new contract will be drawn with the sales heads of each major.

Delegates from the film exchange employees' unions at Omaha, Minneapolis, Des Moines, Milwaukee, and Kansas City met in Kansas City last Saturday to elect a delegate to confer with the six other regional delegates. They also drew up instructions.

In Seattle last week, Robert Willis, superior court justice, granted to the operators of the First Avenue theatre, a temporary injunction restraining the projectionists' Local 154 from picketing the house. The dispute arose over discharge of a projectionist. The judge pointed out there was no dispute about wages or hours.

The American Federation of Musicians and the National Association of Broadcasters are discussing a new contract. The present one expires December 31st. No great changes are expected.

The American Federation of Office Employees, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, is reviving its drive in the New York City home offices of the majors. The New York local is No. 20940.

In Niles, Ohio, theatre operators signed a two year contract with the local projectionists, retaining the present wage scale.

In New York, Tom Murtha, business agent of the Brooklyn stagehands' Local 4, was elected president of the Central Trades and Labor Council of New York City.

Second Mistrial for Nick

The second trial of John P. Nick, deposed head of the St. Louis projectionists' local 143, ended in St. Louis Circuit Court Tuesday, in a mistrial, the second such. The first occurred several weeks ago when a juror talked to a state witness; the present one occurred when Circuit Judge Aronson declared that juror Edward Davis had concealed an acquaintanceship with the defendant's family. The judge jailed Mr. Davis for one week, and re-set trial for December 11th.

Mr. Nick is being tried for extortion of $10,000 from St. Louis theatre owners, in 1936. Also indicted with Mr. Nick were Clyde Weston, former local 143 business agent, and State Representative Edward Brady.

TELEVISION TO TRY REBROADCASTS; PRESSES U.S. TO PERMIT SPONSORS

NBC Cooperating with General Electric on Plan to Feed Programs to GE Station Near Schenectady, Says Morton

Television, by developments disclosed this week, is near upon a breaking of the assumed limitations of the horizon line for single station coverage, hoping also to reach wide areas of coverage by booster stations and rebroadcasts.

Meanwhile there are prayerful pressures for an amendment of present experimental licenses, by the Federal Communications Commission, to permit commercial sponsorships as in sound-radio.

Morton Tells of Plan

Alfred H. Morton, vice-president in charge of television for the National Broadcasting Company, in an interview with Motion Picture Daily, indicates that NBC is working with General Electric Company on a plan to feed television programs to the General Electric station near Schenectady for rebroadcasting on an experimental basis.

The FCC is debating how soon television should be given the "go" signal commercially. Numerous factors are involved. Mr. Morton believes commercial licensing would give television the impetus it has been needing and would provide some revenue for experimentation and program development.

Sees Improved Relationship

Commercial licensing would permit sponsored programs, which in turn would help defray the heavy cost of the present program service. In Mr. Morton's opinion this would help in the relationship of television to the film industry as the broadcasters then would be in a position to pay somewhat more for film program material than they can now afford.

Mr. Morton decried the fears recently expressed by Abram F. Myers, general counsel of Allied States, that television may be "sprung on the industry suddenly" and bring difficult problems for theatre owners.

"Television extension will be a normal, orderly development and evolution, and there can be nothing sudden about it," he said. "Many years of toil in the laboratories preceded the present stage of scheduled programs. No development of this kind can come suddenly.

No Monopoly, He Says

"The engineers are now working to make large-screen reception possible. When it comes, everyone will have sufficient foreknowledge, and exhibitors will have adequate time for preparation.

"There will be no monopoly on theatre television equipment. Small exhibitors will get an equal break with the large circuits. The equipment manufacturers' experience during the introduction of talking pictures should be sufficient indication that they have learned a lesson."

There is no way of telling when television will be ready for theatres, Mr. Morton went on, as many problems have to be hurdled. RCA and other companies are working to develop large-screen projection. Although, until the war, television was shown successfully in London theatres, engineers here say American development has kept pace with the British and, in the opinion of many competent observers, has surpassed it.

The NBC-GE experimental rebroadcasting arrangement is expected to begin next month as the first leg of a television network.

"NBC and RCA have long been working on ways and means of networking television programs, because networking is the chief motive behind NBC's enterprise," said Mr. Morton. "NBC desires to make this new service available to more communities and an increasing number of people.

"For some time past General Electric engineers have been receiving NBC programs at an experimental station located on Helderberg Mountain, near Schenectady, about 130 miles from the originating point at the Empire State Building here.

"Further to improve the functioning of this link, GE is installing a relay station between Schenectady and New York. Reports of their technical results and observations are being discussed with NBC's television officials. GE television officials have been studying NBC's television activities in the Radio City plant. An informal arrangement recently concluded between NBC and GE provides for continued cooperation and experimentation in the development and advancement of this new industry."

Televising 16mm. Films

NBC soon will start televising 16 mm. films, for which RCA has developed a special projector. Mr. Morton believes this will solve in part the problem of a fresh film supply, which has been limited by the refusal of the major companies to supply product. Also, he believes 16 mm. films will open new program fields.

No extension of television time is now in prospect for 1940. NBC will continue its weekly schedule of between 11 and 13 hours spread over five days a week, but plans to make programs more diversified with new features, such as instructional programs, in piano playing, etching and the like, and a "vox pop" interview with the interviewer and the interviewed on the screen.

16 FOX EMPLOYEES COMPLETE 25 YEARS

Jack Sichelman, assistant to Herman Wobber, general sales manager of Twentieth Century-Fox, has compiled figures showing that 16 employees now in the ranks have been with the company 25 years. Several have recorded even longer service. There are 62 employees who have completed more than 20 years with the company and more than 400 employed 15 years or more.

Famous Canadian Plans Bonus Contest Substitute

Famous Players Canadian Corporation, Toronto, has announced that a substitute for the extra bonus contest for its theatre managers, which was cancelled following the outbreak of war, will be organized as soon as general conditions are considered appropriate. The original contest for $5,000 in cash prizes was to have been conditioned on individual theatre profits compared with the three Fall months of 1938, but the war changed the situation.

Exchanges Handle Holiday Conflict

The industry will observe Thanksgiving on the date set in each locality. Distributors will not change national release dates, but a leeway in booking will be permitted for the holiday. Loew's, RKO and Warner circuits will charge holiday prices only on the date observed locally.

About half the states will observe Thanksgiving on the traditional final Thursday in November which is November 30th; the others will follow the President's proclamation which moved the holiday up to November 23rd so that it would not come so close to the Christmas holidays. In some States both days have been designated as holidays, and there the major circuits will follow the holiday schedule of prices on both days.

The different days for observing Thanksgiving should cause no complications on bookings or release dates, say distributors. Twentieth Century-Fox has set "Daytime Wife" for Thanksgiving release on November 24th.

MGM will release "Another Thin Man" on November 24th and "Remember" December 1st, both as holiday pictures. Because the major circuits did not complete new season product negotiations until about five weeks after MGM began releasing 1939-40 product, there will be a backlog of "Babes in Arms," "Ninotchka," and "Balalaika" available in some territories for the holidays.

Warner Brothers has three pictures for playing during the holidays. These are "Private Lives of Elizabeth and Essex," for November 11th release; "Dead End Kids on Dress Parade," November 18th, and "We Are Not Alone," November 25th. These dates may vary in some distribution areas.

Film Employees Open Fund Drive

Several hundred employees of seven motion picture companies met on October 26th to launch a drive to raise funds for refugee children. The Foster Parents Plan for War Children sponsored the meeting. Employees of the following companies were present: Warner Brothers, Paramount, RKO, MGM, United Artists, Columbia and Twentieth Century-Fox.

Eric G. Muggeridge, executive secretary of the sponsoring committee, declared the organization had set a goal of $100,000 to send trucks, clothing and medical supplies to France.

Another children's colony was added to the eight now being operated in and around Biarritz. The new colony at Le Bridon at St. Etienne will accommodate 200 children. Already 709 children have been "adopted" by Americans through the Plan, it is said.

"Go to the Man on the Street," Lasky Tells Film Producers

Impresario of Talent Hunt Radio Program Samples Public Sentiment on Tours

by WILLIAM R. WEAVER

Hollywood Editor

Richly officed high in the bright blue and streamlined Hollywood headquarters of the Columbia Broadcasting System, a short city block and 26 calendar years from the bleak and gone but unforgotten barn in which he produced "The Squaw Man," blond, bland Jesse L. Lasky pores over page 14 of the October 7th edition of MOTION PICTURE HERALD noting titles of films current when the first world war was new, points to "The Cheat" (1915) and remarks that "there was one they talked about." His caller says yes, refrains from recalling that the "they" notably was inclusive of censors as well as citizens, and the conversation glides forward a quarter-century to the matter of theatre conditions and exhibitor attitudes as observed by the impresario of radio's "Gateway to Hollywood" during his personal appearance tour of 15 American cities in search of cinema talent,—a search conducted along the lines of an amateur hour under an exploitable arrangement with RKO which grants contracts to Mr. Lasky's discoveries.

Hollywood Topics Not the Public's

Exhibitors met and talked with by the man who adopted radio as a medium and thrills to its immediacy, but still thinks and talks of it in terms of its relation to the motion picture, are in no tailspin of apprehension as to what the new world war is going to mean to them in terms of box office. More discussion of this matter is heard in Hollywood, he says, than in Chicago, Pittsburgh, Louisville or Dallas. Similarly, more fan adulation is chalked up to the credit of a certain tall, dark and handsome leading man—to mention but one—in this land of make-believe than actually prevails in Little Rock, Indianapolis, Toledo or Dayton, O. Says the veteran employer of high-priced talent with reference to the actor unnamed above, "I had been as completely fooled about him as ...... is. If I was producing pictures, I'd have tried to hire him away before I made this trip. Now I know he wouldn't be worth it."

Recommends Tour for Information

Just as the Lasky samplings of public sentiment in Houston, Omaha, Nashville, Ft. Worth, Birmingham, Richmond and San Antonio revealed to him the widespread apathy toward this star and others, he says, so would a tour of the continent inform any film producer, director or writer completely and profitably on a wide variety of vital topics. They would learn, says one who in years agone spent as many millions in the making of pictures as any man alive, that the mere fact of a film's having cost a million or two millon dollars to produce is a matter of almost no interest to the present generation of ticket buyers. This is not, he says, because the ticket buyer is unaware of the expenditure, modern publicity methods taking extremely good care of that point, but rather because the same devices of communication by which this fact is disseminated have been developed to such extreme degree that they also disseminate, with amazing dispatch, a pretty well founded estimate of the picture as a piece of entertainment.

"—BLOND, BLAND JESSE LASKY—"

Finds Public Informed

Any producer, director or writer foregoing a fishing cruise to visit the great American theatregoer in his native habitat will discover, says Mr. Lasky, that "There are no more country people." He can find this out by no mere flight across continent, though, nor by glancing out of a stateroom window as the Superchief flashes through Nebraska. He didn't find it out until young men and women from small towns and hamlets neighboring the cities he visited began trooping in for the radio auditions he was there to give them. Their clothes were as modish, their nails as correctly tinted and their speech as knowing as those of the established stars they hoped to join in pictures. More to the point, they were as informed on vital topics, as sure of themselves, and beneficiaries, generally, of training in dramatic classes made available to them in schools, in special study courses undertaken independently or in the Little Theatre movement which seems to have spread throughout the prairie provinces within the last two or three years.

A Hollywood Spokesman

Mr. Lasky met these young people, thousands of them, talked to and with them, listened to their questions and gave them answers. Traveling by plane and preceded by talent scouts, he addressed college groups, clubs, lodges, chambers of commerce and library organizations. To them he was a spokesman for Hollywood. To him they were the great American audience and he found them aware, responsive and intelligently inquisitive. They let him know quickly, he says, that they are as keenly interested in pictures as ever, as avid for solid entertainment, but thoroughly equipped and quite determined to get precisely what they pay for when they go to the theatre or, failing same, to spend their time elsewhere.

"Go and Ask", His Formula

Finding out precisely what it is that this informed public wants to see on the screen is still a man-sized job for anybody whose business it is to provide it, this seasoned expert in doing so admits, but he suggests that the best way to find out is to go to them and ask. They were always willing to tell, even anxious, but the present younger generation also knows the words to tell with. Their questions, in themselves, amounted to a very thorough telling, said Lasky, whereupon he was asked whether he was going to make some pictures by way of getting something done about it.

Tempted to Return to Films

"I'm tempted, sometimes," he replied, "but I'm going to finish this work I've undertaken first." With a 52-week Wrigley contract stretching on into the future, this unpromised return to picture production seems quite remotely dated, but when and if the Lasky imprint appears again upon a main title it can be, quite conceivably, a picture cast entirely with talent brought to Hollywood by means of the Lasky airshow. Seven of the 18 "finds" he has brought to the production center—including the Linda Darnell of "Hotel for Women"—are under contract to major studios, have played in from two to 8 feature pictures. Five more have had parts in pictures, one has a radio contract and four have returned home. The other one found a happy ending in marriage.

Sponsor Supports Box Office

Those of the Lasky finds who are starred in the annual RKO-Radio feature picture presenting the two winners are quite likely to be continuing on in pictures if the Wrigley company, sponsor of the airshow, continues its policy of first-hand box office support. The sponsor appropriated the sum of $450,000 for the purchase of admission tickets to theatres exhibiting "Career." The merchandising department of the gum concern handled this detail, paying an average price of 25 cents each for tickets—which seems to work out as about 1,800,000 pairs of eyes glued to screen—and distributing them among retail dealers for distribution to customers. Few striving young actors enjoy a guarantee of that much audience attention.

Eighteen young candidates have emerged with contract honors from the talent search. They are John Archer, Alice Eden, Linda Darnell, Kathryn Adams, Charles Drake, Linda Hayes, John Laird, Camille Patti, Marjorie Cooley, Mary Jane Barnes, Millie Coles, Tony Bickley, Hugh Beaumont, Lyn McKinley, Jack McKnight, Robert Dunham, Jack Chase and Margaretta Ramsey.

CODE CAN BE REVIVED, SAYS MURPHY; INDEPENDENTS REOPEN TRUST FIGHT

Attorney General Warns Against Using Code for Defense in Anti-Trust Cases After Brandt Appeal

The major distributors rather than independent exhibitors will have to negotiate with the Department of Justice for a reversal of its stand on the proposed trade practice code, it was disclosed last week in Washington after Harry Brandt, president of the Independent Theatre Owners Association, New York, and Milton C. Weisman, counsel, conferred with Attorney General Frank Murphy.

Mr. Brandt and Mr. Weisman went to Washington in an effort to induce the Department to abandon the "hard boiled" stand taken against the majors' code by Thurman W. Arnold, assistant attorney general, last August, when he threatened to prosecute the majors if they adopted the code.

Not for Defense

Outlining the situation in the industry, the independent exhibitor representatives told the Attorney General that if the Department would give its approval to the pact, negotiations between theatre owners and distributors might be resumed and something worked out that would eliminate much of the friction which led to the very complaints on which the Department is basing its current anti-trust prosecutions.

After hearing their story, Mr. Murphy suggested that they confer with Paul Williams, special assistant in charge of the New York case, but told them that any reconsideration of the subject by the Department would be contingent upon inclusion in the code of a stipulation that it could not be used as a defense against any Government prosecution, present or future.

The second state exhibitor organization within the week to come out for the code was Allied of New York, which so decided at a meeting this week—(See story on this page).

The Department's "hard boiled" attitude on the code, made known by Mr. Arnold on August 17th in a letter to counsel for the major companies, is based on the contention that the proposed code carries specific provisions which are the subject of attack in the New York suit.

Says U. S. Stand Was Ignored

Mr. Arnold charged that the document, as it then stood, completely ignored the position taken by the Government in its trust attack and was, in brief, merely "an elaborate set of trade practice provisions superimposed upon a combination of producers, distributors and exhibitors which the Department contends is an illegal and unreasonable restrain of trade." He denied that its adoption would be "voluntary" on the part of the exhibitors who, he asserted, might feel compelled to accept in order to survive.

In that same letter, the head of the anti-trust division made it clear that he would consider no code or consent decree proposal which failed to provide for divorce of exhibition, and declared the proposed pact illegal because it failed to provide for abandonment of theatre ownership by distributors. That, he said, "must be obtained."

Another Exhibitor Group Asks Code; Texas, Virginia, Connecticut Meet

Fighting again the issue for which it was expelled from the National Allied States Association, namely, the now "illegal" trade practice code, New York State Allied this week was openly and strongly campaigning for a trade practice code in New York State. The renewed code efforts were a result of a membership meeting in Syracuse last Wednesday, presided over by Max Cohen, whose differences with the national association over self-regulation of the industry precipitated his unit's expulsion, but brought him a vote of confidence from the state unit's directors two weeks ago.

Neil F. Agnew, acting for Paramount, was the first to accept an invitation sent to the major distributors by Mr. Cohen to discuss the state code.

See State Code Possible

At the Syracuse meeting, a state code was said to be possible of adoption, in view of the Department of Justice's condemnation of a national code. Mr. Cohen heads a special code committee, which will confer with the members of the distributors' sales departments who formulated the code, and the Attorney General.

Others on the committee are Ray Pashley, Interlaken; Mitchel Conery, Ravena; Sidney Grossman, Syracuse; Rapley L. Merriman, Syracuse; and Herman Lorence, Cattaragus.

New York Allied will, if the code efforts fail, set up permanent conciliation boards in the state's chief cities, it was said.

The New York unit endorsed the Government's anti-trust actions.

It protested the classification of pictures above the "A" bracket, declaring that "super-supers" for which majors asked higher percentages, were unjustified, and that "'A' represents the best production from any standpoint."

Edmund Souhami was named successor to Harry Kosch, as the unit's counsel and field representative. On the financial committee, were named Thomas DiLorenzo, New Paltz; Irving Sherman, Pearl River; Mark Finkelstein, New York City.

Texas Allied Meets In Dallas This Week

Taxation, litigation, legislation, radio competition, television, the code, and distributors' trade practices, were among the topics discussed at the convention of the Texas Allied this Monday and Tuesday in the Baker Hotel, Dallas.

Among the speakers were Colonel Henry Albert Cole, president of the National Allied States Association, who presided; Abram Myers, general counsel of the national group; A. W. Steffes, leader of the Northwest Allied; W. J. Moore, architect, and H. M. Richey, RKO.

Independent exhibitors are succeeding, Colonel Cole told the convention. "Action has outstripped conversation in our industry," he said. "Two years ago there were despair and lethargy. Last year, there was some hope, but little expectation of relief. Today, there is a certainty that the shaky structure is to be torn down, and replaced by a more liveable home."

Mr. Myers said independent exhibitors for the first time lived without fear of property confiscation; but, he warned:

"Continuance of the fight for decrees in the courts of law or a statute enacted by Congress is the only insurance that can be relied upon to protect their property when they lie down to sleep at night."

The convention reindorsed the Neely Bill and re-elected Colonel Cole its president. Other officers elected were Rubin Frels, Henry Hall, Lee Threet, Mrs. Martha McSpadden, and R. N. Smith, vice-president; A. W. Lilly, treasurer; T. W. Lewis, Will Dorbandt, L. C. Tidball, C. M. Cooer, Henry Sparks, Mrs. Thomas Donnell, P. V. Williams, Homer Mulkey, Lonnie Legg, and Roy Howell.

Virginia MPTO Directors Convene This Wednesday

The board of directors of the MPTO of Virginia was scheduled to meet in Richmond this Wednesday, to discuss, among other things, the coming annual mid-Winter convention in January.

On the board are C. L. Abercrombie, Sam Bendheim, Jr., A. Julian Brylawski, W. A. Byers, Sam Craver, W. F. Crockett, J. Frank Falls, Sydney Gates, Nat Glasser, Leonard Gordon, Elmore Heins, A. E. Lichtman, Ellison Loth, A. Frank O'Brien, R. C. Overbey, Hunter Perry, Benjamin Pitts, Frank Stover, W. H. Rippard, Charles Roth, Herman Rubin, Allen Sparrow, Charles A. Somma, Morton G. Thalheimer, E. T. Warner, I. Weinberg, Otto Wells, William S. Wilder, and Harold Wood.

Mr. Crockett is president.

Connecticut Allied Joins Boston Unit

Allied Theatres of Connecticut voted last week to affiliate with the Independent Exhibitors, Inc., of Boston, generally regarded as the "New England Allied," and whose president is Nathan Yamins, of Fall River.

The Connecticut unit continues as a separate unit, however.

Its newly elected officers are A. M. Schuman, president; Charles Repass, vice-president; Joseph Reed, second vice-president; Barney Calechman, treasurer.

New Jersey Allied Talks About Film

A discussion of product quality was scheduled as the important topic at the all-day meeting of the New Jersey Allied this Thursday, in Passaic, New Jersey.

The meeting closed with a beefsteak at the Ritz Restaurant, same city, to which were invited New Jersey salesmen and New York exchange managers.

Can't Use Code for Defense: Murphy

man, Mr. Murphy emphasized that the Department will do nothing which will jeopardize its chances in the suits it has brought against the majors and against several independent theatre chains which have tying contracts—Schine, Griffith, et al.

No Relation to Suits

First requisite for reconsideration of the code, he said, is acceptance by the distributors that its adoption shall have no relation to pending litigation or to any suits which the Government may bring later.

Apparently feeling that nothing would be served by going further until the companies had indicated whether they would accept that demand, the Attorney General laid down no other conditions at the time.

"The Department's position is that the code cannot be approved without a stipulation that it shall not be used as a defense in any proceedings brought by the Government," he said. "The Government cannot approve anything that would interfere with its present litigation or prejudice its position."

In view of Mr. Murphy's demand for the stipulation, there is some doubt in Washington whether a code with such a provision written in would be worth the paper it was printed on.

Calls Code Possible

Max Cohen, president of the New York Allied, whose organization last week opened a campaign for a New York State code, and was willing to go to the Department of Justice in an attempt to have its legality recognized, said this week that he was sure that a representative group of exhibitors, without help of lawyers, and sitting with distributors, could write a code which could be in operation 24 hours after presentation to the Attorney General.

Many exhibitor and distributor leaders said this week that a code which the Government would agree was not harmful to its anti-trust prosecutions, could be written.

It was noted that the 20 per cent cancellation clause would probably not be included in such a code, inasmuch as it relates to block-booking, which the Government definitely disapproves. Also, it was said that "divorcement" of production from exhibition could not be inserted into a code, because the distributors would not likely agree to it.

Could "Risk Suit"

While all home office executives who were queried on their reactions to the attorney general's statement declined to comment officially, because, they pointed out, Mr. Murphy's views were not addressed either to them or to an authorized industry spokesman, they were not reluctant to give off-the-record expression to their private feelings.

Independent Begins Omaha Trust Suit

The "breathing spell' enjoyed by the majors these past several weeks, from the anti-trust actions of many independents, was interrupted last Saturday, when R. D. Goldberg, of the circuit bearing his name, filed suit in Federal Court in Omaha, charging restrain of trade to the majors, the Tri-States Theatres, and the Singer-Omaha (RKO affiliate).

Mr. Goldberg asked an injunction against the alleged monopoly. He operates one "downtown" house and five suburban. Tri-States operates the Omaha, Orpheum, and Paramount theatres; the Singer-Omaha, the Brandeis.

Tri-States previously had asked an injunction to keep Mr. Goldberg from opening his State Theatre. There has been no action on this.

Majors Request Details In Coast Trust Case

The majors and Fox West Coast Theatres, defendants in the Government contempt case against them for alleged violation of two 1930 consent decrees, last Friday filed motion for bills of particulars in Los Angeles Federal Court.

Alfred Wright, leader of defense counsel, pleaded for the added information, in order that the defense might "adequately" prepare its own case. Hearings on the Government's motion to set trial, have been scheduled for next Monday.

Government Won't Tell Names of N. Y. Witnesses

Paul Williams, special Assistant United States Attorney General, in charge of the New York anti-trust action, said last week that the Government would not reveal names of its witnesses, so long as defense attorneys withheld names of their own witnesses.

The question arose when Mr. Williams conferred with Benjamin Popper, attorney for United Artists, over the status of the latter's interrogatories to the Government.

30-Day Delay in Schreiber Case

The United States District Court in Detroit last week granted a 30-day delay in the suit by Raymond Schreiber, operator of the Midwest Theatres, against Cooperative Theatres of Michigan, upon motion by Cooperative. Mr. Schreiber's suit alleges restraint by Cooperative which prevented the Midwest from obtaining film.

The motion requesting the delay was asked, so that ownership of Midwest would be determined in State Circuit Court. Raymond Schreiber is being sued there by Jacob Schreiber.

Film Deal Ruled Illegal In Philadelphia Action

William Kirkpatrick, federal judge, in Philadelphia Monday, ruled that a master contract between major film companies and circuit distributors was a violation of the Sherman and Clayton anti-trust acts. The action had been brought by Eugene Mori, operator of the Landis theatre, Vineland, N. J., and several of the towns' officials against Warner Brothers Theatres and the majors charging monopoly.

The judge granted an injunction which was not put into effect because William A. Schnider and Morris Wolf, counsel for the defendants, immediately appealed the decision to the Circuit Court of Appeals.

Typical Rural Town Theatre Gets from 36 to 50% of Business Out-of-Town

The Schine Circuit, largest in upstate New York, in conjunction with Country Gentleman magazine, has established that a typical town in a rural territory draws 36 per cent of its theatre business from out-of-town, rising to 50 per cent on Saturday nights.

Selecting Oneonta, New York, as the "typical" town, it was shown that theatregoers sometimes travel from far and wide to the town theatre, 4.6 per cent riding 40 miles and over; 6.1 per cent, 30 miles and over; 10.3 per cent, 25 miles; 22.2 per cent, 20 miles; 41.5 per cent, 15 miles; 67.2 per cent, 10 miles, and 88 per cent, five miles and over.

Ninety-eight and one-half per cent of the typical-town's residents generally go to local theatres, 84 per cent of the "outside" families likewise going to that town's theatres.

They found that "Good roads and the automobile have put rural America on wheels. They'll go to see what they want to see. It's not how far—but how good is the movie!"

Only 9 per cent of the outsiders go to the movies three or more times a week, while 22 per cent of the natives go the same number of times. Twenty-nine per cent go twice a week from the outside and 37 per cent go twice from the town.

Eighty-six per cent of the out-of-town audience goes to the movies at least once a week.

Thiry-seven per cent usually ask for a weekly program, 70 per cent ask for photos of movie stars.

Stars whose pictures are wanted: Dorothy Lamour, Don Ameche, Buck Jones, Carole Lombard, Barbara Stanwyck, Betty Grable, Jack Benny, Burns and Allen, Bob Burns and Randolph Scott.

Some conclusions:

Rural people consider the movies their best entertainment.

Rural people are of tremendous importance to small-town theatres . . . and to Hollywood.

Small-town theatres spend their own big money to attract and increase the attendance of rural people.

These small-town theatres need the help of the producers.

Small-town merchants have a real appreciation of the fact that a good share of their volume comes from outside the city limits . . . and that the movies are important to them because they bring them business.

Distance from the theatre is no bar to attendance by rural people.

No matter how one looks at it, the profit margin of the small-town motion picture exhibitor comes from the country.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Slow But Steady

Hollywood's weather changed this week, but its film studios maintained the slow and even pace established in the week before, while sunshine, the region's stock-in-trade, gave way to fog. The number of pictures shooting went from 31 to 32, while eight started, as compared to the six of the preceding week.

Two less, however, are now in preparation, the total coming to 21 as against last week's 23. The number being edited remained the same, 84. The number shooting last week had been the lowest since last April.

Seven films were finished; Universal accounting for three, and Columbia Paramount, Producers Pictures and RKO each having one.

The Universal product was "Destry Rides Again," which makes Marlene Dietrich eligible for western box office honors, "The Big Guy" and "Framed."

Columbia wound up its work on "Cop from Hell's Kitchen," Paramount did likewise on "Light of Western Stars"; Producers Pictures on "Invisible Killer," and RKO on "Distant Fields."

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer started Ernst Lubitsch's production of "The Shop around the Corner," while Republic began three: "The Narrow Path," Money to Burn" and "South of the Border."

"My Little Chickadee" and "Charlie McCarthy, Detective" were started by Universal, and RKO began "The Marines Fly High."

Film Fathers Book

One of the more pleasant things everybody's always believed ought to be done but nobody's got around to doing appears on the verge of getting a practical trial which students of motion picture production and book publishing are likely to find interesting. Paramount announced at weekend the sale of book publication rights to its original screen story, "Memo to a Movie Producer," to the New York publishing firm of Duell, Sloan and Pearce, Inc. Further, Ketti Frings, author of the story and sharing with Charles Brackett and Manuel Reachi credit for the screen play, has been given a leave of absence for the purpose of putting the work into book form.

"Here may well be the beginning," said Richard Halliday, head of the Paramount story department, "of an entirely new trend in the publishing field.

"It is a fact, of course, that the publishing houses are having difficulty today in obtaining material, particularly of book length. This problem has been intensified by the outbreak of the war in Europe.

"It is hard to understand, really, why American publishers have so long neglected Hollywood's screen offerings as a source of material. The files of the movie studios are full of stores that might easily be transformed into best-sellers—for example, "Rulers of the Sea," Frank Lloyd's story of the conquest of the Atlantic by steam.

"The fact that the public has seen a story told on the screen should only serve to whet its appetite for a novel based on the same material, just as Hollywood finds a best-seller makes an ideal basis for a film story. Also, preparation and shooting of a picture often requires so much time that it is possible to novelize an original screen story and have it on the bookstands from one end of the country to the other before the film is ready for release."

A DIFFERENCE IN ATTENTION

One conspicuous difference between the special election last Tuesday in which California routed the Thirty-Thursday, or Ham 'n' Eggs, pension plan and the EPIC ("End Poverty in California") compaign with which Upton Sinclair jittered the Pacific Slope, was that this time the motion picture industry, organized and otherwise, was silent on the subject. Nobody said anything.

Last time, studios sent newsreel cameramen out on assignment to cover the preparatory campaign, distributed the resultant newsreels far, wide and gatis, sent speakers to public rostrums, carried the banner of protest high and, as it turned out, victoriously. This time they did not do anything. That time they had to live down some criticism, which took some time. That could be why they stood by now. Nobody said this. Nobody said anything. Nobody even said it was a good idea to say nothing. There may be a moral in all this, or not, but this was precisely the story.

Warners Personnel

The studio personnel of the Warner-First National Burbank Studios for the new season includes 145 actors, directors, writers, composers and producers.

Nineteen stars are listed; 33 featured players; 13 directors; 5 dialogue directors; 49 writers; 5 composers; 10 producers working under the supervision of Jack L. Warner, vice-president in charge of production and Hal B. Wallis, executive producer.

Grand National Acts on Creditors

A petition under the Chandler Act for an arrangement with creditors was filed this week in United States district court in New York by Grand National Pictures, Inc. Total liabilities of $549,403 and assets of $1,518,418 were listed in the petition which proposed full payment to unsecured creditors on installments over a period of 18 months, and earlier payment in full to priority and preferred claimants.

Creditors of the company will receive the formal proposal of the plan November 17th at a meeting of creditors of the company, which was called by Referee Peter B. Olney, Jr., designated on Friday to sit as special master in reorganization proceedings of the company. Referee Olney has authorized Grand National to operate its business and manage its property for a period of 30 days subject to his control.

E. W. Hammons, who signed the petition as president, said that payments would be met by loans totalling $600,000 to be received by the parent organization, Educational Pictures, Inc., and its affiliated company, Educational Studios, Inc., of which a "sufficient amount" would be received by Grand National to pay under the plan.

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation will loan these companies $450,000, Mr. Hammons said, after an additional $150,000 is obtained by loans of $100,000 from Electrical Research Products, Inc., $15,000 from the National City Bank and $35,000 from other sources.

Unsecured general creditors under the plan will receive 100 per cent payment on installments of 25 per cent within 45 days of confirmation, 15 per cent within seven months, 10 per cent within 10 months, 25 per cent within 14 months and the balance of 25 per cent within 18 months. All other creditors will receive full payment at an unspecified earlier date, according to the petition.

Wage claims were lisited at $19,053, taxes due to 22 states and the federal government at $34,229, preferred secured general creditors at $393,412. The chief asset listed was under the heading of trademarks and reissue values of negatives with an evaluation of $1,040,543. This valuation, the petition declared, is based on continued operation of the business.

Other assets set forth were stock in trade, totalling $130,092; machinery and fixtures, $103,000; accounts receivable, $66,711; lease and improvements on Hollywood studio, $60,000; notes and other instruments, $77,258; bank and other deposits, $31,211, and prepaid insurance, $2,000.

Among larger secured creditors, the petition named the National City Bank, $35,150; J. D. Maguire, $22,663; Arcadia Pictures Corp., $15,773; De Luxe Laboratories, Inc.; $12,632; and William Skirball, $5,198.

Larger unsecured creditors were listed as Educational Pictures, Inc., $94,603; Edco Prod. Unit, Inc., $49,277; E. W. Hammons, $43,414; Educational Studios, Inc., $38,966; Educational Films Co., Ltd., $34,860; Jack Skirball, $11,448 and Soc. Des Films ERKA, $10,000.

In a statement issued after the filing of the petition, Grand National stated that the step was taken to forestall any "ill-advised action on the part of some minority creditors," and to prevent any creditors obtaining preference.

The first meeting of the directors of the International Film Center, which was granted a charter by the Secretary of State of New York, will be held next week. The following are acting as directors until the first meeting: Dr. James T. Shotwell, Columbia University; Luther Gulick, George F. Zook, Richard Walsh and Donald Slesinger.

Jimmy Walker Gets Show Business Post

James J. Walker, former mayor of New York City, is the new president of the National Association of Performing Artists, with offices in New York City.

The organization has been reported considering an agreement with the Music Publishers Protective Association on a special fee for phonograph records used in coin-operated music players.

Fred Waring, the orchestra leader, who had been president, resigned to take the chairmanship of the board of governors.

Warner Releases 5 Months Ahead

Release schedules for Warner feature product have been set for five months ahead, "a precedent in the motion picture industry," declared J. L. Warner, in charge of production, prior to his return to Hollywood, from New York last Wednesday. Mr. Warner had been in New York for the past month, during which he conferred with Gradwell L. Sears, general sales manager, on production and distribution plans for 1940.

November will see the release of four films of this year: "The Roaring Twenties," starring James Cagney with Priscilla Lane, Humphrey Bogart, in a story by Mark Hellinger; "We are Not Alone," Paul Muni the star, supported by Jane Bryan, based on the novel of the same name by James Hilton; "The Private Lives of Elizabeth and Essex," co-starring Bette Davis and Errol Flynn, in color, and "The Dead End Kids on Dress Parade," now showing at the Strand, New York.

Set for December release is "Four Wives," sequel to "Four Daughters," with Priscilla, Rosemary and Lola Lane, Gale Page, Jeffrey Lynn, John Garfield, Claude Rains; The Warner Christmas release will be "A Child Is Born," with Geraldine Fitzgerald, Jeffrey Lynn and Gladys George; "The Return of Dr. X," with Wayne Morris, Rosemary Lane and Humphrey Bogart.

The January schedule includes "Invisible Stripes," just been completed, with George Raft, Jane Bryan and William Holden; "Brother Rat and a Baby," now in its last week of shooting, with Eddie Albert, Wayne Morris, Priscilla Lane; "Story of Dr. Ehrlich," with Edward G. Robinson and Ruth Gordon, being produced by William Dieterle is directing it.

February releases will be "The Fighting 69th," with James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, George Brent, Alan Hale, Frank McHugh; "Years Without Days," with John Garfield, Ann Sheridan, Pat O'Brien, Burgess Meredith.

On the March list is "We Shall Meet Again," in which Merle Oberon will be starred opposite George Brent and Pat O'Brien; another March release will be "Virginia City," starring Errol Flynn and Miriam Hopkins, supported by Randolph Scott, Alan Hale, Donald Crisp.

Warner will complete production of its 1939-40 short subject and feature program by January 1st under a schedule that calls for the filming of six more films during the balance of November and December.

Gordon Hollingshead, in charge of shorts production at Burbank, plans to have his entire line-up out of the way when Norman H. Moray, Vitaphone sales manager, goes to Hollywood in January to confer with Jack L. Warner and Hal B. Wallis on the shorts schedule for 1940-41.

Altogether, the 1939-40 schedule lists 18 two-reel subjects and 68 single-reelers.

Modern Art Film Program Changed

Starting Tuesday of this week and continuing until November 19th the Museum of Modern Art will run highlights from its cycle of 70 films. The program will start daily at 4:00 p. m. and there will be but one showing. The special series program follows:

November 7th—The Rise of the American Film: "The New York Hat," with Mary Pickford and Lionel Barrymore and directed by D. W. Griffith (1912); "The Fugitive," directed by Thomas H. Ince, with William S. Hart (1914); "The Clever Dummy," Mack Sennett Company (1917); "A Fool There Was," with Theda Bara (1914).

Dutch Film Trade Shows Improvement

by PHILIP DE SCHAAP

in Amsterdam

After the first difficult weeks of special measures by the Government of Holland and uncertainty regarding film imports, a general improvement is seen among exhibitors and independent distributors, in particular.

The loss from the decline of regular theatre patronage has been offset largely by soldiers in search of entertainment. They are admitted at a 50 per cent reduction in admissions. Small town theatres where military garrisons are located are profiting the most.

There is little difficulty in shipments from Paris to Holland, with Dutch distributors sending agents or going themselves to the French capital to obtain product suitable for the Dutch market. Dutch editions of American newsreels, which before the war were prepared for this market in Paris, now are translated and processed in Dutch laboratories.

HOLLYWOOD'S "FILM OF MONTH" AIR DRAMATIZATION UP TO EXHIBITORS

Plan for Series Depends on Replies to Kate Smith's Test Program on "Drums Along the Mohawk"

The fate of Hollywood's new idea further to cement radio with films through a series of dramatizations over national hookups, of a "picture of the month," depends upon word received by Twentieteh Century-Fox from 500 exhibitors in key cities from coast to coast. The owners have been asked to give the company their reactions of the test dramatization of "Drums along the Mohawk," which went out last Friday night on Kate Smith's Columbia Broadcasting program from Hollywood. Miss Smith had gone to Hollywood from New York for the purpose. Seventy-eight stations carried the test on the picture's release day.

Actors Guild Protests

The Kate Smith broadcast caused the Screen Actors Guild earlier to restate its position against the "forcing" of big-name Hollywood stars by producers and studios to appear on commercial programs as guests for and in behalf of specific productions and otherwise. The Guild warned the studios that such practice of a studio would be considered in violation of the Guild's basic agreement with the studio.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Twentieth Century-Fox some time ago disclosed that the appearances of their stars on the air would at least be curtailed.

Marking the first time that a major actually has gone direct to exhibitors for opinions on box office and merchandising values of radio "plugs" for pictures, Twentieth Century-Fox's approach last week follows years of exhibitor condemnation of film stars' air appearances on the grounds that the stars were acting in competition to theatres.

Ask Exhibitors' Criticisms

Harry Brand, Fox studio publicity director, asked exhibitors to wire at the studio's expense their criticisms of the broadcast which presented Claudette Colbert and Henry Fonda.

The broadcast idea, originated by Bill Bacher, oldtime radio producer, who has a plan to present dramatization of an outstanding picture once a month on an established radio program, calling the show "Movie Night" and giving the entire industry as well as the picture and its producing studio exploitation.

Mr. Bacher said today that future programs would depend upon comments of exhibitors received by Fox, disclosing for first time that the broadcast plan had the cooperation of studio publicity and advertising departments. Under Mr. Bacher's plan, studio publicity-advertising directors would select the picture of month and he would produce a dramatization for insertion on a program already established.

Mr. Bacher said last Friday night's program was an "oral montage" of the growth of industry in observance of the Golden Jubilee anniversary, long passed.

Pointing out that the only objection thus far came from Screen Actors Guild, Mr. Bacher said that studio contracts with players usually included a clause under which players must at the privilege of the studio make one or more personal appearances for the exploitation of a picture.

RKO announced that "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" would be roadshown in January prior to regular runs.

Openings Set for "Wind", "Gulliver", "Lincoln" and Other New Pictures

David Oliver Selznick's "Gone with the Wind" finally is shaping up, after years of prefilming discussion, preparation and production. Under the auspices of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, distributor, Mr. Selznick will put on one of those big-name, big-ballyhoo "world premieres" in Atlanta at precisely 8:15 P. M. on the night of Friday, December 15th, at the Grand theatre of MGM's parent, Loew's.

Following several days of discussion in the home office in New York, deciding date details, procedure and sales policy—with Mr. Selznick and nearly all MGM's top sales executives participating—it was decided that top percentages will be asked of exhibitors for rental, the company believing that it is entitled to them because of the cost and magnitude of the production, the officials concluding that the film will have one of the longest runs and biggest grosses in years.

MGM is setting $10,000,000 as a possible gross in the United States and Canada. The film will be sold on exclusive contract, the regular 1939-40 contracts specifying that "GWTW" is not included.

Negative cost of the picture, actually, was $3,950,000, according to the Selznick office via MGM. MGM estimates that cost of color prints and advertising will bring the cost up to about $4,500,000 before the picture reaches a theatre.

MGM will play "Gone with the Wind" in selected cities before the national sales policy is definitely determined. These runs will be in the nature of tests, on the basis of which the percentages to be asked of exhibitors, the exhibition plan and promotion campaign will be set.

MGM will send the top stars of the picture to Atlanta for the world premiere at Loew's Grand. Clark Gable, Vivien Leigh, Leslie Howard, Olivia de Havilland and Ann Rutherford will attend the opening.

Following Atlanta, the picture will open in Los Angeles and New York late in December.

Selznick expects to attend the Atlanta and New York openings, following which he will begin an extended vacation.

Howard Dietz, MGM advertising and publicity chief, is shaping up the promotion plans. William Hebert, formerly Selznick International advertising and publicity director, will assist him. Perry Charles and Mel Heymann of the Dietz N. Y. staff have been assigned to work with Mr. Hebert.

Running time of the film is three hours and 40 minutes and there will be an intermission of ten minutes. Film rights to the novel were purchased by Selznick International in July, 1936. 1,400 candidates for the role of Scarlett O'Hara were interviewed. 92 actual film tests were made.

"Gulliver's Travels" Set for December 20th

Paramount's production of Max Fleischer's "Gulliver's Travels," second feature cartoon in U. S. film history, is scheduled to open at the Paramount, New York, on December 20. There will be no change in policy at the house for the run of the picture.

Paramount also has scheduled a world premiere of the feature cartoon for Miami on December 17. Both dates are dependent upon completion of color prints, the schedule for which will not be definite for another 10 days.

Following their introduction over radio networks, the song numbers of "Gulliver" have received an initial order of 50,000 copies from stores throughout the nation, Lou Diamond, head of Famous Music Corporation, reported Monday.

RKO Taking "Abe Lincoln" South

The Southern states premiere of "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" will take place some in mid-January at the Lincoln Memorial University, near the tri-state boundary of Tennessee, Kentucky and Virginia. Road-shows start in January.

Max Gordon and Harry Goetz, producers for RKO of the Sherwood Pulitzer Prize play, said Monday that they have granted the request of Dr. Stewart W. McClelland, President of Lincoln Memorial University, for an invitational opening there.

This premiere will mark the opening of the University's program for a 50th Anniversary celebration.

Paramount Has a Series of Openings

Lou Smith, associate producer of Frank Lloyd's Paramount release of "Rulers of the Sea," left the home office yesterday last Thursday for Philadelphia as the first stop in a two-week trip to various key cities to arrange special screenings on the picture for critics, circuit and independent exhibitors.

Mr. Smith was in Baltimore Friday and from there visited the following cities: November 6, Washington; November 7, Pittsburgh; November 8, Indianapolis; November 9, Cincinnati; November 10, Louisville; following with November 13, Dallas; November 14, Fort Worth; November 15, Houston and St. Louis on November 16.

Fox Has Plans for Temple Roadshow

"The Blue Bird," Shirley Temple's new color picture, will be withdrawn from Twentieth Century-Fox' release schedule and held for national roadshow treatment, it was disclosed Tuesday today by Herman Wobber, general manager of distribution. In place of "The Blue Bird," which had been scheduled for Christmas week engagements, the company will release Sonja Henie's "Everything Happens At Night," now nearing completion at the studio.

SEVEN MORE COUNTRIES ADD TO CURRENCY, IMPORT RESTRICTIONS

Yugoslavia Suspends Dollar Transfers; Belgium Places Hope in Reciprocal Pact with U. S., While Lira Drops in Italy

Seven countries have added to their financial restrictions, or altered their currencies in some manner, since the Motion Picture Herald in a survey published in its October 7th issue showed that over 50 countries had currency restrictions, and that in five they had been imposed since the beginning of the new war, a month before. In addition to the six countries, others this week were reported seeking financial aid, because of the war, and planning further restrictions.

Canada, on October 24th, announced favorable rules for operation of foreign currency bank accounts. These were expected to facilitate business operations, but, of necessity, are a measure for protection of Canadian business alone. The country, on October 12th, floated its first War Loan, of $200,000,000.

Yugoslavia Acts

Yugoslavia, on October 20th, suspended all dollar transfers for service of coupons and amortization of loans and credits of State, and those guaranteed by the State, excepting only funding bonds.

Finland, for several weeks threatened by summary Russian action, may ask a foreign loan. On October 26th the country put money imports and exports under the Bank of Finland for strict control. All foreign financial transactions are forbidden, without special permission.

On October 26th, the Bank of England reduced its discount rate from three to two per cent.

Belgium is suffering unemployment in mining and manufacturing. Some hope is placed in a proposed reciprocal pact with this country.

In Hungary, the pengo was devalued by approximately 10 per cent on October 18th.

In Italy, the lira is perceptibly declining. Hope is being placed in business Italy may gain from the war.

Netherlands Problem

The economy of the Netherlands has been sharply affected by the threat of invasion and the prolonged mobilization, with financial measures expected soon.

In Nicaragua, from September 23rd on, the native importer has had to obtain a prior permit; and to open an irrevocable letter of credit, where his application exceeds $200.

In Costa Rica, the vanishing of Germany as a major trade factor has induced the Government to plan stringent exchange restrictions.

The financial news, all of it generally and finally affecting the conduct of motion picture business in the various foreign countries, was not, however, altogether negative in the sense of increased restrictions on American product.

The war has aided the Japanese shipping industry, and Japan is reported anxious to enter a new trade treaty with the United States. On October 25th, breaking tradition, it attached the yen to the dollar at an official quotation of 23 7-16 cents. The yen had been tied to sterling.

United States trade treaties are expected with Chile, Peru and Uruguay.

The Turkish mutual assistance pact with France and England, of October 23rd, may favorably affect American motion picture distribution there in general, it is thought; inasmuch as it is a move by that country away from trade with the axis powers, and because the country may receive a $214,000,000 credit, strengthening its buying power.

On October 9th, Sweden cancelled its import taxes on several foodstuffs, indicating a better financial outlook.

The United States has arranged to sell gold to Brazil, under a 1937 agreement.

Argentine business is improving, and the exchange situation is under control, it was reported. In late September, the peso was linked to the dollar. It had been tied to the sterling.

ASK IMPROVEMENTS IN LATIN AMERICAN TIES

U. S. Official, Writer, Producer and Distributor Speak at Teatro al Día Luncheon

Present trade relations with the increasingly important Latin-American market leave room for constructive improvement both in trade practices and in the type of product offered, it was contended by several speakers at a Latin-American luncheon of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers held last Tuesday in New York in cooperation with Teatro al Día, the Quigley publication for the Spanish-speaking markets.

Nathan D. Golden, head of the Motion Picture division of the U. S. Department of Commerce, praised the work of the foreign departments of the American motion picture companies and gave facts and figures to prove the preeminence of American made pictures in Latin America.

Writer, Producer, Distributor

A paper by Rene Borgia, writer, who worked for five years with Columbia as a scenarist and director of Spanish films, opened the discussion. Eddie Le Baron, orchestra leader and president of the Eduardo Le Baron Productions, which makes Spanish pictures, and formerly with Twentieth Century-Fox, was the second speaker.

The third speaker was Armando A. Miranda, president of Borinquen Film Company, a leading Puerto Rican distributor. Jose Bensaude, commercial attache on Portugal's World Fair Commission and special delegate of the Lisbon Chamber of Commerce, spoke from the floor to point out that one chief country of South America, Brazil, spoke Portuguese and problems there were not solved by improving Spanish titles.

Titles Called Problem

Paul Lazarus, Jr., AMPA's president, read Mr. Borgia's paper, after he had made a few introductory remarks emphasizing that AMPA intended no criticism of the foreign departments by wording the day's subject, "What is wrong with American methods in Latin-America?" Mr. Borgia held that one of the difficulties with American films for Latin-America was the number of titles. In his paper he contended that 70 per cent of the titles now used were unnecessary. He asked that American makers of pictures for the Spanish market have implicit faith in their collaborators, who know the people and the market. The difference in the idea of a hero was stressed and a plea was made for special selection of scripts for the Latin-American market.

Competition Cited

Eddie Le Baron asked for a better understanding of needs of the Latin-American market; no dumping of product and protested against block booking. Mr. Le Baron cited figures to show that at one time the United States had virtually the entire Latin-American market and now both foreign pictures: French, German, Italian especially, and local pictures were offering competition. The advent of talking pictures increased the problems for American pictures in that market, according to Mr. Le Baron. He holds that so many persons in those countries, because they cannot read or write, are unable to follow the Spanish titles, and lose the whole story. In the days of the silent films, the plots were easier to follow and fewer titles were necessary, he said. Mr. Le Baron suggested that a limited number of Spanish films be made in Hollywood and Spanish stars used.

Block Booking Attacked

Armando A. Miranda attacked the system of block booking in force in Puerto Rico, under which, according to Senor Miranda, exhibitors are forced by the 'Film Board' to buy all the pictures of all the American companies. The result, he says, is that the exhibitor finds himself with more pictures bought than there are days in the year. Greater care in wording titles was suggested. Senor Miranda held that frequently the Spanish word is not used and in its place there is a word or expression peculiar to one country. A plea also was made for more realism.

Mr. Golden singled out for commendation Major Frederick L. Herron of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, and cited facts and figures to prove the successful work done by the large companies' foreign departments in the South American market. Percentage figures were given to show that Latin-America is not a virgin market where American film companies will be able to equalize losses in Europe caused by the war. America, according to Mr. Golden, has already almost all of the Latin American film business.

Mr. Golden said that "to the exhibitors of the whole world American pictures are still bread and butter," that without them they could not exist. Latin America is not a panacea for the losses in the rest of the world; it is a limited market for films, he declared. American motion pictures have lost ground there in the last three or five years, but only about 5 per cent, from 80 per cent to 75 per cent, he added. Ten per cent is now made up of local product, the remaining 15 per cent is French, German, English, Italian pictures.

Charges Faulty Publicity

American companies may pick up 10 of the 15 per cent now held by foreign countries which will lose the market on account of the war, he predicted. The Latin American local industry will absorb at least 5 per cent of the screen time held by European films.

Mr. Golden said he believed it was a mistake to send down representatives of American companies with a lot of fanfare to get more money out of Latin America to balance European losses. This, he held, is bad publicity, giving exhibitors and distributors in those areas a feeling that advantage is going to be taken of them. Mr. Golden, however, believes that visits of stars to Latin America helps local business and brings about greater understanding and friendship.

No studio makes pictures to offend any other nation; American films are generally well received in Latin America, and it is only a rare exception that causes any local protest, Mr. Golden said but he insists that no American companies should go down to Latin America and help local film industries. This, Mr. Golden said he had observed over a period of 14 years, is the first step to quotas and barriers. Mr. Golden asked the question, "Why train personnel who eventually will become competitors?"

GOLDEN CITES EXPORT FIGURES

Nathan D. Golden, of the Film Division of the U. S. Department of Commerce, at the last AMPA meeting said that in 1932 61,000,000 feet of film made in the United States was exported to Latin America; in 1938, 88,000,000 feet, and in the first nine months of this year 62,000,000 feet had been sent. A total of 139 pictures were locally produced in Latin America last year. Of this number 50 were made in the Argentine and 60 in Mexico. In 1937, only 37 were produced in the Argentine and 52 in Mexico. Peru made 11 pictures in 1938, compared with only 2 in 1937.

We Are Not Alone

(Warner Brothers)

Muni in Hilton Novel

To the simple English doctor who is tragic hero of this James Hilton novel, the first of his works he has personally adapted for screen purposes, Paul Muni brings in rounded whole the ripe talent for characterization which distinguished his "Zola" and his "Pasteur." Playing this plain small town Englishman of 1914 without benefit of makeup, yet living the character as utterly as those others, he turns in a performance powerful in understatement and the more dramatic because undramatically handled. Exhibitors playing the picture naturally will stress the Muni portrayal and there need be no understatement in their ad copy.

The Hilton novel presented here deals with the tragic results of an earnest middle class physician's efforts to serve his patients well, rear his son intelligently and bear with a wife harsh by tradition and ungiven to compromise. He befriends an Austrian girl who becomes his boy's governess. Gossip busies itself with this situation and, when the wife accidentally takes poison, he and the girl are convicted of murder on circumstantial evidence and sentenced to death. The significance of the title becomes clear when, in a conversation between the doctor and the girl on the day before their execution, he points out that they, who are to be killed although they have done no wrong, are not alone in this circumstance, a reference to the soldiers then being killed in the first World War without having earned execution. The tragic ending is retained to drive home this pacifistic point.

Jane Bryan plays the Austrian girl befriended by the Doctor, a difficult role superbly done. Flora Robson as the wife makes a detestable character an artistic achievement. The large cast is accurately chosen for types.

Associate producer Henry Blanke gave executive producer Hal Wallis his usual impeccable production, a finely wrought, steadily developed, strongly knit picture. Director Edmund Goulding's handling of long, difficult sequences and intricate bits of action measures up to his high standard. Milton Krims collaborated with the author on the screen play.

Although the film constitutes a positive statement of the author's case against war, using the first World War as of its start and early weeks in 1914, there is only a bit of street brawling—English citizens stoning the store of a German merchant, shouting threats to all Germans—and no battle scenes, no marching troops. The singing of the British national anthem by the street mob is handled as incidental business, not gloriously.

Previewed at Warners Hollywood theatre where Muni's performance drew applause in midpicture and foyer comment after the showing was uniformly laudatory with respect to the artistic merit of the production.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

Drums Along the Mohawk

Frontier Drama of Revolutionary Days

In one of his sermons on showmanship, A-Mike Vogel of the Managers' Round Table termed "Boom Boom" ballyhoo old fashioned but still not out of date. Now comes Mr. Zanuck's picturization of the vastly popular and readable Walter D. Edmonds' "Drums along the Mohawk" to hand Mr. Showman on a glittering celluloid platter his cue-invitation to strike up the band. The title, the material and background of the rip-roaring drama of Revolution and frontier days and the performing personnel warrant full range cannonading, with a whole arsenal of production values for ammunition.

Claudette Colbert and Henry Fonda play the heroic couple, but their glamour should not overshadow the assistance of Edna May Oliver as the flinty tongued but soft-hearted widow; Arthur Shields as "Reverend Rosenkrantz," who combines his prayers with local trade news; Roger Imhof as the doughty "General Nicholas Herkimer," who loses his leg and life in a campaign waged against the "redcoats," and Ward Bond as "Adam Helmer," gargantuan frontiersman. The directorial hand of John Ford, long trained in handling vastly scaled screen canvases, has knowingly balanced the backwoods romance with the violent moments of death and destruction. Lamar Trotti and Sonya Levien supplied a script which retained much of the spirit and flavor of the novel.

Because of the realistic staging of the raid scenes, especially one sequence wherein a captured scout is in danger of being burned alive, the work is not especially suited for the very young. So, too, with the business of birth travail.

"Lana" and "Gilbert Martin" become man and wife and set out for the rugged and perilous district of the lovely Mohawk Valley in upper New York State. "Lana" loses her home and first baby as a result of an Indian raid. "Gilbert" joins up with a backwoods army to oppose the English and their allies, the Indians. The ill-trained and ill-equipped force is defeated. The townsfolk are saved from a general massacre through the fleet feet of "Gilbert" who eludes Indian pursuers to summon a contingent of the Continental Army. (Adam was the runner in the book.)

Seen at an afternoon performance where a capacity Roxy theatre audience gave the production its full and undivided span of attention and interest.—JOSEPH F. COUGHLIN.

The Covered Trailer

(Republic)

Comedy

Third in Republic's "The Higgins Family" series, "The Covered Trailer" is a hilarious concoction of dialogue and situation which delighted a preview audience for its entire 60 minutes. It presents again James Gleason, Lucile Gleason, Russell Gleason, Harry Davenport, Mary Beth Hughes and Tommy Ryan in the roles of the family characters who are always in some difficulty.

The original story by Jack Townley and screen play by Townley and M. Coates Webster are a succession of situations out of which are drawn a maximum of laughs. The story has "Joe Higgins" and all but two members of his family planning a South American vacation, but being forced to go secretly to the mountains when expected funds fail. In his absence a thieving coworker falsifies ledgers and takes $100,000. Then comes action.

(Warner Brothers)

Turf Melodrama

This is the picture previously known and widely publicized as "Gantry the Great." It is still the story of a blind horse and the finale of it packs "a kick like a mule." This finale is arrived at after a somewhat meandering start, an abrupt tightening of interest in mid-picture, and with power enough to bring tears to eyes of seasoned reporters who witnessed a screening at the Hollywood studio on a hot morning. Since the ending is the happy one hoped for all along, these tears must mean something pretty definite as to the entertainment quality of the film.

Vincent Sherman's original screen play, inspired by the blind thoroughbred, Gantry, opens with the birth of the horse and follows the animal through training, success, blinding, sentence to destruction, rescue and ultimate triumph. It is as much the story of his boyish owner, who is likewise his trainer and jockey, an honest son of a dishonored father intent upon clearing the family name. Many of the early incidents are routine and without seeming point, but they build up to a climax of tremendous effect. Produced by Bryan Foy and directed by William McGann, it is a credit to both.

Main Street Lawyer

(Republic)

Small Town Prosecutor

Edward Ellis, the "Man to Remember" as a doctor, brings to the role of the small county prosecutor the same likeable and humane qualities he gave the character of the small town physician. It is a part eminently suited to him, and a good supporting cast and excellent direction of an interesting story all add up to a most entertaining film. Dudley Murphy directed.

Supporting Ellis are Anita Louise, adopted daughter of the lawyer and focal point of the lawyer's most important case; Robert Baldwin, a young lawyer; Harold Huber, the heavy; Beverly Roberts, who appears but briefly in a minor role; Clem Bevans, as the old weather beaten and whisky drinking friend of the prosecutor, and others. Three writers had to do with the story; Joseph Krumgold did the screen play from an adaptation by Devery Freeman of an original story by Harry Hamilton.

When "Marco," a gangster, is successful in obtaining a change of venue and his case is to be tried in Corinthia, "Link Boggs" for once is determined to get a conviction, but the gangster, who has proof that "Honey" is not "Link's" daughter (she's the daughter of a woman he had to send to prison for life), threatens to make the story public. "Link" makes no effort to convict the gangster and is deposed from office. "Honey" becomes involved in a murder charge and to clear her "Link" has to resort to an unusual court room scene. He clears "Honey" of the charge and catches "Marco" at the same time.

French Without Tears

(Paramount British)

Romantic Farce

Paramount has a spectacular way with its British product. Acquisition of the Pommer-Laughton pictures exploited British quota to the benefit of showmen both sides of the Atlantic. To say this latest British film from under the Paramount wing is in that direct succession is the barest truth. "French without Tears" is a polished, witty, irresistibly carefree picture which should earn the grateful plaudits of intelligent showmen wherever it comes to rest. Anthony Asquith, director in the main of "Pygmalion," has done a brilliant directorial job in adapting the stage play which is in its fourth year on the English stage. Mario Zampi, the young Italian producer, in his first big film does much good for himself also.

The setting is unusual, the house of a professor who applies a little French polish to English and American aspirants to the blessings of Saint Hugo. The comedy revolves around the romantic depredations wrought on the male alumni of this pocket campus, by a designingly alluring blonde American.

Script writers de Grunwald and Dalrymple gave the picture a most engaging wit.

Ray Milland and Ellen Drew are the names best known to American audiences and their performances indicate that it was well worth while bringing them to Britain. It is no criticism of them that the personal triumph is reserved for a name new to films, Roland Culver, as the cautious, ultra-dignified naval officer. Here is a grand screen type and a fine comedian.

Shown to a trade and paying audience at the Plaza, London, the film provoked an unceasing ripple of laughter. The hardest boiled trade commentators were agreed that it was one of the best British pictures yet.—AUBREY FLANAGAN.

Blondie Brings Up Baby

(Columbia)

Comedy

This is the best of the Blondie series of feature pictures based on Chic Young's comic strip, and the "best" in this sentence is inclusive of the successful first of the series. This time Blondie takes the baby to school, where he gets a black eye but learns to wear it proudly. This time he loses his dog and finds it under exciting circumstances. This time, too, the comedy note is departed from, briefly and with excellent result, for a climax which goes back to plain fundamentals of family appeal for a sound dramatic punch. Dialogue is better, the story is more rounded and many-sided, the picture in whole is sound as a bell.

The use of the camera and technological legerdemain for laugh effects, introduced in the first of the series and carried on less prominently later, here attains appropriate and dependable level. The producer, Robert Sparks, and director, Frank R. Strayer, seem to have arrived, in this, at a par for the course which should sustain them in their present activity for as many years as they care to hold onto it. The screen play by Gladys Lehman and Richard Flournoy, based on a story by the Flournoy, Karen DeWolf and Robert Chapin, is as full of laughs, gags and human nature as could be desired.

Remember?

(MGM)

Marital Comedy

Milton Bren's first production for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is lively with comedy lines contributed by Corey Ford and Norman Z. McLeod, their original story and screen play falling within the boundary of adult entertainment, by virtue of plot as well as dialogue.

With a cast headed by Robert Taylor, Greer Garson and Lew Ayres, the story is familiar in outline. Ayres, as "Sky Ames," loses his girl (Miss Garson) to his best friend (Taylor). (Miss Garson was last seen in "Goodbye, Mr. Chips.") When preoccupation with business affairs breaks up the marriage, "Sky" comes to the rescue with a drug which causes aphasia, and the two lovers are reunited in a second marriage ceremony. The film ends with the twice-wed bride's announcement, used for laugh purposes, "Darling, I'm going to have a baby."

The entertainment essence of the film hinges upon the comedy evolved from the basic situation, the brand of comedy partaking of the sophisticated in every respect. The photography, as handled by George Folsey, is marked by definition and clarity, aiding the well-paced direction.

Billie Burke and Reginald Owen ably characterize the girl's parents, and George Barbier, as a choleric drug tycoon, provides fine support.

The principals in the cast, including Mr. Taylor, sixth ranking star in the HERALD-FAME poll of favorites a year ago, betray a lack of complete ease with their character portrayals by underscoring "stage business" required.

Previewed at the Village theatre, Westwood, Cal., where the predominantly adult audience responded enthusiastically to the comedy lines and applauded the closing sequence which ends with a possibly censorable tag line.—WALTER SELDEN.

The Escape

(20th Century-Fox)

Career of a Criminal

The main theme of this melodramatic tintype of a criminal career would seem to be according to the wise and sympathetic closing words of the doctor, who narrates in flashback fashion the narrative threads of the story that there is some, if not much, good in the worst of everyone. In the light of such indulgence, the entertainment verdict on the results of such a film effort as this must be that there are some ingredients of value to be detected in the finished production. Prominent on the credit side are the slight touches of the script's sociological awareness of how good little boys grow up to become big, bad men, the humaneness of some of the characters and the beguiling performance of Henry Armetta in his natural characterization of an Italian parent.

The story begins with the burial of the gunman, "Louie Peronni." A reporter is bent on getting an exclusive scandal sheet story about his death. Through the family doctor, the real truth of "Louie's" end is told. He has been killed while saving his daughter, adopted by the town's district attorney without knowledge of her identity and subsequently kidnapped by a gang of her father's henchmen in order to throw a scare into the "D.A."

The picture shared minor billing with "Hollywood Cavalcade" at the New York Palace, but the crowded house seemed to have been attracted by "Cavalcade."—J. F. C.

One Hour to Live

(Universal)

Melodrama

An out and out melodrama involving high pressure gangsters and a police commissioner aligned against an inspector of police, who is an "honest cop," provides some exciting moments though the denouement is as expected. Fist fights, gun play and three murders contribute to action. The story tells of the inspector's determination to put the gangsters behind bars and especially to apprehend the "man higher up" which finally bears fruit.

Charles Bickford plays the inspector, Doris Nolan the girl in the case, Samuel S. Hinds the police commissioner, John Litel and Paul Guilfoyle are gangsters, Robert Emmett Keane is the gangsters' lawyer, and Jack Carr has the dual role of boxer and butler. Harold Schuster directed from an original screen play by Roy Chanslor.

An Englishman's Home

(Aldwych - United Artists)

Invasion Melodrama

Staged as a play long before the First Great War, this melodramatic piece earned fame for its daring concern with the subject of invasion. It is now brought up to date with bombers which drop troops by parachute, beam radio and speciously German uniforms and accents. While many audiences may prefer to escape from the war, there must be some who will find the topical note irresistible with its familiar jargon and situations. No less abroad than at home, the picture should have a ready-made public.

Apart from Edmund Gwenn, the cast includes Mary Maguire, Geoffrey Toone, Richard Ainley and a well spoken and nicely balanced foreigner, Paul Von Hernried.

Andy Clyde Comedy

The Andy Clyde two-reel comedies continue to provide old-fashioned guffaw laughter. This time Andy is the coach of a girls' basketball team. His life is threatened if the team wins. When the star player is injured, Helen Servis, the comedian of the short subject, goes in and with trick shots wins the game in the last few minutes of play. Later she delivers the gamblers into the hands of the police.—Running time, 16½ minutes.

A Dog Is Born

(Paramount)

Grantland Rice Sportlight

The subject, narrated by Ted Husing, traces the history of a litter of shepherd or police dogs. One dog goes to Hollywood to perform in pictures. The second becomes a little girl's guardian; a third performs his natural work, herding cows. The fourth and fifth dogs work for the State Police and the national Guard. The "Seeing Eye" organization trains the sixth for service in helping the blind. The seventh and last dog is a blue winner at dog shows and the highest type of the species. The production should please all.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Color Cartoon

A day's adventures of Mrs. Hen and her ten little chicks form the subject matter of this cartoon. The Mother Hen has a difficult time saving her children from speeding autos. The little runt of the family gets into all kinds of trouble. While searching for a worm "Runtie" strays, and the dreaded enemy, the hawk, attacks. The appearance of a skunk enlivens matters. Mrs. Hen is happy to get her family home, though she tries to keep away from the littlest member.—Running time, nine minutes.

Single Women Spend Less for Entertainment, U. S. Discloses

by FRANCIS L. BURT
in Washington

Single women spend a smaller proportion of their income on recreation than do single men, but families spend still less, it was disclosed Monday by the Administration's National Resources Planning Board in a report on consumer expenditures for 1935-36, issued from Washington.

But since the report makes no analysis of recreational expenditures to show the relative amounts spent on motion picture theatres, sports, entertainment, hobbies, etc., no determination is possible whether exhibitors would be better off with all bachelor audiences than with the present mixed type; in fact, the reverse might be true, for there are indications that the money-spending bachelor is probably more susceptible to other amusements and less concerned with motion pictures than his more settled married brother.

The total national recreation bill for 1935-36 was slightly over $1,600,000,000 out of a total income of $59,300,000,000 and was spent, according to the report, by 29,400,300 families of two or more persons and 10,058,000 single men and women.

As was to be expected, the survey showed that the percentage of income spent on recreation depended, up to a certain point, upon the economic position of the spender, but after a certain level was passed was decided more by desire and interests.

Thus, among the families, those with incomes of less than $900 a year spent 1.9 per cent on recreation, while those with incomes of $3,000 to $5,000 spent 3.1 per cent. But, curiously enough, families with incomes of $500 to $750 spent only 1.7 per cent on recreation, or less than those in the lowest income category, although presumably the dollar expenditure was about the same, while those with incomes of $750 to $1,000 returned to the 1.9 per cent level.

With increase in income there was an increase in recreational expenditures up to the $3,000-$5,000 level, after which they dropped off, families with incomes of $20,000 or over reportedly spending but 2.2 per cent.

The average for all families was 2.5 per cent of income, while the average for all single individuals was 3.7. These figures, however, are of interest merely from a statistical point of view, a more definite picture being given, first, by the percentage of total expenditures which goes to recreation and, second, by actual dollar averages.

On the basis of actual expenditures—that is, income less savings of various types—recreation gets 2.9 per cent of the average family's dollar, but 4.5 per cent of the single man's dollar and 1.9 per cent of the single woman's dollar.

In actual money, the board reported, the average American consumer, married or single, spends $9 per year on recreation on an income under $780, $28 with an income of $780 to $1,450, and from $49 to $781, or an average of $89, on an income above $1,450. The average recreational expenditure of a single man will run from $3 to $621 and averages $54, while a single woman will spend from $2 to $179, with an average of $21.

Of the $1,600,000,000 spent for recreation in 1935-36, families accounted for $1,216,000,000 and single individuals for $427,000,000, it was shown.

Industry Backs Federation Chest, Red Cross Drives

Chairman David Bernstein and Major Albert Warner of the Federation Drive presided at a meeting of representatives of the amusement industry at the Hotel Astor on November 2nd. George Z. Medalie, chairman of the appeal, said, "The film and theatrical group is well on its way to becoming the outstanding division among the 140 trade and professional groups doing the volunteer fund-raising. Under the five-year leadership of Mr. Bernstein and Major Warner, the film business has increased its annual contribution five-fold to the Federation which supports 116 institutions."

Barney Balaban, president of Paramount; Jack Cohn, vice-president of Columbia and License Commissioner Paul Moss were named vice-chairmen of the amusement division. The following committee chairmen were appointed: Columbia Pictures, Abe Schneider and Max Seligman; Loew's-MGM, Oscar Dobb; National Screen Service, Herman Robbins; Paramount, Arthur Israels; Universal, Joseph Seidelman; Warner Bros., Max Blackman and Joseph Hazen; Publications, Sam Shain and Jack Alicoate.

Artists, Eddie Duchin, Marvin Schenck and Jesse Block; artists representatives, William Morris, Herbert Rosenthal and Sidney Piermonte; theatrical attorneys, William Klein, Louis Nizer and Julian T. Abeles; broadcasting, Bertram Le Bharr; independent theatre owners, William Brandt, Leo Brecher, Louis Frisch, Joseph Springer, Walter Reade, Jr., Samuel Rinzler, Max Rudnick, Edward N. Rugoff, Samuel Straussberg and Sam Goodman; laboratories, Jack Goetz, Alan E. Freedman, Ralph I. Poucher and Frank Meyers.

Legitimate theatres, Marcus Heiman and William Klein; music publishers and composers, Louis Bernstein and Jack Robbins; accessories, B. S. Moss, Frank Myer, Emil Friedlander, Fred Lakeman, Jerome Loeb, Eugene Picker and Charles Sonin.

Van Schmus Heads Drive

W. G. Van Schmus, managing director of the Radio City Music Hall, has accepted the chairmanship of the Motion Picture Group in the Roll Call of the New York Chapter of the American Red Cross November 11-30. The appeal begins on Armistice Day.

Ann Sheridan, Warner star, has been appointed this year's "Red Cross Girl" and will appear in a trailer in connection with the Roll Call.

Harry Warner Chairman

Harry M. Warner is chairman of the motion picture division of the Los Angeles Community Chest Drive. The support of actor, writer and director guilds will be requested. The following committee has been appointed to assist Mr. Warner: James Cagney, vice-president of the Screen Actors' Guild; Charles Brackett, president of the Screen Writers Guild and J. P. McGowan, vice-president of the Screen Directors Guild.

Detroit Variety Club Drive

The Detroit Variety Club collected more than $35,000 on their Milk Fund tag day. Also more than 100 tons of clothing was obtained. The collection was for the benefit of underprivileged school children. The milk will be distributed through the school. E. E. Kirschner, Harris Amusement Company and past chief barker was chairman of the drive which was made in cooperation with the Volunteers of America, the schools and other civic organizations. More than 15,000 containers were used for the collection. This was the Club's first milk tag day but it is planned now as an annual event.

Roosevelt Supports Benefit

President Roosevelt has given his support to the United Palestine Appeal, sponsor of the forthcoming "Night of Stars" at Madison Square Garden. The President sent a message to Nathan Straus, chairman of the benefit.

Heads Chicago Bookers

H. D. James of United Artists has been elected president of the Chicago Bookers Club. Other officers elected are: Charley Davidson, of Balaban & Katz, vice-president; Joe Abramson and Joe Stout, secretaries; Frank Nardi, Republic, treasurer, and Oscar Bernstein, United Artists, sergeant-at-arms.

New York Critics Decide Against Joining U. S. Group

The 18 members of the New York Film Critics have decided not to become affiliated with the new national organization because they wish to continue their independent motion picture awards. At a meeting which reached this decision, Kate Cameron, of the News, was elected chairman to succeed Howard Barnes, Herald Tribune. Leo Mishkin, the Morning Telegraph, was re-elected secretary.

The New York Critics already are considering films for the 1939 award, but a final verdict will wait until late December because of coming releases, for example, "Gone With the Wind."

Now the National Film Critics will not have to appoint a regional governor from among the New York City critics.

There was no doubt about it. Someone was in Room 3601. There were noises such as might be made by a body being dragged across the floor. There were heavy thuds now and again and occasionally a weird sound like a ghastly moan. Yet nobody came to answer the door buzzer.

So back downstairs to the lobby of New York's Essex House went Allen Smith, reporter for the New York World-Telegram, and another phone call to Room 3601. It brought an immediate response.

"Yes," said the deep, hollow voice, "I have been here all the time. Alone. Come up."

This time the door of Room 3601 was ajar. No one was in view, so Smith walked into the living room. Suddenly from the bedroom came a scream that was as suddenly cut off and followed by a burst of hellish laughter.

HOLLYWOOD needs a man like Columbia University's history-teaching Kenneth Hechler. He's a showman, a showman who brings real showmanship into his classroom as an aid to higher education.

The other morning he was giving a history lecture on the Presidential campaign of 1840, when the Whigs backed William H. Harrison. The campaign slogans, the instructor told the class, were "log cabins and cider" and "Tippecanoe and Tyler too."

At this point in the lecture the classroom door flew open. A frontiersman leaped in. "Tippecanoe and Tyler too!" the fellow yelled, and planted two jugs of cider on the desk. Mr. Hechler shook hands with the backwoodsman, who turned out to be an undergraduate in black whiskers, red flannel shirt and crude pantaloons held up by braces. They talked about the 1840 campaign as if it were a current issue.

The backwoodsman went out, snapping his suspenders. Mr. Hechler took a stack of paper cups from the desk and filled them with cider from the jugs. He apologized because the cider was sweet—not hard—but said he thought the boys would catch on, all right. When the cider was gone, he resumed his lecture.

NEW BRITISH FILMS COMMISSION SEEN SOLUTION OF FROZEN U.S. CASH

Fate of British Trade Involved in General Question of New Relations; Provision for U. S. Spending in England Urged

by AUBREY FLANAGAN

in London

With the increasing realization that the problem of the British film industry and wartime legislation has now left the realms of purely British trade, and entered those of international finance and foreign politics, discussion thereon in the industry has to some extent quieted down. It is a superficial quietness, for conferences and conversations between the Board of Trade and the industry, and not least significantly between Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy, have taken place almost daily.

It is now accepted in all industry circles, that the fate of the British production industry is probably bound up with America's neutrality laws, and, to phrase it discreetly, with the future commercial and financial relationship of the two countries. (The U. S. embargo was removed Saturday when President Roosevelt signed the special session's bill.)

It is more than probable that Government action has been withheld pending clearcut knowledge of these issues.

Exhibitors Plead Case

Exhibitors, not least cordially received of delegations at the Board of Trade, have told Oliver Stanley, president of the Board of Trade, what they want, both as regards protection for their business and as regards film supplies and a general legislative background. Producers, of whose gratuitous propaganda and impulsive pronunciamentos the Government has been critical, have soft pedalled their public utterances, preferring more subtle lines of approach through Parliamentary channels, and by the presentation of alternative schemes for the industry. The Americans know roughly what is to be their lot, and, asked by Mr. Stanley to make suggestions on what they would do with the frozen credits, have gone into conferential huddles in London and New York. It would seem clear that the remittance policy of the Treasury is already determined, and that American producers-distributors will be compelled to retain at least 50 per cent of their moneys in this country. The problem to be solved is how to adjust the situation to prevent the effects of this step from being disastrous to the industry.

Films Commission Seen

One strong likelihood, result of the present situation, is the setting up of a Films Commission in Britain. Such a Commission pressed for forcibly and confidently by the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association, would be a predominantly if not entirely industry Commission, and would supersede the Films Council, going out of active existence through any suspension of the Quota Act.

An emphatic plank in the exhibitor platform is the demand made to the Government that money retained in this country in the form of foreign distributors' frozen remittances shall be spent within the industry, a demand coupled with the emphatic proviso that it be not spent in purchasing theatre mortgages and properties thus limiting British exhibitor operations.

KENNEDY NEGOTIATING 50 PER CENT DEAL

An accord by which American distributors would be permitted to withdraw from England up to 50 per cent of their annual net revenue or approximately $17,500,000, was reported this week to be the subject of negotiation by Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy and the British Government.

The proposal contemplates the withdrawal of 60 per cent of the amount permitted during the first six months and 40 per cent during the second six months. Money impounded in England, the remaining 50 per cent of the net revenue, could be used for production purposes there with liberalized quota credits suggested. If the impounded currency of the American companies, or part of it, was invested in British Government securities, interest on such securities could be remitted to America.

Further amplification or revision of the proposals is believed likely before it is approved.

The abolition of the six month "period" and its extension into a 12 month period, is one point that finds them in agreement with producers.

American interests here would naturally resent dictation on what they should do with their own money. Though no decision has yet been taken on how such money might be spent, wiseacres this side see more than one possibility, such as, for example, a loan of frozen money to an American corporation setting up factories in Britain for the production of war munitions.

U. S. Companies Would Continue

It is an emphatic fact that the Americans are willing to continue making big scale pictures in Britain. A great assistance to them, in fact imperative, would be elimination of those footage clauses in the Films Act which compelled them to make often uneconomic motion pictures at £15,000 a time.

A plan has been put forward to Mr. Stanley, by British interests, under which credits over and above the unfrozen percentage would be free for export to America in direct proportion to the expenditure on British production.

In presenting to Mr. Stanley a statement of their needs for the free operation of their market, British exhibitors analyzed statistically the last twelve months Quota period from September 1938 to September 1939, and claimed that on the figures registered there was every reason to suppose that they would be 117 foreign films and 83 British short. If imports of second features from the U.S. were cut down by 25 per cent, through remittance restrictions, there would be urgent need for 120 good British films of at least second feature quality.

The drops in registration, they claim (and they maintained that the last Quota Year showed a drop of 100 foreign and 93 British films) were due to a deliberate holding up of registration and trade showing of films by American distributors, owing to fears of a shortage created by the Government's new policy.

With fewer than 600 features available to British exhibitors it is impossible for them to function profitably, they claim.

Statistical analysis of the year's registrations, undertaken by the exhibitor group, indicated that for the first six months of the current renters' year 192 foreign features were registered with a total footage of 1,307,997 feet. British long films registered over the same period totalled 36, including four double and four treble quota films with an actual footage of 260,455 feet and a paper increase through double and treble quota amounting to 361,447 feet.

All Theatres Open Until 11 P. M.

All theatres in Great Britain are included in a new governmental order permitting them to remain open until 11 o'clock each night.

The stagger system of openings remains in London's West End.

The Army Films Council, charged with supplying screen entertainment for British troops at home and overseas, was formally organized Friday at a joint meeting of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association and the Kinematograph Renters Society (distributors).

A profit for the year of £3,490 (about $14,000) as compared with last year's profit of £15,498, is recorded by British Lion Film Corp. on 12 months' operations.

The British Ministry of Information disclosed that "The Lion Has Wings," made by Alexander Korda, will be booked at a maximum of 25 per cent rental.

Ben Goetz Resigns MGM Position

Ben Goetz, for several years managing director of MGM in England, has resigned. Due to the postponement of British production caused by the war, Mr. Goetz was offered an executive position with the studio in California. But he has just undergone a serious operation in New York and the physicians order a complete rest before resuming activity so he has left for Tucson.

While Mr. Goetz was the company's managing director in England a number of successful pictures were made, including "A Yank at Oxford," "The Citadel" and "Goodbye, Mr. Chips." Preparations for the production of "Busman's Holiday" also were completed but the war stopped work.

Mr. Goetz was associated with Erbograph Laboratory which was joined in the Consolidated Film Industries, Inc. He became executive vice-president of Consolidated and then managing director of MGM British Studios, Ltd., London.

The International Picture Distributing Co., Inc., of Philadelphia has opened a branch in Washington, D. C. The company is distributors for "The Warning" and all other Budd Rogers Film Alliance product. They also handle the Mayer-Burstyn product for the Philadelphia and Washington territories.

Mycroft Active

Elstree, until recently an active center of British production, is now closed, its staff dismissed. Production has been transferred, under the aegis of Walter Mycroft, to the smaller ABPC studio at Welwyn, where "The Middle Watch" is being remade under the directorial eye of Thomas Bentley.

Jack Buchanan has the leading role in this nautical nonsense; his supporting cast includes Greta Gynt, Kay Walsh, Reginald Purdell, Fred Emney and Martita Hunt. Also backing up Jack Buchanan in the cast is Leslie Fuller, British comedian who has returned to the screen after an absence of two to three years. Fuller first earned public notice in the last war. The new war has brought him back to the comedy limelight.

Walter Mycroft, producer for John Maxwell on the ABPC lot, declares that his intention is to carry on a consistent and constant program of production. He plans to follow up "The Middle Watch" by a remake of "My Wife's Family," in which Gene Gerrard starred in 1931. This time Jack Buchanan will play the lead, with Sir Seymour Hicks and Fred Emney supporting him. The family background will be brought up to date with evacuees and air raid wardens.

Mycroft further hopes to star Rex Harrison, who gave a highly amusing performance in "Ten Days in Paris," in a new Bulldog Drummond feature, "Bulldog Drummond's Secret." Drummond will start his adventures in a submarine, continuing them for screen purposes on a secret mission to Germany.

Also on the list are "Freedom of the Seas," a story of England's battle against the U-boats, Edgar Wallace's "The Yellow Mask" and "Alias the Bulldog," and two comedies, "Coffee for Two" and "Spring Meeting."

Mycroft insists he will continue, Board of Trade or no Board of Trade.

A London Hit

"French without Tears," Paramount's latest British production (see Showman's Review), has lost no time in making a London hit, despite the difficulties of the blackout and the preoccupation of the citizenry in wartime. The picture attracted 25,000 customers to the Plaza in London's West End in the first five days, netting approximately $10,000.

The film, it is reported, already has been widely booked for general release. French sales organizations of Paramount are said also to be enthusiastic about the film, prophesying a furore in the appropriate French theatres.

UNCERTAIN POLICIES SLOW UP PRODUCTION

Seldom has British production recorded such a low figure on the trade barometer as at present. Uncertainty as to the Government's policy for the industry is the main reason, with the consequent inability to obtain finance and release. The situation is further aggravated by the difficulties in obtaining material supplies. Government restrictions on the supplying of timbers and metals and other materials used for production are holding up pictures from the studio floors.

Currently only four films are in production, although a fifth is scheduled to go before the camera in the next few days. Of the sixteen British studios in operation at the outbreak of war, fourteen are now closed, with probably 85 per cent of the persons normally employed in the industry now out of work. British production owns 26 studios; 20 of these have been earmarked by the Government as storage units and offices, and 15 already have been taken over as food depots.

Young Director

At the small Highbury Studio in North London, controlled by Grand National, David Macdonald, star of Britain's younger directors, is at work on a British Consolidated production, "Husband in Law."

Barry K. Barnes has the title role, while his wife in real life, Diana Churchill, plays his screen better half. Alastair Sim, another of the "This Man" team, has a characteristic comedy role as the senior partner of a firm of solicitors, of which Barry K. Barnes is the other half.

The story was written by Roger MacDougall, this time without the collaboration of his partner, MacKinnon. MacKinnon recently joined the London Scottish, leaving MacDougall to carry on his literary duties.

British National of course will distribute.

Losing no time in getting top-line radio comedian Arthur Askey to work, producers Maurice Ostrer and Edward Black have placed him in "Charley's Aunt—1940," an up-to-date version of the perennial stage farce.

Askey has the support of his henchman, Richard Murdoch, and also that of Moore Marriott and Graham Moffatt. Walter Forde, onetime British comedian turned director, is in charge. The cast further includes Felix Aylmer, J. H. Roberts, Wally Patch, Donald Calthrop and Mike Johnson.

The first shooting took place on a set representing the exterior of an ancient but mythical Oxford college—Bowgate College, with ivy clustering around the Gothic windows and statues of famous historians nestling in niches along the wall.

The first shot was of Askey, Murdoch and Moffatt endeavoring to retrieve a mortar board (symbolic head gear worn by University graduates) from the head of one of the statues.

Another Formby

Work should have started, by the time this reaches print, on a new George Formby comedy, "Let George Do It," to be produced at the Ealing Studios by Michael Balcom and directed this time by Marcel Varnel. Anthony Kimmins, director of the latest and most successful Formby comedies, has rejoined His Majesty's Forces. Kimmins was previously with the Fleet Air Arm and has gone back to his old unit. Jack Kitchin, likewise producer for the more recent Formby films, is now in the Army.

Angus MacPhail wrote the story and casts the Lancashire comic as a lad who wins the U-Boat war single handed, but not without getting involved in espionage complications on neutral territory.

When the film is finished there should be just time for George and his wife, Beryl, to make for Leeds, where they are due to play in "Dick Whittington," a Christmas pantomime.

Documentaries Active

Whatever be the complaints of British feature producers, currently lamenting the potential demise of the Films Act, British documentary producers have nothing to grumble at. They have been consistently and intensely active since the war began.

At least five leading units, each independent of the other, are making films of a documentary nature, some for Government and other departments, others under official and semi-official auspices. All the units have placed themselves at the disposal of the Government and five of the films in production have been commissioned by the Ministry of Information as national propaganda to be screened not only in Britain but in neutral countries as well.

The groups engaged at present in documentary production include Film Centre, Ltd., G. B. Instructional, Strand Film Company, Realist Film Unit and the G.P.O. Film Unit.

IN COURTS

Reveal Secret Indictments; Fraud Involves Rogers Fund

Secret indictments against 72 individuals and two corporations were revealed this week against federal authorities as deputy marshals and postal inspectors in 16 states began rounding up the defendants in an alleged $20,000,000 lottery fraud. Each of the defendants, including three women, was charged in 119 counts with using the mails for lotteries, fraudulent use of the mails, interstate transportation of lottery matter and conspiracy. The two corporations are the Will Rogers Memorial Hospital, Inc., and the South Park Credit Company, Inc., both of Chicago.

In connection with the Will Rogers Memorial Hospital Charity Fund, the organization, it is charged, operated illegally behind the legitimate Will Rogers Commission, headed by Owen D. Young, financier.

Sherwood Asks Court Order

Robert E. Sherwood and the Playwrights Producing Company were to apply for a court order Thursday directing Franklyn Underwood, story editor of Twentieth Century-Fox, to testify before trial in connection with Mr. Sherwood's suit against the company. He charges that the picture "Young Mr. Lincoln" is unfair competition to the play, "Abe Lincoln in Illinois."

Settle Abelson Suit

The suit of L. Abelson and Sons against Bobby Breen Productions, Inc., for $22,798 damages has been settled and discontinued for an undisclosed amount in the New York supreme court.

Seek Suit Dismissal

Walt Disney Enterprises, Inc., RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., Irving Berlin, Inc., and Frank Churchill this week filed application to dismiss the suit of Modest Altsculer for $250,000 damages. The dismissal is sought because of the plaintiff's failure to prosecute and the application will be argued Friday. The suit charges plagiarism.

Schines Win in Verdict

The Schine Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., this week gained a complete victory in litigation that has extended over more than three years against the Massachusetts Bonding and Insurance Company when Ellsworth C. Lawrence, New York supreme court justice, in Gloversville, rendered a $1,200 verdict in favor of the Schines. The suit grew out of the death in 1933 of William Brady, who was burned in a fire in the projection booth of the Empire theatre, Glen Falls, N. Y.

Shift Brice Action

The damage suit of Fannie Brice against Twentieth Century-Fox and Chicago theatres which have played "Rose of Washington Square" will be tried in a state court (Illinois) instead of a federal court, according to a decision handed down by a federal judge in Chicago this week. The defense had sought trial in federal court.

Majestic Corporation Trustee

Federal Judge John P. Barnes in Chicago on November 6th appointed Claude A. Ross trustee of the Majestic Radio & Television Corporation under the Chandler Act. November 20th was set for the trustee's report, December 4th for filing a reorganization plan and December 27th for a hearing.

MGM Copyright Case Before Supreme Court

The "Letty Lynton" copyright case has been appealed to the Supreme Court again by MGM on a petition for review of a decision of the Second Circuit Court of Appeals. The principals in the case are MGM, MGM Distributing Corporation, Loew's, Inc., and Culver Export Corporation and Edward Sheldon and Margaret Ayer Barnes.

The petition contends that the court erred in reversing the decision of the district court and erred in disregarding the findings of that court without reversing them. Also a court error is claimed in its refusal to limit the copyright prohibition, as the company claims is provided by the law, by holding that the component parts of a play were copyrightable although not new, and in excluding material from the public domain. MGM specifically charges that the decision of the court of appeals had nullified Sections 3, 6 and 7 of the copyright act and also that the decision was opposed to the decision of other circuit courts and of the highest courts of Great Britain.

The circuit court of appeals had decided last July 28 that one-fifth of the net of "Letty Lynton" should go to the plaintiffs in the plagiarism suit. This it is claimed was the first time the principle of apportionment of profits had been introduced in copyright actions. It is quite common in patent suits.

John W. Davis and Samuel D. Cohen, counsel for MGM, hold in the brief that the decision of the appeals court was in conflict with established practice and held that "by limiting the defendants' proofs it established a new test of copyright protection and infringement unauthorized by statute and contrary to the practice which has long prevailed in other circuits."

Second Nick Trial Halted

The second trial of John P. Nick, deposed head of the local operators union began in the St. Louis circuit court Monday and Tuesday was halted when Judge Aronsen and Franklin Miller, circuit attorney, went into a conference believed to be concerned with the qualifications of a juror. The first trial ended in a mistrial because a juror spoke to a witness. Nick is charged with extortion.

Fourteen intervenors in the receivership suit which removed Nick from union control, notified Circuit Judge Ernest F. Oakley that they intend to apply to the State Supreme Court for a writ of prohibition to prevent the judge from authorizing expenditure of union funds for picketing the Fanchon & Marco houses.

Court Denies Review

The United States supreme court on Monday refused to review the decision in the case brought by Richard Barry, author, against Howard Hughes, charging infringement of copyright in "Hell's Angels." In a petition, counsel for Mr. Barry claimed that the story of "Hell's Angels" had numerous parallels to stories written by him in 1911 and subsequent years and that the court below had erred in rendering an advance decision in drawing the line between the elements of infringement.

Henkel Sues Film Editors

Charles V. Henkel, film editor who was suspended by the Society of Motion Picture Film Editors on the charge that he worked for an independent producer for less than the scale, filed November 6th in Hollywood a $126,000 damage suit against the organization, the president, Edmund Hanna; another officer, Walter W. Sharpe, and 20 John Does. Mr. Henkel claims that he was unjustly suspended.

A bill of particulars was filed in federal court in New York this week by Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., in the suit brought against it for $100,000 damages and an injunction against the exhibition of the film "Penrod and His Twin Brother" by Booth Tarkington, author.

OBITUARIES

Funeral Services Held For E. Paul Phillips

Funeral services for E. Paul Phillips, Paramount home office theatre executive, who was fatally injured in an automobile accident November 1st at Waseca, Minn., were held Monday at Cooke's Funeral Home, Stapleton, S. I. Interment was in Moravian Cemetery.

A large delegation of Paramount officials and employees attended the services, including Barney Balaban, Stanton Griffis, Austin Keough, J. J. Unger, Neil Agnew, Charles Reagan, Louis Phillips, Paul Raibourn, Fred Mohrhardt, Mr. and Mrs. Leon Netter, Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Gowthorpe, Arthur Israel, George Weltner, Oscar Morgan, Robert Weitman, Harry Kalcheim and Charles Bruder.

The automobile accident also resulted in the death of Otto H. Mueller, Jr., 45, who was in charge of maintenance for the Minnesota Amusement Company, and injuries to L. J. Ludwig, of the Minesota Amusement Company, and Charles C. Burton, associated with the Paramount construction department. The accident occurred when the car in which they were riding crashed with a truck.

Claude Gillingwater Dies; Stage and Screen Actor

Claude Gillingwater, 69, stage and screen actor, was found dead at his Beverly Hills home November 1st. The death was reported as a suicide. Mr. Gillingwater, who had appeared on the stage in a number of David Belasco plays, had been active in motion pictures since 1921 and included important roles in scores of silent and sound films.

Since February, 1936, when he fell from a five-foot platform at the Paramount Studio, where he was making a picture with Jack Oakie, the elderly actor had been in ill health.

John E. Saxe, of Milwaukee, Dead

John E. Saxe, 66, who with his late brother, Thomas, advanced from Milwaukee newsboys to figures of importance in the motion picture industry, died November 3rd at Miami, Fla. The brothers established the first nickelodeon in Milwaukee and expanded until they operated 40 theatres in Wisconsin, of which nine were in Milwaukee. The circuit was sold to Fox Theatres in 1927.

At the time of his death Mr. Saxe was no longer connected with Saxe Amusement, Inc., operating six Milwaukee theatres. He was president of Republic Investment Company and active in Milwaukee real estate.

Opie Read Dies

Opie Read, 86, author of "Arkansas Traveler," which Paramount recently made into a film with Bob Burns in the leading role, died in Chicago last Thursday.

John James

John James, 68, St. Louis theatre owner for the past 25 years, died October 27th in that city. With his nephew, Tommy James, he owned the Douglas and the Strand.

Simon Fox

Simon Fox, of the Sam Fox Publishing Company, died in Cleveland October 30th. Mr. Fox, father of Sam and Harry Fox, had been with the company for more than 25 years.

. . . and you can't show color features in natural hues with unbalanced light

Broadway Melody of 1940

(MGM)

Musical

Teaming Fred Astaire, Eleanor Powell and George Murphy as a dance triumvirate, this latest version of the "Broadway Melody" series rounds out its cast with Frank Morgan, Florence Rice, Ian Hunter, Lynne Carver and others.

The story is built around the dancing trio, and presents Astaire and Murphy as a dance team from which Murphy is chosen to star in a show with Miss Powell. However, it proves to be Astaire's coaching which is responsible for his partner's success, and the nimble-footed star comes into his own in a finale involving a dance to Cole Porter's "Begin the Beguine," already the recipient of much attention to the dance-minded.

Mr. Porter, whose sophisticated music and lyrics have been characterized as resembling a truck driver between silk sheets, also has provided several other songs for the film.

Produced by Jack Cummings, who also had charge of "Honolulu" and "Broadway Melody of 1938," the picture was directed by Norman Taurog, whose offerings include "Lucky Night," "Boys Town" and "Mad about Music."

Release date: To be determined.

Women without Names

(Paramount)

Melodrama

Ellen Drew, who was notably present in "If I Were King," and Robert Paige, of Paramount's "Golden Circle," head the cast in a story involving a murder and a false conviction.

Robert Florey directed the picture. He is remembered for "Death of a Champion," "The Magnificent Fraud," "Hotel Imperial," and many another. Based on a play by Ernest Booth, the screen play was written by William R. Lipman and Horace McCoy, who also have collaborated on "Undercover Doctor" and "Persons in Hiding."

In the cast, in addition to Miss Drew and Mr. Paige, are Judith Barrett, John McGuire, Thomas E. Jackson, Louise Beavers, John Miljan and Wilfred Roberts.

Release date: To be determined.

The Invisible Man Returns

(Universal)

Thriller

Featuring Sir Cedric Hardwicke as a miner who murders one of his brothers and lets another hang for the crime in an attempt to gain control of mining properties, "The Invisible Man Returns" includes in its cast such names as Vincent Price, Nan Grey, John Sutton, Cecil Kellaway and Alan Napier.

Hardwicke, who was knighted in 1934 and is now in the 29th year of his acting career, last appeared on the New York stage in "Shadow and Substance"; among his many films were "Stanley and Livingstone" and "On Borrowed Time."

Vincent Price, after playing opposite Helen Hayes in "Victoria Regina" for two years, has had assignments in "Elizabeth and Essex," "Tower of London" and "Green Hell," before playing the title role in this film. John Sutton has also been cast in "Elizabeth and Essex" and "Tower of London," while Cecil Kellaway has appeared in "The Sun Never Sets" and "The Under-Pup," and Alan Napier in "We Are Not Alone."

The associate producer was Ken Goldsmith, whose credits include "Big Town Czar," "Unexpected Father" and "Call a Messenger."

The director was Joe May, who also co-authored the original story, with Kurt Siodmak. Lester Cole, Cedric Belfrage and Siodmak wrote the screenplay.

Release date: Nov. 24, 1939.

The Earl of Chicago

(MGM)

Gangster Nobleman

The first American film brought to the screen by Victor Saville, who produced "Goodbye, Mr. Chips" and "The Citadel" in England, is "The Earl of Chicago" which tells the story of a former Chicago gangster who inherits Canadian estates and an English title.

His lawyer, revengeful after having been sent to prison, leads him into acting the part of a fool in the House of Lords, and is shot by the recent addition to the aristocracy, who in turn is hanged after a trial by his peers.

Heading the cast is Robert Montgomery as the gangster-nobleman, while Edward Arnold is the attorney. Others include Edmund Gwenn, seen in "The Bishop Misbehaves" and "Yank at Oxford"; Reginald Owen; Ronald Sinclair, who appeared in "A Christmas Carol" and "Thoroughbreds Don't Cry," and Gladys Blake, whose appearance is limited to her legs. She is cast as "Silken Legs."

An original by Brock Williams, who was co-author of "Clouds over Europe," the film was directed by Richard Thorpe, who has handled "Tarzan Finds a Son," "Three Loves Has Nancy" and "The Crowd Roars."

Release date: To be determined.

Westbound Stage

(Monogram)

Western

The latest in producer Edward Finney's series of Tex Ritter westerns, "Westbound Stage" brings to the screen a story of Tex's revenge upon a terroristic gang which has caused the death of his brother, an Army captain. Featuring two songs, "Trail to Mexico" and "It's All Over Now," the film is directed by Spencer Bennett, whose experience has included "Across the Plains" and other westerns and serials.

Feminine interest is provided by Muriel Evans. Kenneth Duncan plays the part of the brother and Reed Howes that of the gang leader.

Robert Emmett, who wrote the original story and screen play of "Where the Buffalo Roam" and "Mexicali Kid," among many, contributed the screen play from a story by John Foster.

Release date: To be determined.

Married and in Love

(RKO Radio)

Marital Drama

With only five persons in the cast, one of whom plays the minor role of a colored maid, "Married and In Love" tells the effort of a married woman to break up another marriage, an attempt which does not result in success.

The screen play is by S. K. Lauren, who has collaborated on "Mother Carey's Chickens," "Damsel in Distress" and "There Goes the Groom"; the story being based on Mr. Lauren's unproduced play of the same name.

Produced by Robert Sisk, whose recent pictures include "Reno," "Full Confession," "The Day the Bookies Wept" and "A Man to Remember"; the picture is directed by John Farrow and is the sixth on which he has handled the assignment for RKO.

While the time of the story is the present, much of the explanatory action is filmed in flashback to a period some 10 years earlier.

The four principal players are Alan Marshall, who also appears as "Captain Phoebus" in "The Hunchback of Notre Dame"; Barbara Read, here appearing in her first leading role; Patric Knowles, who was teamed with Miss Read in "The Spellbinder," and Helen Vinson, seen in "Live, Love and Learn," "In Name Only" and "Reunion."

Release date: To be determined.

South of the Border

(Republic)

Western

Gene Autry is here cast as a Government agent engaged in quelling a revolution sponsored by a belligerent nation which hopes to gain control of Mexican oil concessions.

Smiley Burnette is again with Mr. Autry. Also seen are Duncan Renaldo, Mary Lee and Lupita Tovar.

William Berke was associate producer, as he was on "Santa Fe Stampede" and "Overland Stage Raiders." The director was George Sherman, who acted in a similar capacity for "Colorado Sunset" and "The Return of Doctor X."

Release date: To be determined.

Not Too Narrow, Not Too Deep

(MGM)

Penal Colonists

A cast including Joan Crawford, Clark Gable, who ranks second in the HERALD FAME annual compilation of box office champions, Peter Lorre, Melvyn Douglas, J. Edward Bromberg, Eduardo Ciannelli and Albert Dekker, has been assembled for this tale of escape from a Guiana penal colony.

As directed by Frank Borzage, who has handled such diversified entertainment as "Disputed Passage," "Three Comrades" and "The Shining Hour," the film will portray the regeneration of Gable through the love of Miss Crawford and the influence of the character played by Melvyn Douglas.

Joseph Mankiewicz, who has produced "A Christmas Carol" and "Huckelberry Finn," had charge of "Not Too Narrow, Not Too Deep," and was also the producer of the last Gable-Craford co-starring effort, "Love on the Run," this new picture marking the sixth time that Miss Crawford and Mr. Gable have been co-starred. Gable's most recently completed role was that of Rhett Butler in "Gone with the Wind"; Miss Crawford was last seen in "The Women." Melvyn Douglas was last in "Ninotchka."

The film is based on a novel by Richard Sale.

Release date: To be determined.

Emergency Squad

(Paramount)

Melodrama

Building a story around the emergency rescue units which have been organized by the police and fire departments of various municipalities, the original idea by Robert Musel and Michael Raymond has been translated here into a screen play by Garnett Weston and Michael Raymond. Mr. Weston has co-authored three Bulldog Drummond features, in addition to writing other film stories.

Directed by Edward Dmytryk, who handled the assignment on "Television Spy," the picture will show Louise Campbell as a tyro newspaper reporter and William Henry as the rescue unit's new recruit.

Release date: Jan. 5, 1940.

All Women Have Secrets

(Paramount)

College Weddings

Herewith a depiction of the institution of marriage at college; being a portrayal of three couples who marry and begin raising families while still at school.

Directed by Kurt Neumann, who was responsible for "Island of Lost Men," "Unmarried" and "Ambush," the film is based on a story by Dale Eunson. The screen play is by Agnes Christine Johnston.

Among those seen will be Joseph Allen Jr., Virginia Dale and Peter Hayes, in addition to Jean Cagney, sister of the two-fisted Jimmy.

Tentative release date: Dec. 15, 1939.

Knights of the Range

(Paramount-Sherman)

Western

Russell Hayden and Jean Parker play the parts of a cattle rustler and the girl whose love reforms him, in this Harry Sherman vehicle directed by Lesley Selander, who has handled a similar assignment on "Silver on the Sage," "Renegade Trail," "Sunset Trail" and "The Frontiersman."

Mr. Hayden was seen in the two last-named films, as well as in "In Old Mexico" and "The Mysterious Rider"; while Miss Parker's latest appearance was in "Flying Deuces."

Based on a story by the late Zane Grey, the screen play was written by Norman Houston, who also has contributed "In Old Caliente" and "Heritage of the Desert."

Release date: Feb. 16, 1940.

Diamonds are Dangerous

(Paramount)

Melodrama

Starring George Brent, currently working in "The Fighting 69th," and Isa Miranda, whose latest American appearance was in "Hotel Imperial," the locale of this offering is the South African diamond mines.

The picture is based on a story by Frank O'Connor. The screen play was written by Leonard Lee and Franz Schulz. Lee collaborated on "Street of Missing Men" and Schulz on "Midnight."

The director was George Fitzmaurice, who has handled "Vacation from Love," "Arsene Lupin Returns" and "Live, Love and Learn."

Others in the cast include John Loder, returning to the American screen after an absence of seven years; Elizabeth Patterson, seen in "Sing You Sinners," "The Cat and the Canary" and "Remember the Night"; Nigel Bruce, who appeared as Dr. Watson in "Sherlock Holmes," and Matthew Boulton, who was seen in "Bridal Suite" and "Bulldog Drummond Takes a Bride."

Release date: To be determined.

Nick Carter, Master Detective

(MGM)

Mystery

The first of a projected series based upon the character whose exploits, to masculine juveniles, were required reading behind the barn for a generation, "Nick Carter" was directed by Jacques Tourneur, who handled "They All Come Out" in addition to having directed the "Crime Does Not Pay" series of short subjects.

Walter Pidgeon is "Nick," a Nick brought up to date and streamlined, here engaged in detecting the leak which reveals airplane plans to foreign countries. Feminine interest is supplied by Rita Johnson, who played a similar role in "6,000 Enemies." The cast also includes Henry Hull and Donald Meek.

The film was produced by Lucien Hubbard, who has turned out such mysteries as "Murder in the Private Car," "The Casino Murder Case" and "Public Hero No. 1."

Release date: To be determined.

Santa Fe Marshal

(Tentative)

(Paramount-Sherman)

Western

Producer Harry Sherman here puts William Boyd's Hopalong Cassidy into the midst of a medicine show's activities, activities in which the active element is stressed. The feminine interest is provided by Bernadene Hayes, playing the part of a girl from the East, with whom Hopalong almost finds romance.

Others in the cast include Russell Hayden, portraying his usual role of "Lucky," and Marjorie Rambeau, as the owner of a boarding house in which the show lodges.

Sam Eagle acted as associate producer, working from a screen play by Harrison Jacobs, who has supplied dialogue for "Heritage of the Desert" and "Renegade Trail," among others.

Tentative release date: Jan. 12, 1940.

Columbia

BLONDIE MEETS THE BOSS: Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake, Larry Simms—We had a Blondie art contest on this picture in conjunction with the schools, but did little above average business. We feel this series has had its best day. Business above average.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

GOLDEN BOY: Barbara Stanwyck, Adolphe Menjou, William Holden—Here's a good one. Extended run in all spots. Good story, good action, well done in every department. Step on her; she will click. Running time, 100 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

WOMAN IS THE JUDGE, A: Frieda Inescort, Rochelle Hudson, Otto Kruger—Very ordinary programmer. It is so simply told as to fail to arouse much for or against criticism. So-so pulling power. Played October 14.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

First National

ANGELS WASH THEIR FACES: "Dead End Kids," Ann Sheridan, Ronald Reagan, Bonita Granville, Frankie Thomas—Better than anything this company has given us this season. Tops in any production. This can be played your best days if your audience is not too critical. We played it Friday, Saturday with an excellent draw. Plenty of comedy to relieve the suspense. Running time, 86 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

ANGELS WASH THEIR FACES: "Dead End Kids," Ann Sheridan, Ronald Reagan, Bonita Granville, Frankie Thomas—Quite satisfactory, though small gross done on this in spite of holiday. We had some pleased patrons in it, however, and that helps. Played October 12-13.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

ANGELS WITH DIRTY FACES: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, Ann Sheridan, Humphrey Bogart—We played this rather old and still did pretty well with it. I don't like this type of picture but if it brings in the shekels more power to them. Running time, 90 minutes. Played October 14-15.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

COWBOY QUARTERBACK, THE: Bert Wheeler, Marie Wilson, Gloria Dickson—Pretty good football comedy. Our Saturday crowd laughed a lot. Running time, 60 minutes. Played October 27-28.—Gordon P. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

COWBOY QUARTERBACK, THE: Bert Wheeler, Marie Wilson, Gloria Dickson—Not really funny nor yet silly enough to be funny either. Gets by but surely is pretty wishy-washy. Wheeler needs better direction or something. He mugs too much in this. Why not hunt up Dot Lee and team her with Wheeler in a light comedy with music? Played October 6-7.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

DAUGHTERS COURAGEOUS: Lane Sisters, Gale Page, John Garfield, Claude Rains, Fay Bainter, Donald Crisp, Jeffrey Lynn, May Robson, Dick Foran, Frank McHugh—We expected "Four Daughters" business on this but were disappointed, although it did a better than average business. The picture and the stars were all very good, and there was just the right amount of comedy to balance the picture. Played October 1-3.—Gordon P. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

EACH DAWN I DIE: James Cagney, George Raft, Jane Bryan, George Bancroft—Excellent gangster fare, more because of good acting and direction than for the story. There's hardly anything new in the gangster-prison type of story to tell anyway. Played October 6-7.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook. N. H. General patronage.

ESPIONAGE AGENT: Joel McCrea, Brenda Marshall, Jeffrey Lynn, Frank McHugh—Fair picture; fair business. This picture is the first cousin to "Confessions of a Nazi Spy." Running time, 80 minutes. Played October 24.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MAN WHO DARED, THE: Charles Grapewin, Jane Bryan—This is a very good bargain night picture of the Americanism type. Was well liked but did not draw well due to the lack of names in the cast. Running time, 60 minutes. Played October 6-7.—Gordon P. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BLACKMAIL: Edward G. Robinson, Gene Lockhart, Ruth Hussey, Bobs Watson—Excellent. A picture that will have plenty of raves. Just as good as anything that Robinson ever made. Can be played the best days of the week on a short run. This boy Lockhart is really tops in the picture. Running time, 81 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

BLACKMAIL: Edward G. Robinson, Ruth Hussey, Bobs Watson, Gene Lockhart—Good "B" picture that gets by nicely. Strong half on the big bills. Running time, 81 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

GIRL DOWNSTAIRS, THE: Franchot Tone, Franciska Gaal, Walter Connolly—A good picture; not what we expected from Tone but would pass in midweek. Running time, 77 minutes. Played October 18-19.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

HONOLULU: Robert Young, Eleanor Powell, George Burns and Gracie Allen—We enjoyed very satisfactory Burns and Allen business on this picture. It was just what the doctor ordered. Everyone carried their parts, deserving laurels. It wasn't an Eleanor Powell steal but her dancing was certainly outstanding. As we have always maintained, Miss Powell cannot act. She has not the theatrical face. It lacks expression to register on audience. It's her feet that click. We have discussed this with other exhibitors and they all agree. Not being versatile for comedy or dramatic parts as Jean Arthur, Irene Dunne or Claudette Colbert. We hope our good friends reads this in San Francisco. It is our frank and honest opinion, Mr. Russell Kletzeng.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

KID FROM TEXAS, THE: Dennis O'Keefe, Florence Rice, Buddy Ebsen, Jessie Ralph—Not much of a story but went over quite well. Comedy is what they want. Buddy Ebsen, as usual, steals the show, with Jessie Ralph a close second. The horse, Lone Star, is tops. Not outstanding but will get by. Running time, 71 minutes. Played October 6-8.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

LADY OF THE TROPICS: Robert Taylor, Hedy Lamarr—Did a fair business on this with a larger than usual number of walkouts. The picture is just so-so. Played October 13.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

ON BORROWED TIME: Lionel Barrymore, Bobs Watson, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Una Merkel, Beulah Bondi—From start to finish you will find everything it takes to make one of the best motion pictures ever produced. If only Lionel Barrymore could turn his head in the direction of the critics and hear the praise they give him as the greatest of stars, he could rest assured his years on the screen have not been in vain. If it's the last thing you ever do, play this picture. Your patrons will give you no end of peace, praising Lionel Barrymore and the greatest of boy stars, Bobs Watson. Running time, 99 minutes. Played October 22-24.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

PYGMALION: Leslie Howard, Wendy Hiller—Very good and pleased all. It even drew a few extras, we believe. Comment was favorable and frequent on this one after our run. Played October 11.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

THUNDER AFLOAT: Wallace Beery, Chester Morris, Virginia Grey—Their best picture for two years and with this he-man Beery that never made a poor picture. Step on her, boys; she's a humdinger. Extended runs in all spots. Running time, 90 minutes. —W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

THUNDER AFLOAT: Wallace Beery, Chester Morris, Virginia Grey—Boy, when Metro makes a picture, they really make it. This action drama is certainly action with a bang. Tops of any service picture we have played. Good the best days in the week and for a long run, too. Do not waste this one. A swell picture with a good cast that is directed superbly. Running time, 95 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

WIZARD OF OZ: Judy Garland, Frank Morgan, Ray Bolger, Bert Lahr, Jack Haley, Billie Burke, Margaret Hamilton—Excellent. Best business in some months. Played October 22.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

Monogram

MR. WONG, DETECTIVE: Boris Karloff, Grant Withers—We played this on a single bill weekends. Did not put a western with it. Business below par. Picture fair. Not worth the price we paid.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Paramount

BULLDOG DRUMMOND'S BRIDE: John Howard, Heather Angel—This last in the series came as a welcome surprise. It was crazy enough to be funny in rather slapstick style. But we're glad they're dropping these out. Our box office receipts always fall 'way down when we have one. This one no exception. Played October 10.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

HERITAGE OF THE DESERT: Evelyn Venable, Donald Woods—Paramount makes good westerns and this was no exception. The trouble is they are always too short. Running time, 74 minutes. Played October 7-8.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

ISLAND OF LOST MEN: Anna May Wong, Anthony Quinn—This picture did not please many. It isn't such a bad story; have seen much worse. Running time, 64 minutes. Played October 25-26.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

MAGNIFICENT FRAUD, THE: Akim Tamiroff, Lloyd Nolan, Patricia Morison, Mary Boland—This picture pleased on double bill. Played October 20-21. —Gordon P. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

MAN ABOUT TOWN: Jack Benny, Dorothy Lamour, Edward Arnold, Binnie Barnes, Eddie "Rochester" Anderson—The best Benny picture we have ever played. Fair drawing card that pleased all who came. The Petty Models are good. Played September 17-19.—Gordon P. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

MAN ABOUT TOWN: Jack Benny, Eddie

IT ACTUALLY HAPPENED TO THIS EXHIBITOR!

TRUE STORIES FROM ALTEC FILES

Theatre Patrons Aware of Results of Sound Changes

NEW JERSEY—"I was skeptical about the Altec proposition to improve the sound in my circuit of theatres, as I thought our sound was excellent. However, the result is excellent-plus. The exhibitor who contemplates improving his sound is amply repaid for the expense." David Snaper, circuit owner.

BARBOURVILLE, KY.—"Your engineer, S. K. Brown, has just made the changes on my sound equipment, and I feel it my duty to write and thank your company and Mr. Brown for making it possible to improve our sound to this extent." Charles R. Mitchell, owner, Mitchell Theatre.

NEW YORK CITY—"Since you increased the power in our theatre in accordance with your Altec modification plan, the sound has been so markedly improved that even my patrons notice the difference." Otto Lederer, manager, Arcadia Theatre.

KANSAS CITY, KAN.—"I wish to take this means of thanking and complimenting you on the excellent results obtained in modifying our sound system. The result is so noticeable that even our patrons are commenting on the improved sound." C. C. Wooton, Manager, Jayhawk Theatre.

The Altec inspector in your neighborhood will gladly explain the Altec Modification Plan for the increase of power and naturalness in the sound of your theatre.

"Rochester" Anderson, Dorothy Lamour, Edward Arnold, Binnie Barnes—This comes very near being the all time low for our house. I went out several times during the show to see if some hoodlum had put a smallpox sign our door. However, I did not find any so come to the conclusion it must be Jack with his overworked radio gags. Running time, 85 minutes. Played October 21-22.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

OUR LEADING CITIZEN: Bob Burns, Susan Hayward—This picture did not draw as well as "I'm from Missouri" but did a nice business. Bob Burns was liked in a straight dramatic role but I believe he does the best business in a comedy role. Played October 8-10.—Gordon P. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

PLAINSMAN, THE (reissue): Gary Cooper, Jean Arthur—Excellent repeat attraction. Drew with our best Tuesday night shows. The print was poor on first reel but not noticeably bad elsewhere. Only goes to prove again that a good old picture is better than a bad new one. Played October 17.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

UNDERCOVER DOCTOR: Lloyd Nolan, J. Carrol Naish, Heather Angel—Good gangster picture from the files of J. Edgar Hoover. Played October 13-14.—Gordon P. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

Republic

FLIGHT AT MIDNIGHT: Col. Roscoe Turner, Phil Regan, Jean Parker, Robert Armstrong—Program airplane picture which pleased weekend crowd. Running time, 66 minutes. Played October 27-28.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

ALMOST A GENTLEMAN: James Ellison, Helen Wood—Played with "The Girl and the Gambler." Just pictures. Both weak ends for double bills.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

BACHELOR MOTHER: Ginger Rogers, David Niven, Charles Coburn—This was a surprise picture. Our best business since we played "Dodge City." It held up exceptionally well on second and third nights. Give it all you've got and watch the crowds pour in. Played September 24-26.—Gordon P. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

BACHELOR MOTHER: Ginger Rogers, David Niven, Charles Coburn—The most successful Ginger Rogers picture since the Astaire-Rogers heyday passed over. And it's one swell movie on any count. You'll want to play this one in any event, so why go on! Played October 15-16.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

CAREER: Edward Ellis, Anne Shirley—We had more compliments on this picture than any for a long time. Truly a surprise picture. You can recommend it without reservation to your most exacting patrons. Running time, 79 minutes. Played October 11-12.—Gordon P. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

EVERYTHING'S ON ICE: Irene Dare, Roscoe Karns, Edgar Kennedy—Irene Dare went over big with our patrons. Had many compliments and think she is a coming star. People said she skated as well as Sonja Henie. Several clever skating numbers. We're waiting for her next picture. Played October 25-26.—Gordon P. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

GIRL AND THE GAMBLER, THE: Steffi Duna, Leo Carrillo, Tim Holt—Played with "Almost a Gentleman." Just pictures. Both weak ends for double bills.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

WAY DOWN SOUTH: Bobby Breen, Sally Blaine, Alan Mowbray, Hall Johnson Choir—We were disappointed in this one. Entirely too short. Too much of the Hall Johnson Choir. Running time, 62 minutes. Played October 18-19.—Gordon P. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

WAY DOWN SOUTH: Bobby Breen, Sally Blane, Alan Mowbray—Terrible any way you look at it. They just got started to tell the story and then the end flashed on the screen. All we could hear as the people left the theatre was: "Was that a show or just the preview?" No matter how you try to build this up with shorts, you'll never make a show out of it. Running time, 63 minutes. Played October 28-29.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

Standard

HEADLEYS AT HOME: Evelyn Venable, Grant Mitchell—The poorest picture I have ever seen. Even the kids walked out on it. Running time, 66 minutes. Played October 25-27.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

CHICKEN WAGON FAMILY: Jane Withers, Leo Carrillo, Marjorie Weaver—Jane is good as ever; the story also as weak as usual. Such productions as this hold her down plenty. Played October 14.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

ELSA MAXWELL'S HOTEL FOR WOMEN: Ann Sothern, Linda Darnell, James Ellison, Elsa Maxwell. Lynn Bari—Good, but not big. Pleased 90%, we believe. Fair draw. Played October 18-19.—L. A. Irwin. Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

ELSA MAXWELL'S HOTEL FOR WOMEN: Ann Sothern, Linda Darnell, James Ellison, Elsa Maxwell, Lynn Bari—Fair picture; fair business. Women will like it the best. Running time, 82 minutes. Played October 22-23.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

LITTLE PRINCESS, THE: Shirley Temple, Richard Greene, Anita Louise, Ian Hunter, Cesar Romero, Arthur Treacher—Poorest weekend business in some months. Shirley is all washed up, at least in this neck of the woods. Played October 20.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

STANLEY AND LIVINGSTONE: Spencer Tracy, Richard Greene, Nancy Kelly, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Walter Brennan, Henry Hull, Charles Coburn—Good picture and good business. This brought in quite a lot of the older people whom we had not seen since we played "Jesse James." Running time, 100 minutes. Played October 25-26.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

STANLEY AND LIVINGSTONE: Spencer Tracy. Richard Greene, Nancy Kelly, Walter Brennan, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Charles Coburn, Henry Hull—Tracy is superb in this. His voice in the descriptive sequences is noteworthy. What a swell job he would do narrating a travelogue series. It's interesting just to listen to him. This picture is topnotch and good draw. Played October 8-9.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

United Artists

CAPTAIN FURY: Brian Aherne, Victor McLaglen, Paul Lukas, June Lang—It was hard to get them in on this one but had a number of compliments on it. Entire cast very good. Running time, 93 minutes. Played September 20-21.—Gordon P. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

FOUR FEATHERS: John Clements, June Duprez, C. Aubrey Smith, Ralph Richardson—No doubt a lot of money was spent making this color picture, but all the massacring and fighting was not liked nor appreciated by our audiences. We had ten walkouts the first night. The second night they had to remain for the prize drawing. Running time, 100 minutes. Played September 27-28.—Gordon P. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

FOUR FEATHERS: John Clements, June Duprez, C. Aubrey Smith, Ralph Richardson—"Four Feathers" is a long, draggy, noisy, colored affair. Polished actor Ralph Richardson is to be found in a hopelessly unimpressive role. C. Aubrey Smith and other stuffy Englishmen in the piece are to be found mumbling about the British square and the honor of the army, as they drink whisky under massive English beams in the dining hall. In addition, June Duprez is the face that puckers at home while cowardly (and quite unattractive) John Clements is whipped, branded, chained, starved, shot, stabbed, in the neighbor of Khartoum, in order to regain his honor. Despite the superb color and the standard British authenticity of scene and fact, the film is ragged, even amateurish at times, and impressed me as consisting of interminable footage showing hordes of dervishes attacking and retreating, thousands of vultures, sweat, sunlight, bugles and guns. Under separate cover I am sending a feather to Zoltan Korda. My act of bravery was keeping my eyes open most of the time. Business was poor and the audience kept moving around and talking. I didn't catch much of their conversation but I did hear one man use the word "Moose," if that's any help. Played October 26-27.—C. T. Cooney, Jr., Waldo Theatre Corp., Waldoboro, Maine. General patronage.

WUTHERING HEIGHTS: Merle Oberon, Laurence Olivier, David Niven, Geraldine Fitzgerald, Flora Robson—This will either be considered excellent or poor. English pictures never go over here. Cast is good. Off stage narrative poor. Photography fine. David Niven is very good. Brought out some who very seldom come to a show and kept a lot of the regular patrons away. Not a small town picture but an excellent production. Running time, 104 minutes. Played October 13-15.—Glayds E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

Universal

BIG TOWN CZAR: Barton MacLane, Tom Brown, Ed Sullivan—Fairly good gangster picture. No draw. Played October 20-21.—Gordon P. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

EAST SIDE OF HEAVEN: Bing Crosby, Joan Blondell, Mischa Auer, Baby Sandy—Well liked by everyone but we played it too old for best business. Baby Sandy made a big hit. Played October 22-24.—Gordon P. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Gen-

EX CHAMP: Victor McLaglen, Tom Brown, Nan Grey, Constance Moore—A typical Universal programmer. Weak and uninteresting. Running time, 72 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

FAMILY NEXT DOOR, THE: Joy Hodges, Hugh Herbert, Juanita Quigley, Eddie Quillan—Just so-so, with too few laughs and no thrills nor excitement. Played September 29-30.—Gordon P. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

HERO FOR A DAY: Anita Louise, Dick Foran, Charles Grapewin—Saved from the shelf by a few medium exciting football scenes. Failed to create any excitement or additional business. Running time, 66 minutes. Played October 28-31.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

RIO: Basil Rathbone, Victor McLaglen, Sigrid Gurie, Robert Cummings, Leo Carrillo—Unexciting melodrama that failed to mean a thing to us. Running time, 75 minutes. Played October 28-31.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

WHEN TOMORROW COMES: Irene Dunne, Charles Boyer—Very good picture that did some better than average as a draw attraction. Played October 4-5.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Warner Brothers

DAWN PATROL: Errol Flynn, David Niven, Basil Rathbone, Donald Crisp—A great action picture of the pick of the nation at the time of the war. Those boys whose courage and daring was not half advertised, and it is for productions like this that we have to thank the producers for giving praise to unsung heroes. Very true to life. But the sound was terrible on my print. If you can get a good print would strongly recommend playing same. Running time, 11 reels. Played October 19.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

DODGE CITY: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Ann Sheridan, Bruce Cabot, Alan Hale, Frank McHugh, Victor Jory, Henry Travers, Henry O'Neill, Guinn "Big Boy" Williams, Bobs Watson—I played this very late and it had been shown all around but went over better than some of the new releases do. A grand cast, Flynn and Olivia de Havilland at their best; Bruce Cabot as the bad man is outstanding; Frank McHugh, Alan Hale, Henry Travers, Henry O'Neill all very good, and Guinn "Big Boy" Williams outstanding. And, of course, Bobs Watson is a knockout. Ann Sheridan and the chorus girls are fine, much better than those of today. All together, it is a picture you cannot afford to pass up, for it brings in people who very seldom come. Running time, 104 minutes. Played October 20-22.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

HEART OF THE NORTH: Dick Foran, Allen Jenkins, Gloria Dickson, Gale Page—Another beautiful outdoor colored picture. It is a bit ragged in the story but well accepted by the public. They enjoy this type of picture. Most of them are fed up on this high-class stuff. They want outdoor action and plenty of thrills that are found only in this type of picture. Running time, 85 minutes. Played October 20-21.—Guy C. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

HELL'S KITCHEN: Margaret Lindsay, "Dead End Kids," Ronald Reagan—We had more compliments on this picture than any for quite a while. We played this midweek but would advise anyone to give it their best dates. Had comedy, drama, thrills, pathos. Running time, 81 minutes. Played October 4-5.—Gordon P. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

JUAREZ: Paul Muni, Bette Davis, Brian Aherne, John Garfield, Claude Rains—An exceptionally good feature production and a great part played by B. Aherne and a magnificent cast. Although a great show, cannot recommend same for a rural audience. However, play it and give most of your patrons a treat. Running time, 127 minutes. Played October 12.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

NANCY DREW, TROUBLE SHOOTER: Bonita Granville, John Litel, Frankie Thomas—We can count on extra business when we play a "Nancy Drew" on Friday and Saturday. The kids scream and the adults grin throughout the showing. Plenty of thrills and laughs for any audience. Running time, 69 minutes. Played September 22-23.—Gordon P. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

SISTERS, THE: Bette Davis, Errol Flynn, Anita Louise, Henry Travers, Ian Hunter, Jane Bryan, Donald Crisp, Beulah Bondi, Alan Hale—As expected, there was a diversity of opinion on this one, remarks ranging from "It wasn't so good" to "excellent." For the men who like a good story and real honest to goodness acting, it had tremendous appeal, and they did not hestitate in expressing their satisfaction. All were especially impressed by the excellent work of Henry Travers, as well as the very fine acting turned in by Miss Davis, Errol Flynn, Anita Louise and the rest of the cast. Most of the action takes place in San Francisco in the early 1900's, the melodramatic high spot being the shots of the earthquake and fire of 1906. While it might not be particularly appealing to the younger set, it will most certainly satisfy your adult patronage, so give them a real break and play it. Running time, 98 minutes. Played October 28.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

LIKE FATHER LIKE SON

"I just recently purchased the Strand Theatre here in Griswold from my father [P. G. Held]. I have been associated with motion picture exhibition for the past 25 years, actively for the past eleven years, and have managed for two and a half years just past, but this is my first try at sole ownership of a theatre in my twenty-eight years of life. I have a head just bursting with new ideas of exploitation, decoration and better exhibition of pictures. Perhaps soon, when I have seen the success or failure of my ideas, I shall write you about some of them.

"I have read the exhibitors' reports faithfully every week for as far back as I can remember and place a lot of faith in them. I shall endeavor to submit my reports for what little good they may do, every week."

—GORDON P. HELD,
Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa.

Short Features

Columbia

CROP CHASERS: Color Rhapsodies—The best cartoon Columbia has given us in some time. Excellent. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

HAPPY TOTS: Color Rhapsodies—Amusing.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

HOLLAND: Columbia Tours—Very good. If it had been in color it would have equalled FitzPatrick's, which are the best in the business.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

KANGAROO KID: Color Rhapsodies—Fair.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

KRAZY'S BEAR TALE: Krazy Kat Cartoons—Very good cartoon. A story of Goldilocks and three bears, so do not run it too close to Metro's same cartoon. Running time, six minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

PROVINCE OF QUEBEC: Columbia Tours—A very good travel short but not in the class with Metro's Jimmie FitzPatrick. Color spoils it. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

DOG DAZE: Our Gang—Very good. Drew lots of laughs. Running time, 11 minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

DOG DAZE: Our Gang—A good Gang comedy.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

GOLDILOCKS AND THE THREE BEARS: Cartoons—"Goldilocks" was swell. Beautiful and a pleasing voice. Let's see her again in the future. Running time, 11 minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

HOUR FOR LUNCH, AN: Robert Benchley—Amusing. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

JITTERBUG FOLLIES: Cartoons—Very good. Liked it immensely.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MAN'S GREATEST FRIEND: Pete Smith Specialties—Played this during our open pheasant season. Tied up with local rod and gun club to extra business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

THEM THAR HILLS: Laurel and Hardy Reissue—These Laurel-Hardy reissues are still good for a lot of laughs.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

RKO Radio

FOOL COVERAGE: Edgar Kennedy Comedies—Not up to Kennedy's usual work. Just fair. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier Ind. Small town patronage.

A. J. Small's Sister Mysteriously Killed

The bodies of the newly wed Gertrude Small, sister of the late theatre magnate, A. J. Small of Toronto, and her husband, Warren Bell, theatre electrician, were found dead in widely separated spots on Georgian Bay. Search was started after their car had been found deserted shortly after the wedding. Further mystery was added when it was stated the woman had not drowned, as no water was found in her lungs.

Meanwhile litigation continues in the Toronto courts over the disposition of the $2,000,000 A. J. Small estate among relatives and institutions. Mr. Small had mysteriously disappeared years ago in the vicinity of his downtown Toronto theatre, the Grand, after he had received $2,000,000 for the sale of his Ontario theatres to Trans-Canada Theatres. Ltd.

Trans-Lux Booking

Buying and booking for the Trans-Lux theatres on Madison and Lexington Avenues, New York, is now being handled through the home office of the Trans-Lux Movies Corporation, which operates the houses. Leo Brecher formerly represented the theatres.

Nebraska Adds to Game Limitations

After several years, the Nebraska attorney general's department this week showed its first leniency in the matter of giveaways for theaters when Attorney General Walter Johnson said in a ruling that "prosperity night" is under the gate slammed by the state's strong lottery law.

Mr. Johnson made the ruling at the request of county attorney Mayard Grosshans, of York, where "prosperity night" is being worked.

"Prosperity Night" calls for theatre lobby registration by individuals either the day or night of the giveaway, but the registrant doesn't have to buy a ticket, be anywhere near the theatre, or have a time limit to collect the prize.

RKO Latin American Goodwill Broadcast

On November 15th the NBC short wave stations, WRCA, WNBI and WPIT will broadcast a 15-minute RKO program beginning at 9:15 p. m. (E.S.T.), composed of the songs "South of the Border," "Back in the Saddle Again," "The Old Washboard Band" and "Home on the Range," by Ray Whitley and his Bar Six band with Harriet Castillo as guest performer. She will sing "Perfidia," theme song of the picture of the same name by William Rowland, and "South American Way."

This broadcast is to be part of the campaign to push the distribution of short subjects in Latin America.

Bluebook School

Conducted by F. H. RICHARDSON

ANSWER TO QUESTION NO. 3

Bluebook School question No. 3 was: (A) Name two classes of circuits found in modern amplifiers. (B) What types of power are required by sound systems? (C) What apparatus in sound amplifiers functions as an electric valve?

W. E. Limmroth answers sections (A) and (B) as follows: "It would seem the first section or question might be interpreted in either of two ways. Hence I will answer it after that fashion. Modern amplifiers of the kind employed in projection work have two classes of circuits, namely, power circuits and speech circuits. That projectionist who is able to clearly distinguish between them will find his understanding of amplifier action to be greatly simplified, and in every way better.

"Another and perhaps better manner of stating it is: Modern amplifiers of the kind being considered have two classes of circuit, designated respectively as 'Class A' and 'Class B', though some amplifiers have a class known as 'Class AB', which is really a combination of the two before named."

This being a matter purely of sound equipment I preferred to submit it to my esteemed collaborator in the Bluebook sound section, Aaron Nadell, as I shall do with most answers dealing with sound and sound equipment. Mr. Nadell specializes on sound and is a thoroughly competent engineer on all questions dealing with it, as applies to acoustics and sound equipment employed in projection work.—F. H. R.

His comment follows: "While the first section of the question is a bit ambiguous, Mr. Limmroth's answer is entirely correct, except that he might well have said Class A, Class B and Class AB circuits are subclasses of speech circuits, and speech circuits may be any of the classes A, B, or AB."

Regarding the second question, I have an answer from Mr. Nadell, as follows: "Sound systems vary somewhat in their power requirements. In general they need: Exciter lamp power, a.c. or d.c. 8-12 volts, approximate 1.5-4 amperes. Photoelectric cell exciting voltage, usually around 90 and approximately 1 microampere. A.c. power line, 110 volt and 1 to several amperes, according to size.

The following, produced in the amplifier by conversion of the applied line power: Filament or heater current 0.25 to 10 amperes, 1-25 volts per tube. Control grid bias, 1-40 volts, zero current in class A tubes, fraction of plate milliamperage in class B or class AB. Screen grid bias, somewhat less than plate voltage and a fraction of the plate current of the same tube. Loud speaker field excitation, 7 volts and up; fraction of one ampere up to several amperes, depending upon type of speaker."

Note: These figures supply an approximate idea only. For instance, a few modern amplifiers use plate voltage in excess of 750. This answer doubtless will seem a bit confusing to some. However, they should serve as a most excellent guide for intensive study of the matters dealt with in your Bluebook, and primarily that is what this school is for.—F. H. R.

J. A. Zachritz, an Oklahoma projectionist, answers the third section briefly and correctly, as follows: "In an amplifier the 'tube' is the apparatus that functions as an electrical valve. In England it is called a valve. The name 'tube' was wished on it in this country because the first devices of the kind were constructed in the form of long, slender tubes of glass, instead of the bulbous glass envelopes of later days."

Question No. 7

(A) What detailed information is necessary before sound equipment can be operated with safety? Also, why is it essential that the projectionist thoroughly understand all details of the projection room wiring?

(B) State reason why all projection room wiring should be thoroughly charted and all circuits, switches and fuses labeled with a tag upon which is plainly written all details concerning it.

Grad Sears Holds Mid-Seasonal Meeting

Gradwell L. Sears, Warner general sales manager, called the company's district sales chiefs to the home office for a three-day mid-season sales meeting which began Tuesday. Discussions concerned both the merchandising of fall and winter product and the setting of the next annual "Sears-Sales Drive."

Home office executives attending included: Major Albert Warner, Mr. Sears, Carl Leserman, Joseph Bernhard, Charles Einfeld, Mort Blumenstock, Roy Haines and Ben Kalmenson. District managers were: Ed Schnitzer, eastern district; Wolfe Cohen, Canadian; Bob Smeltzer, central; Fred Jack, southern; Cal Callaway, western; Henry Herbel, mid-western, and Rud Lohrenz, Prairie district.

The Smalley Circuit in Upper New York, has closed with Warner Brothers to play all Warner and First National pictures for 1939-40, including Vitaphone shorts and trailers. The deal involves 16 houses.

Green and Schlager To Make Thomas Films

George B. Green and Sig Schlager, of Hollywood, have organized a new film company, the Producers Corporation of America, and have arrived in New York from Chicago where they conferred with John Charles Thomas, concert singer, regarding his appearance in their first production, "Kingdom Come," by Adela Rogers St. John, adapted by Stephen Morehouse Avery.

Production is to start January 4th, according to Mr. Green who is in charge of production. Mr. Thomas makes his initial appearance before the cameras in "Kingdom Come."

The company plans to make a second picture with Mr. Thomas next fall, based on a story by Mildred Cram.

American Rights Purchased

I. E. Lopert of Juno Films has purchased the American distribution rights to "The Human Beast," the French motion picture based on Emile Zola's novel. Jean Renoir, who made "Grand Illusion," directed the film and Jean Gabin and Simone Simon are the stars. Juno Films will release the picture this season. The picture is not a war film, as reported in MOTION PICTURE HERALD last week.

Executives of Fanchon and Marco left New York this week, after conferences on new season business policies. At the conferences were Jack Partington, president; Harry C. Arthur, from St. Louis; and Marco Wolff and Fanchon Simon, from the coast.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

OPPORTUNITY

In the morning's mail, a letter from a member who rated some paragraphs of favorable editorial mention here recently. He writes, in reporting other boxoffice activities:

"Many thanks for your kindness. Needless to say, it didn't do me any harm."

It isn't news that Round Tablers have frequent occasion to acknowledge such attentions, editorially and otherwise. The reason is easy to find. The bossman notes the bow. The manager's stock goes up; so the members tell us.

And since it happens often enough to speak of, it is to be wondered why more of the silent brothers do not employ these pages to do the same kind of a job for them. Strictly from the viewpoint of personal benefit, this would seem to be a profitable procedure where men are not discouraged from doing so.

Since your Round Table is the industry's clearing house for ideas proven in the field, it follows that the more profit ideas reported, the healthier the boxoffice. And the healthier the boxoffice, the better it is for the fortunes of the men who deliver. Thus, those who deliver earn the publicity they get here, all of which helps to further the cause.

It simmers down to what was said at a Famous Players Canadian managers' convention, some years back, by J. J. Fitzgibbons, vice-president and general manager, in telling the conventioneers:

"It is amazing that so many good managers can see and execute ticket-selling ideas for either a screen personality or story, yet fail to realize the importance of publicity for themselves. When a manager fails to take advantage of the opportunity given him, he definitely dissipates an asset of inestimable value to himself."

Famous Players Canadian is that coast-to-coast circuit whose managers are allowed to earn extra compensation in accordance with the grosses and where promotions from the ranks are frequent. The Canadian theatremen have long been active and valued contributors to these pages.

Theatremen who cooperated with civic authorities on Hallowe'en to guide juvenile spirits into safer channels of celebration are entitled to no small credit for the better behavior of local youngsters on this usually rowdyish day. In almost every instance of low-admission special shows and costumed parades made possible by the assistance of theatres, little property damage was done.

CUSTOMERS TO BE HAD

Any picture is a first-run for the patron who has not seen it. Sounds like that has been said before. It has, right on this page and more than once. It will continue to be said, most often in reference to subsequent-run managers who refuse to be daunted by a picture's previous runs.

Today's instance would be Manager Joseph D. Nevison of Warners' Grange in North Philadelphia, a situation that plays 45 days after downtown. What Nevison accomplished is told elsewhere in the pages. To be emphasized is his success in getting the Philadelphia Boy Scout heads to tie in on "Stanley and Livingstone". At first, the manager was turned down. But Joe persisted, and won. He clicked with a campaign that has first-run merit and doubled his average grosses.

There are always customers for what a man has to sell, if he has something to sell and believes in what he's got.

And while the bows are being passed around this semester, let one be indicated in the direction of Ed McBride of Syracuse for that bumper card, reading:

"Drive Carefully. Babes In Arms. Loew's State."

At the annual meeting of the S.P.D.A.N.A.I.M.P.T. (the Society for Prevention of Draughts Against Necks and Ankles In Motion Picture Theatres) it was unanimously voted that all managers be requested to cooperate as usual this winter.

Lifesize cutouts of Fred MacMurray and Madeleine Carroll in a replica of a Bali beach was featured by Tom Read in the lobby of the Paramount, Atlanta, as advance for "Honeymoon in Bali". Palm trees on either side completed the atmospheric effect, while cast, playdates and title were traced in the sand. . . . Three Marx Brothers impersonators walking under a miniature circus tent appropriately lettered with "At The Circus" copy were reported as stopping a bit of traffic as they toured the streets of Cleveland on Milt Harris' outdoor bally for the date at Loew's State.

Cutout dancing girls whirled across top, while alternate dimming of marquee lights with spots thrown on iridescent revolving globe reflected myriad colors on front and painted white sidewalk. Jean Dearth worked out mechanical effects and Earl Davenport the art.

Spotted in the lobby of Loew's Valentine, Toledo, were 36-inch cutout compo pilot wheels which Wally Caldwell used to sell "Thunder Afloat". In addition, smaller wheels measuring 18 inches were scattered throughout foyers, mezzanine and lounges, each containing different copy. Through tieup effected with Navy officials, "A" boards were planted in ace locations all over downtown district in which picture was prominently mentioned.

Permanent display at the Harbor, in Brooklyn, in connection with "Young Fun Club" introducing a new boxoffice builder intended for juveniles and handled directly by the theatre manager. This activity has been inaugurated in all the units of the Interboro Circuit under the supervision of Samuel Strausberg and Stanley Kolbert.

"Charninsky's 'in the money'" could be the caption for photo at right which shows Louie standing in front of the Capitol in Dallas where he played "Smashing the Money Ring". Blowups of real and fake bills formed the nucleus of his display, with cards beneath each identifying the counterfeits from the "McCoys". Boxoffice was covered with scene stills and picture copy.

Digging up some 1915 issues of the Louisville Courier-Journal which carried stories on the Cavell execution, J. J. Musselman, manager of the Rialto Theatre, and RKO Exploiteer Frank R. Stich photostated the pages and masthead of the paper, which were enlarged in a front for "Edith Cavell". Measuring 40 feet high by 80 feet in width, display simulated opened pages of the paper, with the execution streamer splashed across the entire front.

Corker Ties Program To Citizenship Day

Entering into a statewide and local tieup with all civic clubs in Athens, Georgia, sponsoring a Citizenship Day, L & J City Manager Moon Corker succeeded in booking Warner's short "Bill of Rights" during the week set aside by the Governor and Mayor for Citizens Day.

All boys and girls who arrived at the voting age of 21 during the past year were to receive a certificate by the Committee at a mass presentation. Corker advised the civic authorities of the tremendous value of the short and succeeded in arranging for the presentation of the certificates to be made on the stage of the Palace Theatre. Through the tiein, theatre received many inches of newspaper advertising, including several page one stories, editorials and art and the entire program was broadcast over WGAU direct from the stage of the theatre. Theatre was also prominently mentioned for the cooperation it had given to bring success to the affair, thus making it possible to make Citizenship Day an annual event. In all publicity, the short was prominently mentioned.

Schaefer Invites Newlyweds To "Invitation to Happiness"

Securing a list of couples who had been married during the month in which Louie A. Schaefer of the Paramount, in New Haven, was playing "Invitation to Happiness," theatreman sent letters to the group inviting them to be his guests at an advance preview which was also held for a selected audience. Comments were used for newspaper ads and general publicity.

Telegrams heralding the opening were tacked to the bulletin boards of offices and factories. Teaser ads were run week ahead, numerous merchants tied up on window displays and for his lobby easel, Schaefer used blowup reviews on the picture clipped from Motion Picture Herald.

McGee Gives "Destiny" Street Teaser Campaign

Two attractive girls distributed teaser visiting cards on the streets of Syracuse as part of Pat McGee's campaign on "Dust Be My Destiny" at the Paramount Theatre. Copy on cards read, "Are you interested in your destiny? Call 2-6020 and ask 'What is my destiny?'" Number was theatre telephone and girl answering queries went into a spiel on the picture.

In addition, 18-inch cards die cut in the shape of footprints were placed in suburban spots where circulation could be secured. Copy read, 'another footprint of Destiny" followed by cast, playdates, etc., etc. Cards were also placed on weighing machines throughout the business district which invited customers to bring their weight receipts to the Paramount boxoffice where they were given a ticket if their weights were the same as Garfield or Lane.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Youngest and Oldest Dads Sought on "Invitation"

Setting up a registration booth in the lobby of the Capitol, in Worcester, Mass., Elmer Daniels invited men patrons to sign their names in book provided to determine who was the youngest and oldest father. Stunt, which was part of the theatreman's exploitation on "Invitation to Happiness," brought guest tickets for a month's shows to the winners.

20,000 heralds were distributed by 54 community stores on an "Invitation" sale, names of 25 customers picked at random were inserted in the copy, each receiving a guest ticket. Herald carried ad on complete program and each store displayed a window card advertising the show and calling attention to the herald. Entire cost to theatre was for the guest tickets and window cards. Directional arrows were placed on telegraph poles in choice locations, daily announcements were made over WORC and 100-word announcements made on WTAG's new bulletin program.

High School Band Leads Kid Parade For 'Circus' Date

Since the picture has a circus background, Ferd Nessel at the State, in Anderson, Ind., concentrated on this angle in his exploitation on the Marx Brothers' "At the Circus," decorating his entire front to simulate a circus tent. Cooperation of local canvas manufacturer was obtained and a special barker boxoffice with awning and circus material was pushed to the edge of the sidewalk with usher dressed as barker doing his stuff.

Other items featured in the campaign with the aid of Harold Marshall, MGM exploiteer, included three kids dressed as the Marx frères who walked a bannered donkey about town with copy reading "If you think we're screwy, wait until you see," etc. Bally was also used in a street parade consisting of kids who were informed that the first 500 arriving would receive a free Marx Bros. mask. In connection with the parade, prizes were offered to kids wearing the most novel costumes, best decorated bikes, most collegiate jallopies, etc. The local high school band led the parade giving a concert in front of theatre.

Pay envelopes of leading factories were imprinted with circus copy, a number of free tickets inserted to make it interesting for the paymasters of the plants. Balloons released from the roof of theatre also contained passes and special football rally was arranged out front opening day. Also planted in front were pop corn machines to help the circus atmosphere along; 24-sheets were posted on the sides of the theatres.

Special College Nights Aid "What a Life" Dates

Directing his "What a Life" campaign at local colleges, high and public schools, Charles Taylor, advertising director for the Buffalo Theatres, Buffalo, N. Y., arranged a special screening for principals and members of the PTA. Window cards were placed on the bulletin boards of all schools and special college nights were arranged in which each school's student body literally took over the theatre. Huge banners from each college were placed out front and and Glenn Miller, in person on the stage, offered special renditions of the various college songs. Ads were placed in the college paper plugging the events.

In Boston, Jack Saef, publicist with Harry Browning of the M & P Theatres, put on his campaign for the twin openings at the Paramount and Fenway Theatres which included tieup with local high school band marching to theatre opening night where they gave a brief concert. Like Taylor, Saef also staged special college nights, the theatre decorated for the occasion with the respective school pennants and colors. Through tieup arranged with leading stores, co-op ads were secured stressing undergrad clothes and announcements were made on the Aldrich Family program over Stations WEEI, WCOP and WORL.

October Thirteenth Jinx Show Topped By Special Shorts

Special shorts program at the Parkway, in Fort Worth, Texas that grossed considerably over average business is reported here by Manager Lowell T. Bodiford, called "Donald Duck Jinx Show" and booked for Friday the 13th. Since the Interstate policy is single features, much attention was given to the six shorts screened which were: "Case of the Stuttering Pig"; "Attic of Terror"; "Magician Mickey"; "The Timid Ghost"; "Lonesome Ghosts" and "Donald's Lucky Day."

For his house decoration, Bodiford covered four ghost jinx dummies with sheets and copy and spotted these in different parts of the house. As a gag, bottles of smelling salts were sent to critics along with invites to attend the show, ghost bally was sent to night football games and papier mâché cat head and costume was worn by usher who covered downtown ahead to advertise the special show.

Advertises for Live Ghost

Painted on the sidewalk in front of the theatre was a ten-foot Donald Duck with copy covering entire outer lobby, while a 32-foot sign was planted atop marquee two weeks ahead. Want ad run in daily asking for a live ghost brought additional publicity as did the distribution of "pass out" checks to be used in case the patron passed out while watching the show.

Radio plugs were planted over the 30-minute Saturday morning broadcast direct from the theatre and local dailies were generous with stories and art work.

Tompkins Promotes Seven-Page Section

Newspaper voting contests to select outstanding locals on "Our Leading Citizens" used variously and effectively as exploitation on the picture were topped recently with a special seven page newspaper section promoted for that date at the Majestic Theatre, in Reno, Nev., by Al Tompkins, city manager for the T & D Theatres in that situation.

First page was given over to details of the contest, voting coupon, letter of endorsement from Gov. Carvill and a wire from H. Neal East, Paramount branch manager in San Francisco, offering an inscribed plaque to the winner. Rest of section was composed exclusively of co-op ads from leading merchants, all plugging the contest and date.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Sees Movie for First Time

Locating a resident in town close to Mt. Airy, N. C., who had never witnessed a film, Manager Harvey Smith at the Center persuaded the man to come to the theatre as his guest, at the same time taking pain to call the local newspaper reporters for a human interest story. As a result, three front page stories were secured, in all of which Smith and the theatre's current attractions were prominently mentioned.

Timeliness of "Sons of Liberty" Recognized By RKO Theatremen

Since the Warner technicolor short, "Sons of Liberty", treats of an important chapter of Revolutionary War history that presents a lesson in Americanism, the timeliness of the booking at the RKO Alden in Jamaica, Long Island, was emphasized with a campaign that obtained community-wide support. Local papers featured the date in editorials, stories and art, and special morning screening was held for the press, clergymen, patriotic society and school heads.

Letters were addressed to clergymen of all denominations requesting endorsements before their congregations. Similar communications were mailed to heads of all veteran societies, D.A.R., school principals, and history teachers. Post cards were addressed to a select mailing list, windows obtained in largest department stores, displays placed in branches of the public library. On opening day, American Legion drum corps paraded to theatre, and on opening night an address on Americanism was made by the Post Commander. Second-day showing was spotlighted with a parade of the local Junior Naval Militia.

Campaign was staged under the supervision of Charles B. McDonald, division manager, working with Dave Whyte, manager; Pat Gross, publicist, and Barney Feingold, assistant manager.

Nevison Ties Boy Scout Head To "Stanley" Subsequent-Run

For his date on "Stanley & Livingstone" at Warner's Grange, North Philadelphia, playing 45 days behind first-run, Manager Joseph D. Nevison contacted the head of the Philadelphia Council of Boy Scouts to sponsor a Scout Day during the Saturday matinee of the booking. The tiein, suggested by a contest on the picture in Boys Life Magazine was at first refused by the Scout head in fear of using the organization for what he regarded as commercialization. But the theatremen finally prevailed to the extent that the Scout executive forwarded to 40 troop leaders official letters asking announcements and urging a good turnout.

Copies of the magazine were promoted for free distribution, stage announcements were made a week in advance, readers carried in two local papers and mention in the newspaper ads. A special 40 by 60 display was planted in the lobby with the outside decorated with banners, scout insignia and bunting. The entire date was built up by contests in neighborhood papers, lobby display featured of rare Congo stamps borrowed from Gimbel Brothers store and personal calls were made at schools selling the show with study charts.

LOEWMEN COOPERATE ON COLLEGE COURSE

Recently inaugurated with the cooperation of Manager Frank Murphy of Loew's State, in Syracuse, and Syracuse University is a course of lectures on motion picture business sponsored by the school Dramatic Department. A number of well-known industry executives are slated to talk on theatre operation, sound and projection, booking, etc., during the three months' course.

At the first session, Art Schmidt of Oscar Doob's Loew home office discussed various mediums of theatrical advertising.

Local Girl Scouts Sponsor Northwest 'Underpup' Premiere

Advertising the date as the Northwest premiere, Universal's "Underpup" was given a vigorous sendoff by Nick Rajacic, manager of the Fox Theatre, in Marinette, Wis., by a tiein with the local Girl Scouts with whom it was arranged by the Round Tabler to sponsor the date. Hookup between Gloria Jean, star of the picture, and the Scouts was made by a signed wire from the star in Hollywood expressing her pleasure of the news of the sponsorship, etc. In addition, Gloria forwarded art photo of herself personally inscribed to the local girls, which was displayed in the lobby of the theatre.

Top newspaper publicity was a photo of the Universal star reading the local paper, Rajacic having forwarded the sheet to the Studio where the shot was made.

Local Women Take Over House For Redmond's "Women" Date

It was field day for the gals of Fairbury, Neb., recently when Jimmie Redmond at the Bonham turned over the reins opening day of "The Women" with the local female contingency at the door, ushering, acting as stage hands, etc.

Arrangements were made with a leading special shop for an intimate style show on the stage at which only women were admitted. Heralds plugging the special matinee were distributed broadcast, locally and in surrounding towns, store advertising the stunt in papers, cooperating dailies giving front page stories to the event. On morning of show, Redmond had his staff call store's customers reminding them of the date.

Cooperating beauty shop devoted entire window to stills of hair styles as displayed by Crawford, Shearer, Goddard and Russell, surrounded by scene stills and picture copy. Other merchants came through with windows featuring clothes, furniture, etc., all of which were directly aimed at women and tied to the picture.

Taking advantage of the material furnished by Max Factor on the picture along with colored stills and lip stick packs tieup was made with druggist who plugged the date.

Charninsky Gets Free Space From Paper on "Sherlock"

A special tieup was effected with the Dispatch-Journal on its classified ad page for Louie Charninsky's "Sherlock Holmes" date at the Rialto, in Dallas, Tex. Angle used was that "it doesn't take a 'Sherlock Holmes' to find bargains," etc., etc. Theatre received free ad space for six days. Daily radio plugs were received over WRR, WFAA and KRLD, special announcements at the wrestling matches, boxing bouts, skating rink and midget auto races.

For "Calling Dr. Kildare," Charninsky steered clear of the "white coat" angle and played by Lana Turner in his ads and featured a huge art piece of the new star with Lew Ayres. Special letters were written to doctors and nurses calling attention to the picture and loud speaker was used in lobby during run announcing "Calling Dr. Kildare." Francis Barr, publicity director, aided on both campaigns.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Johnson Promotes Herald Co-op Ad Contest on "Oz"

With no local paper at his disposal in which to advertise his opening of "The Wizard of Oz," Manager Bill Johnson at the Opera House, in Millinocket, Maine, planned a contest built around the characters in the picture and went out and sold advertising space. Large heralds were distributed house-to-house carrying merchants' ads in each of which was an outline of one of the characters. Contestants were obliged to cut out the figures, write the names of the stores in which the ads appeared together with one of the bargains offered by the merchant. For the best entry, a copy of the book was awarded, the next three receiving passes.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Lamppost Stunt Used By Golden on "Avenue"

Manager Jay Golden of the Palace Theatre, Rochester, New York, used a lamppost street ballyhoo for the run of "Fifth Avenue Girl." The lamppost, which was 10 feet high and topped with a "Fifth Avenue" sign, was placed on crowded downtown corners, with boy and girl alongside in evening wear handing out heralds.

The heralds were numbered and patrons asked to take them to the lobby of the Palace and compare with those posted at the theatre front; 25 pairs of tickets were given out each day by the Palace. In addition heralds were handed out the day prior to the opening.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Students Write Reviews

Through the cooperation of principal and history head of a local high school, Manager Artie Cohn at Warner's Roosevelt, in Philadelphia, for "Stanley and Livingstone" invited 15 pupils to attend a private screening week ahead of opening. Students then wrote letters of opinion which were read to history and English classes and on which credits were given. Letters were displayed in front of theatre during entire week of show and cards were planted on school bulletin boards and announcements made in classes.

Exploitation Briefs Here & There

Borrowing a couple of plain box cameras with long straps, Sig Goldberg at the World, in St. Paul, sent two lads on main streets to snap passersby as advance on "American Gangbusters." Only difference between Goldberg's camermen and legitimate ones was that no film was used and folks "snapped" were handed heralds with pictures of Pretty Boy Floyd, Karpis and Dillinger. Entire cost of stunt was salary of boy, heralds being promoted from distributor of the picture.

Street bally used by Manager Frank A. Millspaugh at the Strand Theatre, in Muncie, Ind., for "Man in the Iron Mask" consisted of having his usher dressed in suit of armor with helmet ride a bannered horse about town ahead and during run. Copy on each banner carried plug for cast, playdates, title, etc.

Boy walking inside giant book cover of "Each Dawn I Die" paraded the streets of Canton, Ohio, as Bill Harwell's advance on that date at the Ohio. As a climax to the campaign, newsboys on streets day ahead shouted "extra" as they distributed newspaper heralds. Also featured was a window display secured from leading bookstore which contained copies of the book together with scene stills and tiein copy.

For his date on "Captain Fury" at the Empress, in Kelowna, B. C., Manager Leslie V. Campbell promoted a double truck in the form of the map of Australia divided into states, each containing individual merchant's ad. Title, cast and playdates were conspicuously plugged at top. On "Scarlet Pimpernel," Campbell sent wires to selected list, copy reading "I'm returning today in company with Sergeant Madden," message was signed by the Pimpernel.

Couple dressed as bride and groom worked the main shopping districts of Minneapolis as part of Frank Steffy's advance on "In Name Only" at the State. Girl carried large card with title and man distributed lucky numbered cards offering guest tickets to those whose numbers corresponded with list in front of the theatre.

With folks around Springfield, Ohio, much concerned recently with the World Series games and with scalpers roaming the streets asking exorbitant prices, Mike Chakeres at the Regent printed up replicas of the baseball tickets and distributed them on the streets. With copy reading "This is not a World Series ticket" reverse side included title, cast and playdates of his current attraction.

An attractive modernistic display of "Man About Town" was created by J. S. Thomason at the Ritz, in McPherson, Kansas, with music notes strung under marquee wired with lights that were attached to a flasher and at night gave the effect of the note moving around. Color scheme was bright red background sprinkled with various colors and trimmed with aluminum molding.

Wedding Cake Stunt Sells "Old Maid" in Charlotte

An effective stunt which garnered publicity stories and pictures, was used recently by the Carolina Theatre in Charlotte, N. C., to excellent advantage in conjunction with its engagement of "The Old Maid." Theatre promoted huge cake from a local bakery and dubbed it the "Bette Davis Wedding Cake." Inserted were about 200 prizes including 10 dollars in dimes, sterling silver lockets, theatre tickets and various trinkets, all supplied by the theatre. Each patron on opening night received a slice of the cake.

The Charlotte Observer cooperated by exploiting the cake which was four feet high and ran pictures, ads, and publicity stories at no cost to the theatre.

"Cavell" Ticket Sale Goes to Nurses' Fund

Manager Connor of the Roxy Theatre, in Tacoma, Wash., brought registered nurses, the Legion and schools within the scope of his campaign for "Nurse Edith Cavell." Heads of the Registered Nurses Association worked on a citywide sale of tickets with part of the receipts going to the Nurses' Fund.

The combined fife and drum corps of four local American Legion posts attended the opening night's performance with an advance screening held for Legion commanders, and school officials. Usherettes at the Roxy were outfitted with nurses' costumes which were worn a week ahead and during run.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Squalus Survivors Attend Young's "U Boat" Premiere

Contacting Lt. Com. Oliver Naquin of the ill-fated Squalus at nearby Kittery Navy Yard, Leo Young at the Strand, in Portland, Maine, extended to him and the other survivors as well as wives and friends, an invitation to be present at the premiere engagement of "U Boat 29." Much was made of this locally with photos and stories appearing in the local press, in all of which the picture and playdates were prominently mentioned. Newspapers were also cooperative by breaking numerous U-boat stories of world events.

Navy and American flags decorated the entire front and marquee and on opening night arc lights were flashed on the building.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Newspaper Cooperates With Fend on "Name"

A special tieup with the Gazette, featuring a front page break, high-lighted the exploitation arranged for "In Name Only" by H. H. Fend, manager of the Sherman, in Chillicothe, Ohio. Passes were given for the best tip sent in for a local news story, feature story or photograph. Picture of the manager presenting the tickets to winner also appeared on the front page.

Other features of the campaign included distribution of bags by five and ten with a cut of Carole Lombard, Kay Francis and Cary Grant tie-in copy, card and stills in a fur window display and special feature stories and art layouts in the morning, evening and Sunday papers.

YOU ARE INVITED TO JOIN UP

recently welcomed into the Managers' Round Table ranks, is a very distant member, hailing from Sydney, Australia. She is the exploitation manager for Warner Bros. Pictures and from her communications is doing a smart bit of work. Dorothy claims this to be her first and only job in pictures, having been promoted to her present position after doing secretarial work at the outset for this Australasian Circuit.

is the skipper of the Ada Theatre in Ada, Ohio. This is his first experience in showbusiness and he will soon celebrate his first anniversary at this house. We know Charles will do well in the theatre and anticipate hearing from him, as well as receiving reports of his activities to that effect.

started his theatrical career in 1923, in Versailles, Ohio. He credits his dad with being the instigator of his entrance into this field, for Dad, who was in the drug business in this town, upped and bought the Opera House and Ralph was elected to manage it. Ralph gained much knowledge taking care of this house and is quite happy in his work.

began as an usher with Universal Theatres in Milwaukee, soon being promoted to chief usher, doorman, assistant and then manager in Milwaukee and St. Paul, Minn. He acted as treasurer of the Warner Theatre in Milwaukee and then worked at the Palace, in the same city, managing the house. Erwin was selected as the manager for a government project theatre, the Greendale in Greendale, Wisconsin, which he opened in April of 1939 and where he is now.

manages the Rosele Theatre of the Levine Circuit, in Keystone, West Virginia. The first job he secured in the industry was that of usher, but he was soon advanced to doorman, then assistant manager. His next attainment was that of manager and we know he's quite capable of handling this position.

began in showbusiness in Cordell, Oklahoma, in 1930, starting at the very bottom of the ladder, acting as janitor and doorman. The following year he was promoted to projectionist and art man. A transfer brought him to Clinton, Okla., where he also worked as projectionist and art man at the Rialto Theatre. His next house was the Bungalow in Weatherford, same state, doing similar work. John then joined the Griffith Amusement Co., serving at the Rialto and Del Rio in Clinton, where he remained until the beginning of 1939, during which time he was promoted to chief of projection of all Clinton theatres. In March of this year he was sent to the Temple and Greer houses in Mangum, Okla., as assistant manager.

PEGGY DAYLE LATTA to William Francis Diebold, Pittsburgh, Pa. Bride is the daughter of C. J. Latta, district manager Warner Pittsburgh theatres and assistant to Harry Kalmine, zone director.

manages the Parkside Theatre, one of the houses of Century Circuit, situated in Brooklyn, New York. We expect to hear of your activities at that spot, Bob, so please be sure to keep us informed. Since you are not far from Round Table headquarters we extend a warm invitation to you to come and say hello.

MELVIN B. GRUNDY is the house manager at the Rivoli in Muncie, Indiana. In 1933 he secured his first job in the theatre by acting as an extra usher at the Strand in Muncie, then stepping into the positions of regular usher, doorman, bookkeeper and assistant. In 1937 he became the manager of the house, remaining until the next year. Mel moved to the Rivoli in like capacity at that time and that's where he does his very good work which is reported in the pages from time to time.

started as reelboy in 1928 at the Republic Theatre, for Small and Strausberg, which house is in Brooklyn, N. Y. His next move was to the Supreme house, also in Brooklyn and after working very diligently was promoted to assistant manager of this spot and was also made relief manager for various theatres.

is the manager of the Cartier Theatre in Hull, Quebec, Canada, which house belongs to Famous Players Canadian Corp. His father was one of the first exhibitors in Ottawa and Bob, at teen-age, began working for him by taking tickets at the theatre. After learning theatre operation and projection with Dad, in 1931 he went to work at the La Reta and Carlton houses in Toronto. An offer to join Famous Players Canadian came his way in 1936, which he accepted and then moved into a manager's post at the Regent in Ottawa. Subsequently he received his present assignment and is known as the youngest manager in the circuit. We anticipate hearing from you frequently, so send along those reports.

started his career when he obtained a doorman's job at B. S. Moss' 44th Street Theatre in New York City back in 1918. Two years later found him in Hollywood, having much varied experience in the fields of surveying, newspaper photographing, orchestra leading. Murray acted as entertainer, actor, master of ceremonies for radio, stage and screen. For the past two years he took over theatre management in the Northwest, also covering that territory as correspondent for the Pacific Coast Showman. He devotes much time to the Colonial Theatre in Seattle, Wash., where he now acts as skipper.

entered the motion picture business in 1936 and his first job was that of assistant manager at the Capitol Theatre, Oakland, California. Six months later he moved to Pleasanton, Calif., as manager of the Roxy and then went on to the Roxy in Roseville. Immediately after, Alf became the manager of the Del Rio in Los Banos, under the direction of the Golden State Theatres Circuit and is holding forth there now.

On this and the following page appears an alphabetical index to the titles of all features listed in this week's Release Chart, with additional information for the exhibitor.

The number immediately following the title is the production number. Also given is information regarding the classification of the subject matter. A melodrama is denoted by the abbreviation Mel., Comedy by Com., Comedy-Melodrama by Com.-Mel., Musical by Mus., Musical Comedy by Mus.-Com., Western by West. If the production is made in color, the letter "C" appears in parenthesis after the classification. Thus: Com.-Mel. (C) denotes a Comedy-Melodrama in Color.

At the extreme right of the line containing the title of the production is the name of the distributor.

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1939-40 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

What patrons say MEANS BUSINESS
. . . and they're enthusiastic about American BODIFORM Restful Chairs

YOU know how quick patrons are to register disapproval and how few and far between are unsolicited compliments.

That's why exhibitors who have installed American Bodiform Chairs are frankly amazed at the flood of outspoken enthusiasm aroused by these more attractive, more comfortable chairs.

It means only one thing—American Bodiform Chairs have patron pulling power to a degree never before built into a theatre chair. And that means better business. Better get in on it yourself. Write us today for full information regarding your seating problems.

Read these actual patron comments —they're typical!

"Why, they're as comfortable as the easiest of easy chairs."

"What a relief to find a seat where there's no danger of snagging stockings."

"The self lift-up seats are energy savers."

"They're a perfect fit for the body—I feel rested when the show is over."

"I like the automatic seat lift which makes it easier to get out or in."

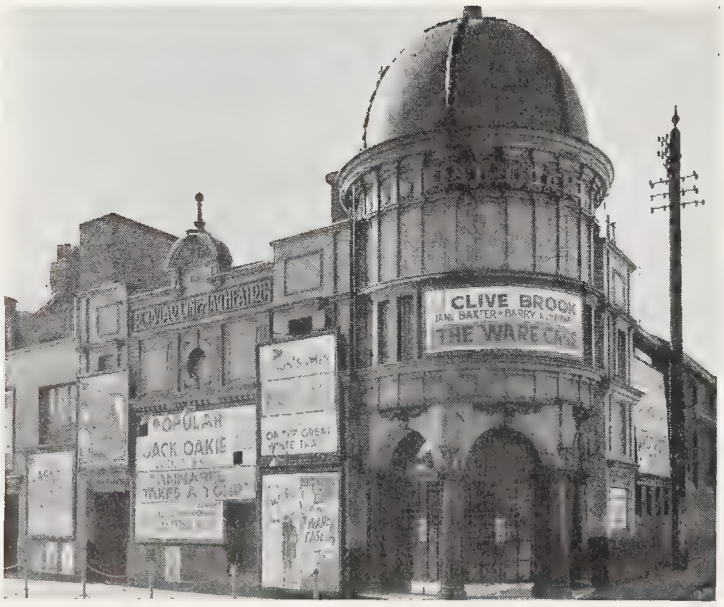
. . A MODERN TRICK OR TWO TRANSFORMING A LONDON LOW-PRICE CINEMA



■ In these before-and-after-treatment photographs of one of the oldest cinemas in an East End dock district of London, is demonstrated a bit of British ingenuity in effecting a complete transformation of a pretty frowsy-looking film theatre without doing much more than cleaning it up and adding a trick or two of modern architectural lighting. As will be seen by comparison with the before-remodeling picture at left, the only revisions, beyond the addition of the neon effects and signs, consisted chiefly in removal of the dome (doubtless at one time very impressive) and a neat refinishing of the exterior walls with stucco, with attendant removal of the awful attraction bulletins representing the advertising genius of another day. The apparent dual character of the sign is an illusion created by the reflection of the letters in an inner porcelain enamel panel. The Popular was originally built in 1912 for Hyams Brothers, who also operate such prominent London film theatres as the Trocadero, Gaumont-State and Metropole. George Coles, prominent British theatre architect, planned the modernization.

California Dominates Pacific Coast Building

CALIFORNIA remains the high spot along the Pacific Coast in theatre building. Reports of new theatres in the planning or early construction stage during the last two months give Washington only two projects, and Oregon one, against California's ten. But there's more to the story than that so far as California is concerned. In the southern part of the state—the Los Angeles empire—the mushrooming of new theatres of one kind and another, and notably of the store-room variety, continues, and the continuance is creating a measure of disturbance.

Some 40 theatres have been constructed or begun in Southern California during the last year. Before the end of the year some nineteen theatres will have opened since last New Year's Day. Eleven of these are in Los Angeles. Altogether, according to S. Charles Lee, Los Angeles theatre architect who is in close touch with the situation, there have been more seats provided, and more locations covered in 1937, 1938 and 1939, than in the preceding ten years.

Low Admission Theatres a Problem

The rise in construction has, in turn, given rise to a problem for film distributors, with the increased number of low-admission houses tending to force up the prices of houses built previously. Since this affects the run of the theatres concerned, South Vermont Avenue, the Los Angeles territory's Film Row, is the scene of much speculation as to the ultimate effects.

While industry opinion is emphatically that the saturation point has already been reached, Mr. Lee believes that "while there won't be quite so many built next year, there will still be considerable building."

It is pointed out that a primary reason for the building spurt was that locations which were controlled were not protected, with a rush being made to cover all available locations as soon as the movement toward protection began. Since practically all of the first- and second-run houses had already been constructed, subsequent-run small houses with low admissions resulted.

While the new independent theatres are referred to as small, the need for 800- or 900-seat theatres is said to be caused by the low-admission policy.

Now under construction are two 900-seat houses in Southeast Los Angeles, while Mr. Lee's firm is also constructing in the same locality, an 1,100-seat theatre, as well as a 900-seat house, in outlying Los Angeles.

In addition, there is going up a 900-seat theatre in Fresno, one of 800 seats in San Francisco, another of 900 in San Diego, one of 800 in Ventura, others of 900 in Santa Rosa and San Carlos, and four more 900-seat houses within ten miles of downtown Los Angeles.

In the last three years, Fox West Coast reports built only five new theatres, of which one was a replacement for a house destroyed by fire. The houses are the Tower in Compton, the Bruin in Westwood, the Gentry in Los Angeles (replacing the destroyed Sunbeam) the De Anza in Riverside, and the Academy in Englewood.

Screen Masking Is Now Under Broadening Attack

FINDING FAULT with the black masking of the screen appears to be in order. An issue for years, it is getting renewed attention, not only in this country but abroad. And Ben Schlanger, New York theatre architect, now associates it with a complete revision of auditorium illumination. This was the subject of a paper he read before the fall convention in October of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers.

In England recent experiments have involved fitting the projector with accessory mirrors intercepting spill light and reflecting it to white screen drapes. This, however, is essentially a projection room method.

Luminous area around the screen was recently experimented with at the Roxy, New York, but here the light was constant. Mr. Schlanger uses the fluctuating projection light, but as it falls on a partially translucent screen set in front of a cove, and he further proposes use of all screen area light for primary auditorium illumination, with walls designed for its control.

When New York's Roxy theatre was opened in 1927, the gorgeous oval carpet in its tremendous Moorish foyer was one of the most publicized features. And attention has been quite as zealously drawn to its recent replacement by a new one. In the pictures available, the carpet has had to compete with the Roxy's resident dancing girls, while accompanying text has concerned itself with the billions of footsteps which finally made its predecessor give up the ghost. . . . Like the original carpet, the new one is a Chenille by Mohawk. The first one, however, was laid directly on the marble floor; the new one is laid on Velvetex, a rubber-base material recently developed by du Pont. It grips the marble, and the carpet grips the pad. With a specially woven pattern similar to the original, the new carpet, measuring 58 x 40 feet, has a central ground of red, and a border ground of blue; figure colors are gray, gold, green, red, black and gold.

Theatre Planning and Maintenance Go Hand-in-Hand

Says D. P. CANAVAN, RKO CONSTRUCTION CHIEF

"D.P." gives a question a good going-over.

BACK IN THE year 1925, E. F. Albee was looking for a practical construction man to handle his theatre building "from the inside." Veteran showman who, with B. F. Keith, had developed vaudeville in the United States into art and big business, Albee was shifting his tactics to meet the requirements of a rapidly changing scene.

This was the period of circuit development—five years of wild and wonderful expansion, featured by the costly erection of colossus "picture palaces," lay just ahead. And these new theatres, dedicated to the motion picture rather than to the stage, were becoming much more highly specialized types of buildings than ordinary theatres. Albee, like many another big theatre operator after him, wanted to set up his own construction department.

In the organization of a construction company doing his work, he found a tall, quiet-spoken young Irishman with a go-ahead-and-do-it cut to his jaw and the common-sense way of looking at problems that is derived from practical experience. E. F. Albee is gone, the motion picture has taken full charge of America's theatre business, the great Keith-Albee interests have been variously absorbed by new corporations of quite different makeup, one after another, until now they are little more than memorialized in the title Radio-Keith-Orpheum, which is usually reduced to the anagram RKO. But D. P. Canavan is still at the post that E. F. Albee established for him.

"But of course construction work is just a part of the job that this department took over," he pointed out the other day in his office on the eleventh floor of the building which houses the Radio City Music Hall—which theatre, incidentally, he helped to create. RKO Theatres have been doing a good bit of remodeling the past year or so, making some particularly significant changes during just the last few months; moreover, the circuit, embracing 105 properties, is characterized by high standards of physical operation. The writer had come for an idea or two, and perhaps more importantly, a point of view regarding method, worth passing on to others in these pages.

"Maintenance of the theatre after it is built is as much our job as the building of it," Mr. Canavan continued, "for construction, which of course includes the planning of a theatre, selection of the materials and furnishings, etc., goes hand-in-hand with maintenance. What you do when you build goes far in determining how much it is going to cost you to operate. It is as I have seen stated in your magazine—the theatre today is pretty complex—building, furnishings, equipment all go together to make a kind of machine for presenting motion picture entertainment to the public. Everything should be put together to make one—well, one organism—from the viewpoint of operating costs and purposes."

Did he think this idea was being reflected in theatre operation generally today?

"Definitely. I think that conditions today have brought about a greater realization of the savings that can be made in operation by the careful planning of a theatre and by well informed supervision afterward. Look at the investment that a theatre represents. You can open up a store for a thousand or two and a little credit. But most any kind of theatre takes a substantial amount of capital. You've got to operate it efficiently."

Manager Is Responsible

This, it seemed to us, places at least part of the responsibility directly on the individual managers of a circuit, even though there is a special department dealing with the physical theatre. Mr. Canavan spread out his hands in a gesture indicating the obviousness of this.

"Even a staff like ours can't be at each theatre all the time. The manager himself must know enough about his end of operation to see that the property is being taken care of every day and that he is getting efficiency from his staff and the equipment. I think managers are better informed about such matters today than they used to be. It is being required of them more and more."

The conversation turned to the more recent construction work of the department. The only new theatre—to ignore the comprehensive remodeling earlier in the year of the old Grand in New York's Chelsea district—is the one being built to replace another local landmark of the same name—the Grand in Cincinnati. This ancient building was completely razed, and a structure with a theatre seating 1,500, designed by John Eberson, is under construction on the site. Revisions in a number of theatres have run into sizeable figures—it cost about $30,000 to remodel merely the front, vestibule and lobby of the Palace on Broadway, erstwhile temple of vaudeville.

Eliminating Entrance Barriers

A feature of the new Palace arrangement (which was pictured in BETTER THEATRES last month) consists in solid glass doors between the vestibule and lobby, extending from wall to wall, and this innovation has been repeated in the remodeling of the State in New Brunswick, N. J. (which is dealt with elsewhere in this issue). These doors, of Pittsburgh "Hercules" glass, are not shatter-proof; however, if broken by a severe blow, the glass crumbles into powder-like pieces without sharp edges.

"We find these doors no hazard," commented Mr. Canavan. "And we think this a swell idea. People going by, or stopping to look at the attractive advertising, can look through into the interior of the theare—there is a sense of actually being inside, since there are no apparent obstruc-

NEON SIGN TOWER. Forming a striking architectural feature of the new Sandra theatre in Wichita, Kan., is the luminous sign tower rising above the marquee and lighted in six pastel shades to harmonize with the color scheme of the building front. Fluorescent-tube neon (so-called "zeon") is used in blue, green, pink, white and yellow-gold, with pink and amber-gold tubing on the marquee face. The tower has a total height of 42 feet; the main portion, 5½ feet in diameter and 24 feet high, is constructed of 8-inch galvannealed sheet mental cylinders with a blue neon tube in each channel. The name letters, 30 inches high, have yellow-gold single stroke tubing. Three ornamental units form the upper structure of the tower. The lowest, 4 feet in diameter and 4 feet high, is lighted by 14 white vertical tubes. Above this is a second ornamental section also 4 feet high but only 2½ feet in diameter, which carries 9 vertical tubes in green. The slender 10-foot pinnacle has white and pink tubes. The triangular marquee, projecting approximately 11 feet from a 20-foot base, carries Adler 10-inch changeable letters. Claude Neon Federal Company Southwest manufactured and installed the display. The Sandra is owned by Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Slothower. It was constructed by Hahner and Foreman from designs by Lorentz Schmidt.

DROPPED LOBBY CONSTRUCTION. To avoid excessive fill under Herman Sussman's Cameo theatre, Brewster, N. Y., the auditorium was located 15 feet below the sidewalk and approached by a series of ramps and stairs. Economy further advised unfinished (brownish) plaster walls. Above is pictured lobby area forming the approach, logically treated in modern forms, with the "dead" rough finish offset by brilliant luminaries, bright metal handrails, copper "pictures" and carpet of contrasting red, gold and black. William I. Hohauser of New York was the architect.

VELOUR AND FIBRE TILE SCHEMES. Right and below are shown the auditorium and foyer of S. & C. Corporation's re-built Palace theatre in Baldwinsville, New York, both of which have walls finished in velour and ceilings of decoratively patterned Celotex. The auditorium velour is alternately painted and plain coral, spaced with metal bands, and furred out four inches to add inexpensive acoustic absorption. The foyer walls alternate velour and leatherette, with bronze metal dividing strips. Alternate squares of the Celotex foyer ceiling are trimmed with large stars, repeating the theme of the mural. Michael J. DeAngelis was the architect.

VESTIBULE-LOBBY INTEGRATION; CARPET VARIATION. Among the features of the newly remodeled RKO State theatre in New Brunswick, N. J., are the plate glass doors between lobby and vestibule, only recently introduced in the remodeling of RKO's Palace theatre in New York (described in the October issue of Better Theatres). Found an effective means of bringing the interior of the theatre out to the sidewalk, the Palace door treatment was repeated here, similarly employing Pittsburgh-Hercules safety glass. The lobby, also, essentially follows the new Palace lobby treatment, featuring walnut wood walls and indirect fluorescent lighting. In the State theatre, however, the box office is located in the lobby rather than at the sidewalk, an arrangement here regarded as feasible because of the immediate visibility of the lobby box office from the street and with less of a transient factor than in New York. Unification of the outer entrance area is further attained by carrying the marquee soffit into the vestibule as far as the glass doors. Soffit treatment represents another innovation, being surfaced with painted stucco. Soft, indirect illumination is obtained from 16 incandescent lamps fitted on their lower sides with metal reflectors and mounted in inverted domes. . . . Remodeling included all areas of the interior. The carpeting of the remodeled State also presents an interesting aspect, four different patterns being used for the lobby, the foyer, the men's smoking room, and the auditorium. Each carpet is a Crestwood Velvet of a pattern in scale and coloration to harmonize with the specific character of its own division of the theatre.

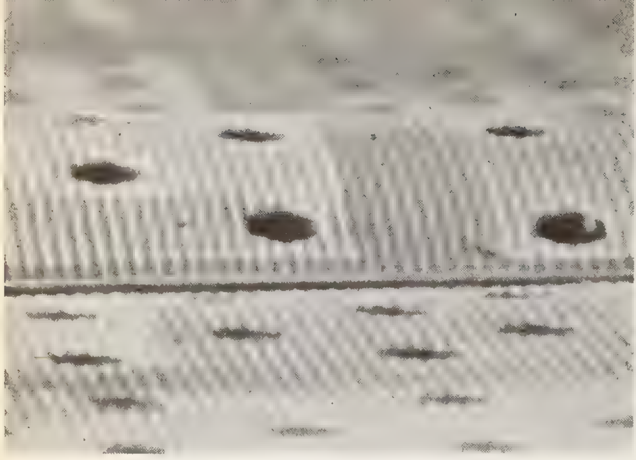
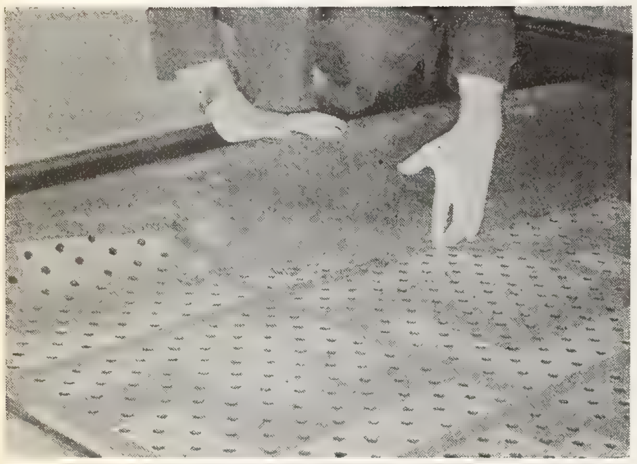
Getting Most for Your Money Out of Lobby Mats

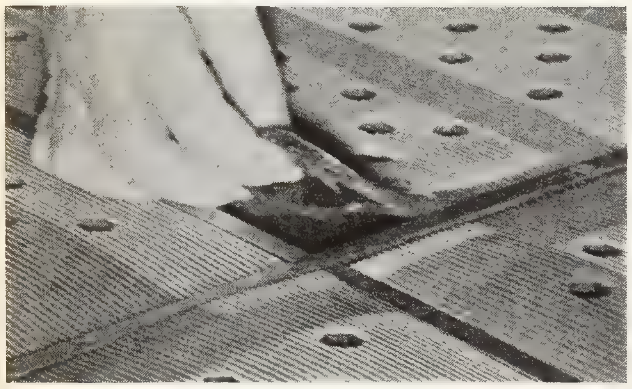
¶ Needed to reduce maintenance and to protect carpeting, rubber mats are a good-sized item in the theatre budget—and too often a source of waste. Here are money-saving tips covering all angles



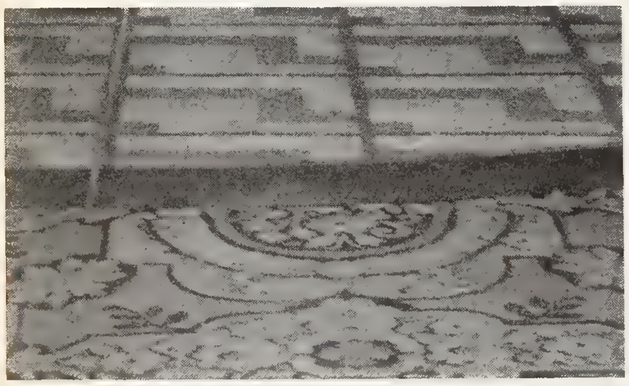
The result of fitting mats too close together. All rubber mats stretch, and the tight fit causes a bulge, which in turn causes the mat to flex so that it breaks long before it wears out. To avoid this, mats should be trimmed every two or three months (see text for directions).



This is the wrong way to roll a rubber mat. It should be rolled in the direction of the corrugations, not against them. This is also easier. Never drag or fold the mat, since this breaks the lining and causes cracks between the perforations.



The result of dirt in the mat recess corners—the mat sticking up beyond the brass retainer level. Traffic soon scuffs these rubber points, splitting off the top layer. Thorough recess cleaning prevents this.



Rubber mats sunk flush with carpeting, as they should be. Mats shift when placed on carpets, wearing down the nap.

[ALL PHOTOGRAPHS BY STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER]

By NORMAN PATTERSON

ALTHOUGH rubber mats are in first cost a substantial item of expense, motion picture operators as a whole have failed to make the most practical use of their lobby mats, and despite their great value, varying opinions have developed as to their efficiency at the prices paid for them. With respect to so-called checkerboard and special design rubber mats, too often sight has been lost of the original purposes for which these items are intended. If the fundamental purposes of the use of mats are kept uppermost in mind, a proper approach can be made with reference to economy in matting investment.

Lobby and related mats are intended to serve, first, as dirt, snow and water traps for the protection of the flooring materials in the interior of the theatre; secondly, as a safety measure to prevent slipping by patrons where floor surfaces are wet or waxed; thirdly, as an aid to the patron in treading steep inclines; and finally as a sound deadener.

The colors and designs in these mats, are to be regarded, in the writer's opinion, as incidental and secondary considerations. These elements tie the rubber mats in with the other decorative aids in the theatre; however, choice of a particular color over another may increase the first cost of the mats 100%. Color therefore is a sizable cost item; in vestibule and lobby area containing 500 square feet of rubber, this difference in color prices in solid color mats may amount to as much as $250.

Effect of Color on Cost

Color also is a durability factor. Wearing qualities of a corrugated and perforated rubber mat are rated according to color as follows:

Black—best wearing; brown or red—second best; blue—next best; and white—poorest.

White mats cost practically twice as much as black, yet a black rubber mat gives considerably more service.

"Checkerboard" or specially designed multicolor mats cost, approximately, 200% more than black mats for the "Checkerboard," and up to 300% more for the specially designed multicolor mats. It is easy to see then that one theatre's mat investment can be triple that of another's and still not be able to provide 70% of the wear.

On the other hand, the cheaper, longer-wearing black mats detract from appearance. For sake of appearance alone, most houses use designed multi-color rubber mats, but if, as in most cases, the colors are preponderately light in the mat, the subsequent deterioration is much more and the total mat overhead becomes an onerous burden. The lighter the appearance of the rubber, the quicker the soiled appearance, with the life of the mat shortened by the excessive washing and scrubbing necessary. Wherever possible, without detracting from the atmosphere of the theatre, darker colors should be used as the field, with the lighter, poor-wearing colors used only to delineate the design. Even then these lighter colors should be placed, as far as is practicable, so they will not be in the line of heaviest traffic.

Regardless of the color combination used, multi-colored mats cost the same, except where special designs are involved. Beautiful effects can be obtained with darker fields as well as light fields, and an increase in wear from 25% to 35%, with 50% decrease in cleaning, is nothing to be sneezed at when your mat installation runs into hundreds of dollars.

Efficient Mat Sizes

A rubber mat 20 feet wide by 2 feet deep across the front of a theatre, without other mats to back it up, is a waste of money for the simple reason that people cross the short section to get into the theatre, and the odds are that only one foot will have touched the mat in passing. In the writer's estimation, any mat that permits less than four steps in crossing is not needed at all unless it is placed at a vital turning point, danger spot or step. People do not stop to wipe their feet any more; the mats are there to wipe the feet for them. Consequently there should be enough mat-walk area in the direct line of traffic to permit the corrugations and perforations to do their work.

For theatre practice where the mats are on the level and not sunk, 6 feet is the proper width parallel with the line of traffic. A mat 36 inches wide is too narrow to permit two people to walk together, while one 48 inches wide does not permit a person to pass two others with comfort, and the patron resents having to step off

There's nothing like this new foamed latex cushioning for comfort—or for upkeep economy! It buoys the body on millions of tiny, resilient air cushions—more like effortless floating than sitting. It's air-cooled and air-cleaned by constant, automatic circulation through its completely porous texture. And it's sag-proof — replacing with permanently molded units, all the inside parts that cause seats to sag and get out of shape. Write "U.S." today for more facts. U.S. Royal Foam Sponge is available through most good seat manufacturers, but it is made exclusively by Avlin S. Hatch has taken over the management of the Half Moon Bay theatre at Half Moon Bay, Calif.

P. G. Held, owner of the Strand in Griswold, Ia., has sold the house to his son, Gordon P. Held, who has been associated with his father in operating the theatre. The senior Mr. Held will devote his time to other business interests.

Pierre C. Levy, pioneer Fort Worth, Tex., showman, and manager of seven Interstate Circuit houses there, died recently in that city at the age of 53. Mr. Levy became associated with the Interstate circuit in 1934. Previously he had been owner of the Hippodrome, Strand and Palace theatres in Fort Worth, which he sold in 1919 to the United States Amusement Company.

C. H. Potter and C. E. Esterley, operators of three suburban houses in Kansas City, Mo., have formed a company to take over the Mary Lue in that city from Morris Wiber.

The Forner Construction Company has begun reconstruction of the Plaza theatre in Tulsa, Okla. The house was damaged by fire in September. Cost of construction, according to a city building permit, will be $23,000.

Eskin Theatres, Inc., has assumed operation of the Pastime theatre at Kiel, Wis. The house had been operated for the past 25 years by Edwin L. Berth. The new owners have installed a new front and new seating.

N. S. Sawaya has opened the Strand at Trinidad, Col.

R. W. Ramsey, sound engineer connected with the Carolina Sound Equipment Service of Charlotte, N. C., was a recent visitor to New York to attend the fall convention of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers.

The Tivoli theatre, a landmark in the San Francisco theatrical scene, will be reopened for the presentation of motion pictures and stage shows.

Howard Hall, operator of the Tivoli theatre in Elkader, Ia., has bought the Waucoma in Waucoma, Ia., from the Cass Theatre Company of Sumner, Ia.

A third theatre will be operating in Storm Lake, Ia., when the old Empire there has been remodeled. The theatre was formerly operated by George Norman, who operated the Vista in Storm Lake.

R. T. Kemper, head of Kempers Theatres, Inc., is disposing of the Opera House in Hamilton, Ohio, the comparatively new State at Shelby, Ohio, and the recently opened Crest in Crestline, Ohio. It is understood that Mr. Kemper will devote his entire time to the business of Century Theatrical Enterprises, which has headquarters in Buffalo, N. Y.

John James, St. Louis theatre owner for the past 25 years, died recently in that city. He was 68 years old. Mr. James and his nephew, Thomas James, owned the Douglass and also the Strand theatre in St. Louis.

Remodeling of the State in Miami, Fla., is underway. A new front, marquee and sign will be installed, and the interior entirely done over. The cost of remodeling will approximate $30,000.

N. Cornett is building the first theatre in Mota, N. M. The town, with a population of 1,500, never had electricity until recently.

Arrived at long last. J. R. Prater, projectionist of the Congress theatre in Palouse, Wash., also a partner in the operation of that house and two affiliated theatres, with F. H. Richardson at Quigley Publications offices. Mr. Prater (a frequent contributor to Mr. Richardson's columns) started from Palouse by automobile to attend the Society of Motion Picture Engineers fall convention in New York, at which he was to have read a paper. Enroute, however, he suffered an eye infection which forced a stop-over in a hospital. But the World's Fair and "F. H." were sufficient inducement for continuance of the journey.

F. H. Heiderich is installing Westinghouse air-conditioning equipment in the Lyceum in New Orleans. In addition to this improvement, the entire theatre has been redecorated and acoustically retreated.

Simon Galitzki, who operates the Good and Novelty theatres in Topeka, has transferred operation of the Princess and Kaw in North Topeka to his sister Delia Deutsch of Kansas City, Kans.

Everett Howell is manager of the Crystal theatre which recently was reopened at Porterville, Calif.

LeRoy Luke, James Baldwin and William Luken have taken over the Dale theatre in Rockdale, Ill. The house was formerly known as the Helena. It has been completely renovated.

W. S. Powers, owner of the Rex theatre in Glenwood, Ia., has bought the equipment of the Gem in that city from H. V. Mullin. Mr. Powers has owned the building for several years and his sons, Mark and Paul, will assist in operation.

Helps Exhibitor Move Equipment to New Location

LITTLETON, N. H.—"When we decided to move our theatre operations in Colebrook, N. H. from the former location at the Halcyon Theatre to the new Jax Theatre, we only gave ourselves from Tuesday afternoon to Thursday afternoon.

"When you consider the headaches involved in moving all the complicated machinery a theatre contains in so short a time, and that we announced our opening at the Jax for the Thursday matinee at 2 P.M., you can realize how worried I was.

"Not only did the Altec inspector, Jennings, do a fine job of supervising, but he rolled up his shirt sleeves and helped our men in every way throughout the entire change over. When he saw how worried I was about opening on time, he quietly assured me we would be ready with both perfect sound and projection.

"As Jennings promised, we opened in perfect shape at the time we announced."

Throughout the country, Altec inspectors have won the respect and friendship of exhibitors, managers and projectionists because of their willing cooperation in matters "over and above the contract."

OBSERVATIONS

of the editor

ON MODERN EQUIPMENT AND THE EFFICIENCY OF THOSE WHO ARE IN CHARGE OF IT

THIS would be a good chance to give a certain friend of ours a plug. But he isn't in our business now, so it couldn't do him any good anyway. Suffice it to say that he's the fellow who read our observations last month about how theatre equipment has been vastly improved, yet costs less today than it used to. Over a quick-one the other fag-end-of-the-day he referred to them, and added, "Not only has equipment been improved in performance, but it is better-looking. Sometime you might go into the practical motives behind this interest in appearance."

Just what did he mean? . . . Well, says he:

"Most theatre equipment has kept pace with the whole trend towards wrapping up performance in good-looking packages—giving even purely productive apparatus streamlining, white metal trimmings, interpretive ornament, etc., which were formerly reserved for consumer goods.

"Now, it is obvious that a streamlined household refrigerator or even a good-looking locomotive has certain advertising value. But why dress up turret lathe, switchboard, or projection current rectifier, or projector, for example? None of such pieces of equipment is ordinarily seen by the customers of the businesses that use them. The hard-headed business man of some years ago couldn't have been 'sold' on the idea that he would obtain any real benefit from the beautification of purely functional equipment, seen only by the people hired to run them. Yet industry in general today streamlines its tools, so to speak—and more: it paints them where they really need no paint, polishes and burnishes them although they would work just as well if left rough and unfinished.

"The tool-makers in a large factory, producing jigs and guides for use on the assembly line, are encouraged to spend time at several dollars per hour giving their products the mere appearance of accuracy and importance. There is a profession of modern industrial design growing up, and these designers are engaged at a pretty penny to make all kinds of gadgets good-looking—not just prettily pretty, but expressively beautiful—you know, appearance that expresses the purpose of the device as well as making it attractive to the eye."

Yes, of course. For one thing, industry is taking more pride in its products.

"Industry always took a certain amount of pride in its products. Naturally, when a new product is being developed, the company heads concentrate on performance, taking the bugs out, making the thing give sufficient service to become established.

"But there is much more than pride in the reasons for modern industrial design. The most important reason is simply this: The men who are in charge of equipment, who operate and care for it, feel more respect for it when it is interesting in appearance. It appears as more significant than equipment that looks as though it had been thrown together with regard only for absolute essentials. When it looks nice, the men who use it want to keep it looking nice—and that interest goes right straight through to the guts of the machinery—they want it to work perfectly, be slick all the way through. And when a man has that kind of feeling about his tools, he is taking pride in his job—and in himself as a workman.

If you give a projectionist equipment that looks like a piece of junk, then he will handle it as junk—and he'll come to regard his job as a junk-job. Spend a few dollars more to give him tools for his job that express in their very appearance high purpose, importance, the necessity of skill, and nine times out of ten you'll get the same kind of expression from the guy using those tools."

It sounded convincing to us. And we can add yet another thought, which naturally follows from the rest: When the man in charge of the equipment knows that it is just a made-over makeshift, he is pretty likely to handle it as exactly that.

—George Schutz.

DAYTON LADDERS

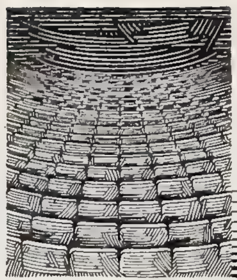
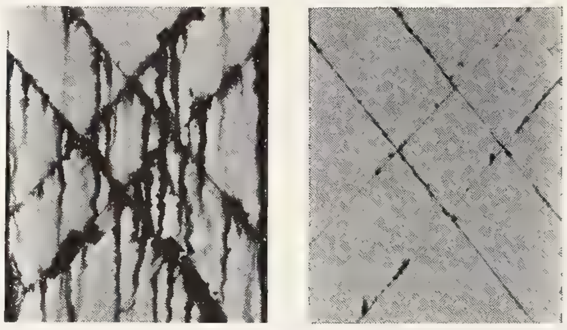
SEATING the auditorium

". . . no theatre can be better than its seating."

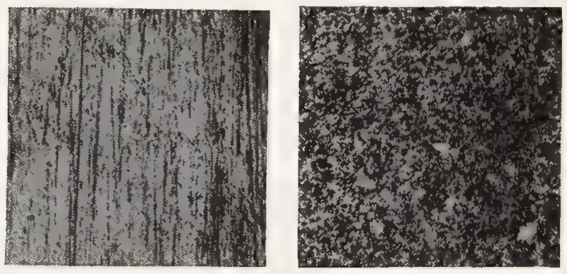


Rust-Proofing As a Factor In Maintenance

THE FACILITY with which equipment of iron construction may be made rust-proof today directs attention to such treatment as a means of further assuring minimum maintenance and replacement costs in auditorium seating. Much of the equipment of theatres is of course subject to the action of moisture, and wherever moisture is likely to be present in substantial amounts, as in basements, within walls and outdoors, it is general practice to coat exposed surface areas of ferrous composition (iron and steel) with red lead or other oxidation-resisting paints before applying the finishing paint.



Illustrating resistance to corrosion (photographs by Parker Rust-Proof Company). At left is a photograph of non-bonderized metal intentionally scratched and subject to salt spray. At right is shown metal with the same kind of finish but applied after bonderizing. This was similarly scratched and also subjected to salt spray.



Reproductions of photomicrographs, enlarged 100 times, of non-bonderized (left) and bonderized steel. These were made by the Parker Rust-Proof Company to show that the untreated metal has insufficient porosity for bonding the finishing paint, while bonderizing has formed a crystalline structure of the other metal, providing a base into which the finishing material will penetrate, effecting a permanent union with the metal itself.

In auditorium seating, however, appearance is of primary importance. Additionally, parts of the chairs are decoratively enamelled. Still further, this equipment is subject to knock and scraping by both patrons and cleaners, and unless the finish is firmly anchored to the metal it may get chipped off the metal, leaving an opening for the action of the moisture in the air. So-called "bonderizing" (which is the term employed by the Parker Rust-Proof Company of Detroit) changes the nature of the metal surface itself, and accordingly is already being used to some extent for theatre seating.

The process produces a phosphate coating of microscopic crystals, and as the finishing paint or enamel is applied, it flows into the open spaces around these crystals; when the finishing coat hardens, it forms a part of the metallic surface itself and will not chip or peel off. According to tests made for the International Seating Corporation of Union City, Ind., which thus rust-proofs its auditorium chairs, air-moisture and salt-spray act upon paint finishes applied after "bonderizing," with from three to five times less destruction than on paint applied over bare metal.

Choosing Colors For Auditorium Seating Fabrics

IN SELECTING colors for auditorium chair fabrics the rules are essentially no different from those of color harmony anywhere (except in such special fields as poster work and similar promotional activities). But that's just the rub. The rules of color harmony, if there really are any, have endless if's and and's and but's.

In general, the darker colors have been preferred because they do not show soil as readily as light fabrics. This objection does not always hold true. A fairly light brown, a brilliant red or green can "take it" as well as, sometimes better than (depending upon the exact shade), a blue medium intensity, for example.

Auditorium seating, moreover, except for extremely short periods, is in a dimly lighted area of the theatre; soil here is less important from an appearance point of view than from that of fabric deterioration, due to the action of the substance adhering to the fabric, and this applies to dark colors as well as light. There is indeed the argument that light chair backs aid in finding a seat in the darkened auditorium, but inasmuch as the back panel of the chair is all that is substantially visible to an incoming patron going down the aisle, this would seem to offer little support to the use of light fabrics.

As between the definitely light, and the medium or dark shades, the only objection to the pale fabrics is probably merely that, as a group, they are more likely to show soil during the few minutes that the house lights are on; while the only reason for preferring them in any instance would lie in some special character of the general auditorium scheme, or some peculiar local community consideration.

Illustrating a Method

In determining precisely what colors should be adopted, there is no substitute for good taste. There are many colors and shades of colors; to realize how faulty our set notions of color harmony may be, one needs only to ask a designer highly sensitive to such matters to decorate a room for us; he will put together tones of colors that we may have thought bitter enemies—and make us say "Ah!"

The interior decorator, however, has a general method which can be applied by anyone in selecting auditorium chair fabric colors (as well as other furnishings): The general treatment of the auditorium always has a predominant color, or color-tone—a ground color against which other decorative features, or color trim, are placed. A lighter or a darker shade of the predominant color, or one directly harmonizing with it, may be selected for the auditorium chair fabrics; or one of the more conspicuous trim colors would be effective. Here are a few examples:

Walls: buff or extremely light tan; principal trim: reddish brown, or magenta; seating fabric: crimson, or blue, or rust. reddish brown of the dominant trim.

Walls: pale green; principal trim: dark green or rust; seating fabric: dark green, or rust.

Walls: cream; principal trim: bluish green or tan; seating fabric: royal blue, or rust.

Walls: beige, or natural wood veneer (medium brown tones); principal trim, or ceiling (if not too high to have influence): pale blue, or ivory with tan or rust bands; seating fabric: crimson, or blue, or rust.

Similar examples could be given through many columns without even coming close to exhausting the possibilities of effective color combinations, but these may suffice to illustrate a method which, with all its shortcomings, does nevertheless assure harmony between the seating coloration and the general decorative scheme of the auditorium.

Illumination Factor

As for the effect of lighting, the tone and intensity of the house lighting (rather than that of the running light) is the determining illumination factor in the selection of seating fabric colors. The effect of the running light, for all practical purposes, is lost throughout most of the seating area.

Since soft fabrics (mohair, velour, corduroy) tend to absorb light rather than reflect it, their color may be somewhat more brilliant than that of leathertte to achieve the same effect.

Removing Excess Moisture To Get "Breathing Comfort"

¶ Continuing, in another discussion of equipment, a series of "plain talks" on theatre air-conditioning

By CARL F. BOESTER

IN THE OCTOBER issue of BETTER THEATRES we discussed the necessity of chilling and contracting the moisture- and heat-laden air in order to extract the excess moisture from it. We shall now talk about several of the more practical methods of accomplishing this result.

First, however, it might be well to think about how much air heat and air moisture we may have in a room and still be comfortable. Let us suppose we are going to cool your office and that it is 20 feet long, 15 feet wide and 10 feet high. Such a room contains 3,000 cubic feet of air (assuming, for the sake of simplicity, that the furnishings and occupants are not displacing any of the cubic content of the room).

Repeated tests have indicated that in summer you and I are comfortable, energetic and alert when the heat content of the air in such a room is about 7,000 heat units (or, as you may also know them, 7,000 Btu's). On a very hot and humid day there may be from 2,000 to 3,000 excess units of heat present in the room. For example, if the relative humidity (air-moisture) of the air is 50% at 95° in temperature (regular air-heat temperature), it will be found that the moisture content of our room with 3,000 cubic feet of air will be 4.12 pounds. With this amount of moisture for this degree of heat, the total number of heat units in the air will be approximately 9,702, which is 2,702 heat units more than the 7,000 units necessary for comfort.

Efficient Heat Reduction

Now, as we have said, to reduce the temperature alone will not produce comfort. Suppose we lower the temperature of the air in the room from 95° to 80°, and in so doing do not remove any of the 4.12 pounds of moisture in the air. The total number of heat units in the 3,000 cubic feet of air will be reduced only by 859—from 9,702 to 8,843, which is still far above the comfort level. But when we remove the excess moisture from the air, we drop down to the comfort level.

By dehumidifying or partially drying the air by cooling or contracting it and condensing out some of the air moisture—removing, say, only 1.62 pounds of air-moisture—we reduce the total heat content of our room from 8,843 units to 7,088, which is very close to our comfort level, and which, as previously explained, constitutes an ideal Effective Temperature.

This plainly shows that more heat units are removed by dehumidification (removing air-moisture) than by lowering the temperature. The importance of removing the excess air moisture cannot be mistaken where it is seen that more than twice as many heat units were removed by reducing the air moisture content from 4.12 to 2.50 pounds, than were removed through reducing the air heat from 95° to 80°. Of the total horsepower required to operate our conditioning equipment, two-thirds expended in extracting and controlling air moisture.

Theatre Requirements

The conditions to be maintained in the theatre are very little different from those in the example of your office, the difference being principally in the size of the space to be conditioned. The relative degree of work to be accomplished is approximately the same. The total heat balance may vary slightly, since for a given cubic space the total amount of heat to be removed varies with the number of people in the space and the construction of the building (depending upon how well it is insulated).

The temperature and humidity conditions we supposed in our example were fairly high. Many times there may be considerably less moisture in the air. Last month we said that in order to extract this excess air moisture it was necessary to contract it or "shrink" it by cooling it. In order to cool it, it is necessary to handle the air mechanically and pass it over some type of surface that will economically cool and contract it and thereby condense out the excess moisture.

Ways to Remove Moisture

There are three factors which govern the control of the extraction of excess air moisture. These are:

1. Time—as related to the speed or velocity at which the air moves through the conditioning equipment. The longer the air is in contact with the cooling equipment, the more time it has to surrender its heat to that equipment, and thereby the more heat that may be transferred or given up. If a given quantity of air is moved very rapidly through the conditioning equipment, only a portion of its total heat can be surrendered. If this given quantity of air is moved more slowly through the equipment, more of the heat of the air will be absorbed by the conditioning equipment.
2. Temperature. First, the temperature of the air entering the conditioning unit must be determined, then the temperature of the cooling medium in the conditioning unit. We learned that heat always flows from the warmer medium to the cooler medium. The greater the temperature difference between the two mediums, the faster the heat can be transferred between such mediums.
3. Surface. The required surface may be in the form of fin coils placed in the conditioning unit, or the surface may be in the form of spray water in an air washer.

Controlling Moisture Removal

By changing any one of these three factors, we can control the amount of air cooling and of air-moisture removal. To maintain a desired effective temperature it is necessary to have a definite balance or ratio between the speed with which the air moves, the temperature difference between the air and the cooling medium, and the amount of cold surface with which the air is brought in contact.

For instance, if we have lots of cold water and an ample amount of surface in the form of a finned coil in the conditioning unit, yet we move the air too rapidly through the conditioning equipment, we create too high an air-speed and therefore a defect in the time factor, so that the desired heat transfer does not take place and we do not accomplish the desired Effective Temperature. On the other hand, if the air is moving slowly enough through the equipment, but the temperature difference between the air and the cooling medium is not great enough because the latter is not low enough in temperature, even adequate surface will not properly cool the air. Therefore, you see the necessity for properly sized equipment and control of the time, temperature and surface factors.

Water-in-Coil Cooling

Let us assume that we are using water as the cooling medium to which the heat of the air is finally surrendered. This may be cold water obtained from a well, it may be water from the melting of manufactured ice, or it may be water from a shell and tube cooler, chilled by a conventional refrigerating machine.

A fin coil is one much-used type of surface in transferring the sensible air-heat and the hidden heat (in the extraction of moisture by condensation). The cold water is circulated through the fin coil, usually made of copper tubes on which are placed metal fins for increasing available surface on the coil. This coil might easily be of the same construction as your automobile radiator. The cold water is, of course, inside the coil, and the air to be conditioned is blown over the coil and its fins by the fan of the conditioning system. The coil is confined in a cabinet or induct-work so that all of the air is sure to pass over the coil. What takes place is this:

The cold water within the coil cools the coil surface and brings down the temperature of the fin coil to that of the water. The air in passing over this coil surface is cooled and surrenders its air-heat. It is at the same time shrunk so that the excess air-moisture condenses on the cold tubes and fins and drains off through a sewer. The heat that supported the moisture in the air and was known as latent, or hidden, heat, is changed to sensible heat (heat as we usually speak of it) when it is extracted in the condensing of the moisture from the air. This heat passes successively (1) from the air, (2) to the surface of the coil, (3) to the water within the coil.

The coil water thus becomes warm from absorption of this heat and must be replaced in the coil with a fresh supply of cold water in the quantity and at the rate required to carry off the heat as fast as it is surrendered by the air. If this water is well or ice water, it is then wasted. If it is mechanically cooled, it is returned to the water chilling equipment, where the heat is taken out and the same water returned for further work in the absorption of air heat.

Air-Washer Cooling

Everything considered, the fin coil is the best method of air heat transfer, for with such an arrangement it is possible to cool the greatest amount of air with the smallest equipment at the lowest first net and operating cost. However, we can do the same amount of work by passing the same quantity of air through the sprays of an air washer, in which case the air comes directly in contact with the water and surrenders its heat to the water that way.

Because of the characteristics of air washers, the velocity of the air moving through the air washer is much slower and therefore the washer must be larger in face area and thereby larger in over-all physical dimensions than a cabinet containing a fin coil of comparable capacity.

Surface is a difficult factor to control in an air washer. We get the required surface by breaking up the water into millions of small drops. A large drop of water, as you can readily see, will not furnish as much surface as the same drop broken up into many small drops, as it is only the outside of the drop that furnishes surface, on which the heat transfer takes place. Thus we materially increase the amount of surface exposed to the flow of the air by increasing the number of drops available. This breaking up into smaller drops is advantageous up to a point, but if our air washer water supply equipment makes too fine a spray, not only will we require excess horsepower for our pump which is causing the spray, but the drops will have a tendency to bunch and be reconverted into large drops.

Somewhat offsetting the surface difficulty in connection with air washers—provided that sufficient space is available for installation—is the fact that air washers do wash dirt and certain objectionable odors out of the air. The air washer can do just as good a dehumidification, or air-moisture extraction, job as can the fin coil equipment so long as the temperature of the water is below the dewpoint, which is the temperature at which the moisture in the air begins to condense out of the air. It makes no difference whether the temperature of the water is 40° in the air washer or in the fin coil. The same amount of work can be done, other things being equal.

Application of Coils

Because of space limitations and because of close control of the surface factor, coils are more frequently used. With coils it is easy to calculate the amount of surface by predetermining the size and number of fins and the number of tubes in a coil. The amount of heat transfer that will take place can be controlled by determining the amount of surface in the coil. The capacity of the coil can be varied, of course, by varying the speed of the air over the coil, or by raising or lowering the water temperature, so that for a given condition of the air entering the coil (the amount of air-heat and air-moisture it has), and for a given condition of the air leaving the coil (in summer, air-heat and air-moisture reduced), there is a definite balance between air velocity (time), temperature difference between entering air and cooling medium (temperature), and amount of surface of fins and tubing of the coil (surface) in order to accomplish a given amount of cooling.

If the coils are designed for maximum conditions, in order to accomplish the desired air condition on leaving the coil when the air entering the coil is at a lower temperature than the maximum condition, variations in the amount of heat transfer can be accomplished by (1) by-passing some of the air around the coil, (2) by speeding up or slowing down the air passing through the coil, or (3) by raising or lowering the temperature of the water in the coil.

For example, in order to keep the air in the conditioned space from becoming too cool when the load is light, the circulation of the water through the cooling coil can be stopped until the temperature in the conditioned area begins to rise. By placing a thermostat in the conditioned area and having this operate the chilled water pump, the circulation of the water through the coil is stopped when the air is cool enough, although circulation of the air over the coil is continued. When the temperature of the air in the conditioned area begins to rise, the thermostat then starts the circulation of the water through the coil for the absorption of the excess air heat or air moisture. This is one of the simpler methods of control.

Our next article will discuss the use of refrigerants other than water in the coil. Other methods of dehumidifying will be discussed in subsequent articles.

tions. I think we would do well to get away from placing barriers between the box office and the inside of the theatre. There should be a natural 'pull' to the interior—the theatre itself should not seem distant, remote, unknown. We definitely find that the public is drawn inside by this glass door arrangement."

Once celebrated, prominently located, the Palace has been identified architecturally with its past. Has its recent modernization increased business?

"By a big percentage. The effect was immediate. The same thing has happened at the State in New Brunswick."

Carpet Chosen for Each Division

In the remodeling of the State, which was completely modernized, we had noted the use of four different carpet patterns.

"We don't follow the practice of using one carpet throughout the theatre," Mr. Canavan explained. "Sometimes the plan and style of the interior advise the same pattern everywhere; but in any case, we select a carpet according to the size and decorations of the space in which it is to go. Lounges quite frequently require a different pattern from one suitable to the foyer."

But this method increases the cost.

"Sometimes a little, but not enough to be as important as the right effect. In fact, quite often you will find that the lounge does not need the grade of carpet that a foyer and auditorium requires, because there isn't as much heavy traffic in a lounge."

Other recent revisions we knew to have included changes in air-conditioning.

"In two of these theatres we put in new compressors in order to take advantage of the greater efficiency of the newer methods. Where we had one or two units, using carbon dioxide, we installed three or four Carrier Freon compressors of lower capacity. The cost of operating our air-conditioning plants in these theatres last summer was much less.

"Another theatre was one of those 'atmospheric' houses, with the auditorium outlets along the walls. If we shot enough cooled air through to get to the middle seats, we would have frozen out the people along the sides and made so much noise that you couldn't have heard the sound. So we shut off the side ducts and ran a new duct down the center of the auditorium. Now we get proper distribution with less duct resistance, so that the cost of getting what we need is way below what it cost to get what we didn't want."

In fourteen years D. P. Canavan, construction man, has had to learn tricks of the theatre-mechanism that even E. F. Albee, when he hired him, never dreamed of.—George Schutz.

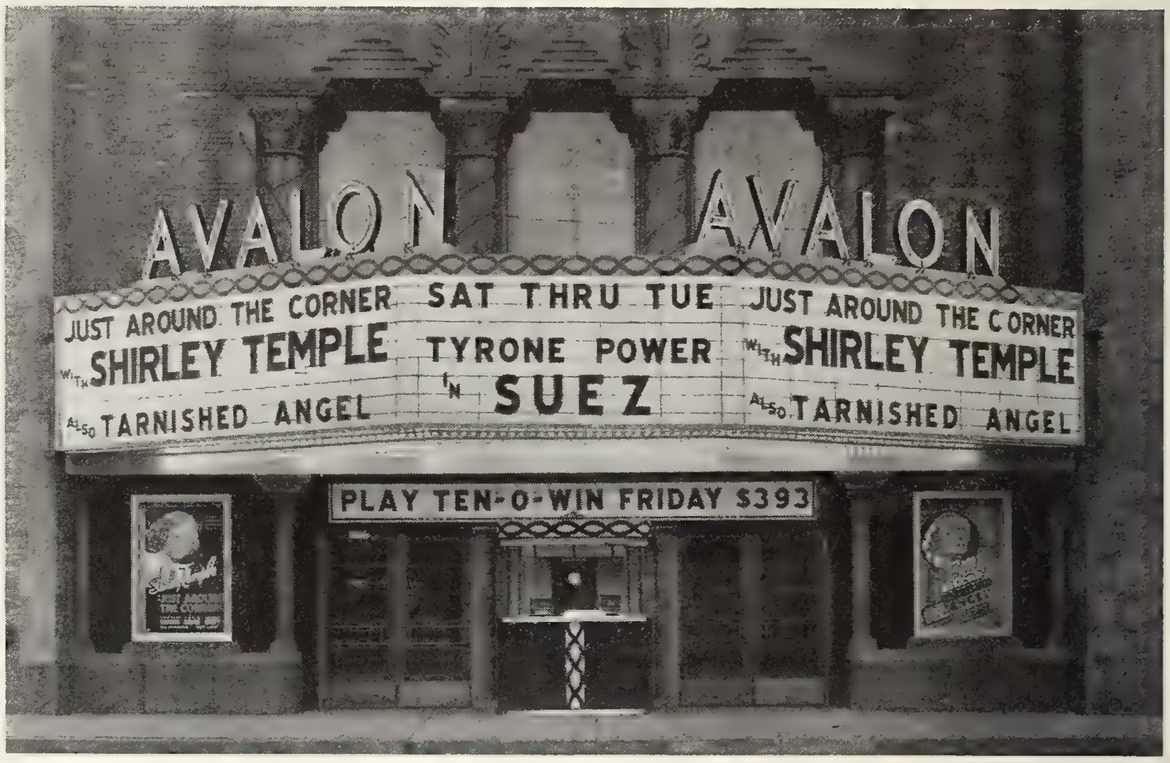
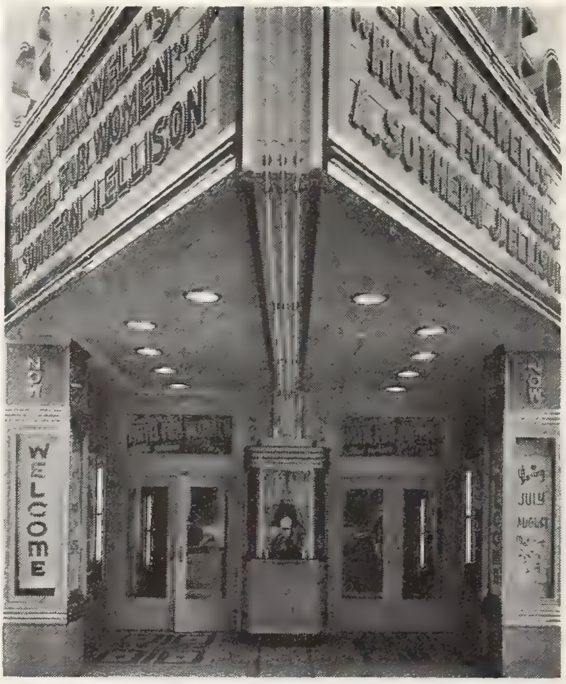
Two Front Problems Met By Modern Marquee Design



The Moorish-Spanish Avalon theatre in Milwaukee with its modern marquee.

ONE OF THE notable virtues of the newer marquee design is its adaptability in form and style to specific needs. Remodeling of old-style fronts with a limited budget frequently imposes most of the burden of revision on the marquee and signs. Then there is the extremely narrow front, which no marquee of real theatrical effect and advertising value would fit. How such a range of conditions as these examples represent can be successfully treated today is well illustrated in the theatres shown here.



Cameo theatre, Brewster, N. Y.

The Avalon theatre in Milwaukee, built in the heyday of period-style atmospheric architecture, now enjoys the advantages of multiple-line attraction boards in its new marquee without damaging conflict with the original architecture, which was left unchanged. True, the front design itself was fairly adaptable—note, for example, how the lower columns seem to support the marquee, while the columnar window feature above is in equally logical relationship with the marquee. But a rectangular marquee, heavy with structural facing and relatively dark attraction boards, would have been out of balance. The design of the narrow border along the top, which is related to the spiral form of the columns, further associates this modern marquee with the Moorish-Spanish front.

Constructed of porcelain enamel by Ben B. Poblocki & Sons Company of Milwaukee, as was the box office, the marquee has a maximum width of 43 feet, and a height, including both the Adler attraction boards and border, of 7 feet. The 3-foot channel signs are outlined in red neon operated on a speller flasher. The soffit contains 200 lamps on 4-inch centers.

The narrow-entrance theatre illustrated is the new Cameo in Brewster, N. Y., designed by William I. Hohauser. Avoiding an out-of-scale effect of a rectangular marquee for such a narrow entrance by use of a triangular form, the marquee also is further given balance by being treated as an extension of the vestibule, partly by running brilliant fluorescent-tube neon from the nose of the marquee, across the soffit, to the box office in the vestibule; and partly by the integration of marquee soffit and vestibule ceiling. The ceiling is enamelled on galvonel within stainless steel borders and is lighted by lamps recessed behind pebbled-glass roundels.

Photocell Device For Registering Number of Patrons

THEATRE attendance is automatically checked and recorded, independently of box office figures, by a new photoelectric cell device being marketed by Conrac, Inc., of Newark, N. J. The apparatus is so designed that it will not record persons leaving the theatre through the entrance doors; moreover, packages, swinging arms or any small objects that may interrupt the light beam will not register. Two patrons entering abreast are counted separately. The Altec Service Corporation will install and service the equipment.

Patrons entering side by side are registered individually through the use of overhead light sources which direct separate beams of light into the two pillar cabinets located at either side.

Models of the attendance register are available with the counting device concealed under a metal cover, which must be unlocked before the figures can be seen. Others provide a printed duplicate record, showing the hourly total of traffic.

A small remote counter for location in the manager's office, either on his desk or locked in a desk drawer, is also available, and the central office of a circuit can be equipped with one counter for each theatre, showing the attendance at each from moment to moment. Desk registers are furnished either with a counting device that can be reset to zero at any time, or in another model that cannot be reset.

Admissions by pass, and employe entrance would, of course, have to be by other doors designated for such purposes. The cleaning crew, however, may be instructed to use the regular entrance doors, and the equipment left switched on overnight in order to record the hours the cleaning crew worked. Unauthorized intrusions out of regular performance hours are also thus checked by the register.

As used for narrow entrance doors, through which patrons pass in single file, the photo-electric equipment is housed in two metal pillar cabinets mounted at either side of the entrance. "Pencil" beams of light projected from one cabinet to the other are interrupted by the patron's body.

For wider doors, two light sources are located overhead and project separate pencil beams downward to the pillar cabinets at either side of the entrance.

For registers used to provide an accurate check on percentage figures, emergency power equipment is available which maintains them in continuous operation even if the theatre's commercial power supply is interrupted.

Several entrance doors fitted with the photo-electric equipment may be interconnected to register on one counting unit the number of admissions through all doors.

The apparatus is equipped with an alarm circuit to call attention of the theatre personnel to equipment trouble.

A new rectifier, housed in an attractive case of modern design, which has been brought out by Garver Electric Company of Union City, Ind., to supersede its existing 15-30 ampere low-intensity rectifier. Natural draft cooling obtained through the design of the casing is one of the features of the new unit, which also incorporates an improved power transformer.

THE WELL PLANNED STAGE

5. CURTAINS AND DROPS

- The fifth of a group of articles describing modern construction and layout of the theatre stage to meet all regular or occasional stage show needs

By C. E. TOMPKINS

In discussing curtains, drops, and related provisions, let us consider only those that are absolutely necessary for the average stage, with approximately a 45-foot proscenium arch and equipped to handle motion pictures, vaudeville, dramas, musical shows, etc. Such a stage would be likely to have a depth of at least 25 feet. Three feet of this space should be taken up by a rear passageway behind the cyclorama, giving a clear operating space of 22x45 feet and starting at the front of the stage. The first subject to be considered is the valance.

The Valance

Some states will not permit the hanging of a valance in front of the asbestos curtain, although there is no logical reason why a flame-proofed valance could not hang there, since there is no likelihood of its catching fire, and since the asbestos curtain would protect it if a fire started on the stage. It certainly makes a much nicer looking job when placed in front.

However, whether placed in front or directly back of the asbestos, the valance should fly on a counterweight set to permit trimming, and also to be lowered for regular brushing and cleaning. The valance, where regulations permit, should be made of a good grade of velour with plenty of fullness, but free from festoons or pockets that might gather an accumulation of dust. Asbestos material may also be used for the valance; when properly painted, it looks very well.

Asbestos Curtain

Asbestos curtains are required by law in all theatres presenting stage shows. There are several types—rigid steel frame, simple asbestos, trip asbestos, two-piece asbestos, three-piece asbestos, Braille asbestos, and roll asbestos.

The rigid frame type is designed for very large openings and consists of a rigid steel frame, covered on both sides with asbestos cloth and having smoke seals at each end, and at top and bottom. Due to the size and weight, it is counterweighted, motor-operated and lifted vertically.

The simple asbestos is made of asbestos cloth of prescribed weight and specifications, with web pocket, top and bottom, in which is inserted a 1½- or 2-inch pipe batten; suitable guides operating on steel cables are placed at each end at frequent intervals to guide the curtain and prevent it from escaping from the smoke pockets. It is lifted vertically, and when operated with modern counterweight equipment with proper bearings, curtains up to 100 feet in length can be handled conveniently by one man.

The trip asbestos is designed for use where there is insufficient headroom to raise a simple asbestos vertically. It is constructed the same as the simple asbestos except that it has a middle or intermediate batten in addition to the top and bottom batten, to which is attached another counterweight set. By this method the curtain is folded as it travels upward so that when it comes to rest it will occupy approximately two thirds of its height.

The two-piece asbestos is also designed to overcome insufficient headroom. Unlike the simple and trip type, this curtain is made in two sections, one above the other, with a suitable lap at the center. It is operated on two counterweight sets so rigged that the bottom section travels twice as fast as the top section and since they are both controlled by one hand line and both start at the same time, it is obvious that both sections will come to rest at the same time. While it is true that this type of curtain will fulfill the Underwriters' requirements, it nevertheless is not very practicable and should not be used if it can be avoided.

The three-piece asbestos is constructed the same as the two-piece, except that the top section usually hangs dead although it can also be operated on a counterweight set in conjunction with the other two sections.

The Braille type is sometimes used, usually where an old building is being remodeled and there is no headroom to permit flying. It is impracticable.

The roll asbestos is in a class with the Braille. Both are sometimes used, where insufficient headroom is available.

Asbestos curtain material is made in different weights, and the two weights most commonly used are those weighing 2½ and 3 pounds per square yard. Both are made of 80% pure asbestos. The 2½-pound weight is used on small and medium-sized stages where the height of the proscenium opening does not exceed 20 feet. For the higher proscenium openings, it is advisable to reinforce the asbestos cloth by means of mesh wire interwoven in the material to give it greater strength to carry its own weight plus that of the batten pipe. This material is known as Wire-Woven Asbestos Cloth and weighs 3 pounds per sq. yd.

All asbestos curtains should be raised not more than 5 minutes before the show starts, and should be closed immediately thereafter.

Proscenium Curtain

The more modern theatres are equipped with a proscenium draw curtain that hangs just back of the asbestos. The material is usually velour, and since it operates close to the stage front and closes off the entire stage, the proscenium curtain produces a very desirable effect.

The means of operation is usually a well-built and noiseless draw curtain track. It works well as a fly curtain, however, and it is practical to operate it as both a draw and a fly curtain.

Grand Drape

The grand drape, or border, hangs in line with and masks the space between and above the tormentors, completing the setting for the first entrance. It should be made of a good grade of velour, and the bottom edge may be contoured or shaped to suit the taste of the designer. It should be made with plenty of fullness, and can be finished either plain or with braid.

Teaser

The teaser is a straight-edge border that hangs directly in back of the grand drape and may be lowered or raised as desired to suit conditions.

Tormentor

The tormentor is made of the same material as the grand drape to form the first entrance on each side of the stage. To permit proper trimming and cleaning, tormentors should be hung on a line set, and where it may be desired to reduce the stage width at times, they may also be put on tracks to accomplish this purpose.

Main Act Curtain

The main act curtain serves the purpose that its name implies. It should be constructed of the same material as the grand drape and tormentors, and the material should be heavy enough to prevent light showing through from back of the stage. It should have a pocket at the bottom for a fairly heavy chain weight.

The main act curtain should fly on a modern roller-bearing counterweight set. Where a draw curtain is desired, the main act curtain may be put on a steel ball-bearing roller track, and the track be attached to a counterweight set. The curtain may then be operated as a fly or draw curtain as desired.

Theatre PLAN & FORM

STANDEE AREA TREATMENT

THE AREA immediately behind the row of seats farthest from the screen is usually designated as the standee space or, because of tradition, the promenade. The name standee implies that this space is used for the accommodation of persons who must view the performance or part of the performance in a standing position when there are no seats available. The modern motion picture theatre patron unlike the stage theatre patron does not see the necessity of being a standee.

This fact has a direct influence in the designing of this area. The tendency is usually towards making this space too large, supposedly to hold a crowd on busy nights. Since nobody wishes to look at the picture under such conditions, and since this area is of necessity illuminated at a low level, and has little or no furnishings to make it inviting, it would be advisable to seek a better solution for waiting patrons.

Use as Cross-Aisle

This space should function as merely a traffic crossover between aisles, and its depth should be limited to that which local laws will permit. The space saved by this limitation should be devoted to foyer or lounge area, where the patron can wait in greater comfort and more intimate surroundings until a seat is available.

If foyer or lounge space is to be used for waiting patrons, such areas should not be entirely cut off from the auditorium. The layout of these areas, and openings between them and the auditorium, should make it possible for the waiting patron to be aware of the ending of a feature, or of other times when a seat may be available.

Appearance and Noise

Low, solid walls, and differences in ceiling levels, and variations in surface lighting, can create the desired architectural differentiation between the auditorium and the waiting areas. Glass may be used to create such division of areas, with good effect, but unless it is of the newer shatterproof type, it will present a hazard.

Proper acoustical design and treatment can overcome any objection which may arise from having these areas in contact with the auditorium proper. Carpeting and upholstered furniture, and also noise-reduction wall and ceiling materials, also the limitation of the sizes of openings between areas, offer definite means of acoustical control.

These columns are regular features of Better Theatres dealing with methods by which the theatre may be planned as efficiently as possible for the exhibition of motion pictures. Both Mr. Schlanger and Mr. Potwin are consultants on inquiries from readers seeking counsel on the planning of theatres.

Acoustic Treatment Of Balcony Soffit

A QUESTIONABLE matter in the minds of many exhibitors and architects with respect to the acoustics of the motion picture theatre, is the treatment of surfaces under the balcony. In an article in the August, 1937, issue of BETTER THEATRES, it was pointed out that if the depth of the under-balcony section is greater than two and one-half times its height, it is usually preferable to omit acoustical treatment on the side walls within this section; however, there still seems to be a strong tendency to carry the installation of absorption materials into this section, even in cases where the depth is much greater than in the above ratio.

High Loss of Sound Is Common

Unless under-balcony sections are especially designed to aid in directing beneficial sound reflections to the seats in this part of the theatre auditorium, there is almost always quite a high attenuation (resistance to passage of some or all frequencies) of sound within this area. Usually the seats, the audience, and the carpet used in the aisles and standee space provide more than adequate sound absorption for this section.

When Treatment Is Necessary

There are, of course, cases where treatment under the balcony is necessary. These cases, which will be discussed in later columns, divide themselves into four general classifications:

1. The deep under-balcony sections having a large rear wall which returns reflections to the audience area.
2. The high under-balcony section, typical of the many older opera houses which have been converted for the showing of sound pictures. In these auditoriums short, quick reflections reach the audience from the forward part of the under-balcony ceiling.
3. The shallow under-balcony section having a depth less than one and one-half times its height, also a possible source of rear wall difficulties.
4. The lounge or foyer space at the rear of the under-balcony section in the more modern designs, where acoustical treatment may be necessary in order to control conversational noise.—C. C. P.

ACOUSTICS in Form & Decoration

POSSIBLE WAINSCOT HEIGHT

LAST MONTH the acoustical treatment of wainscot areas was discussed in this column, with particular emphasis placed on the importance of carrying treatment down to a 4-foot line, or at least to a 5-foot line along the lower wall areas. It was further emphasized that such treatment of the lower sections is almost always required when the walls are truly vertical.

In new design work it is possible to include a higher wainscot providing this area is shaped for sound control. One very practical possibility, and one which should also offer an interesting architectural detail, is to design the wainscot so that it tilts inward slightly toward the audience. If a wainscot of this form is carefully planned, it may be extended as a non-absorbent surface to an average height as great as 7 feet.

Effect of Tilting

The effect on sound of the tilted wainscot is twofold. Short, sharp reflections caused by high-frequency sounds of small wave length coming from the horns and striking the lower side wall areas, are forced downward quickly into the audience at the sides. If this same lower area is truly vertical (and non-absorbent) these reflections are directed over a much longer path toward the rear seats. These longer path reflections often cause noticeable interference, particularly if the length of the auditorium is appreciably greater than its width.

The second contribution to good acoustics in such a wainscot design is the elimination of multiple reflections, or the well-known condition of "flutter," between the lower side wall areas. Here again, the reflections are forced down quickly into the audience area at the sides and are not permitted to reflect back and forth between the lower surfaces.

Amount and Direction

The desirable degree of tilt for the wainscot depends upon the proportions of the theatre as a whole, but is generally not less than 1 inch, nor more than 2 inches in each foot of height.

It may be stated as a general rule that the forward tilt appears most desirable for the motion picture theatre. A backward tilt of the wainscot is also adaptable in some cases, although its use is more restricted to acoustical design problems other than those of the motion picture theatre.

the mat to make way for another. To place mats halfway up a steep slope in the lobby and allow the patron to slip and slide on the terrazzo or marble the rest of the way is just the same as not having mats at all. Unless the mat fits the job you are wasting money.

Installation Provisions

In new theatres the mat requirements should be studied at the outset and provision made for the sinkage of all mats. On an old marble or terrazo floor, brasses can be attached to the floor, and in many instances the sills of the doors are high enough in the first instance to give a countersunk effect for the entire installation. Rubber mats on steps should have brass nosing retainers and should be unperforated and cemented firmly to the step with waterproof cement. Rubber mats on inclines and not countersunk should have all outer edges beveled and brass plugs fastened to the floor through the perforations in order to keep the mats from separating and shifting.

Mats "travel" on top of carpets and do more towards wearing out the pile than they do to protect the carpet. If the carpet is wearing too rapidly at a given point —say, just inside the doors leading to the auditorium or foyer—wait until the carpet is worn out, cut out the worn carpet and bind the edges properly, fasten a metal retaining strip firmly all around the edge of the bound carpet, and sink your rubber mat so that it will be slightly lower than the top of the carpet pile.

Where mats are to cover an entire lobby, construction of terrazzo wells to receive the mats is almost as expensive as completely covering the entire floor with terrazzo. A fairly smooth finished concrete underfloor is sufficient, and brass bars ⅜ x ½-inch for retaining and dividing the mats are necessary. The brasses should be fitted to the mats, not the mats to the brasses.

Permanently sinking the brasses in the concrete precludes flexibility in mat design, installation and future changes. The better rubber mat suppliers know their business and can lay out the brasses so that they become part of the design and at the same time call for a minimum of waste in rubber footage. Although wooden plugs can be sunk into the concrete to hold the brass, they do not compare with metal anchor plugs.

Fitting of Mat Sections

For theatre purposes the rubber corrugated and perforated mat ⅜-inch thick has produced the best all-around wear. Mats ½-inch thick do not offer any more service than three-eighths mats, because after the corrugations wear down, the mat is valueless as a dirt cleaner and the corrugations on the ½-inch mat are no deeper than that of the ⅜-inch.

More mats are broken than worn out and this is due more to carelessness in handling than anything else. Mat sections should average around 4 x 4 feet, and since three-eighths mats weigh around 3 pounds to the square foot, it is easy to see that it is cumbersome for a porter to handle mat sections weighing over 50 pounds.

Even the best mats stretch, especially in warm weather; for that reason they should not be fitted too close together, and an examination should be made every few months for the purpose of trimming down those sections that have become too large for their recesses. Failure to take this into consideration may prove expensive and dangerous. The stretched mat will either pop out along the sides or at a corner and trip passersby, or start to belly in the center and cause the mat to break through the perforations at that point.

A linoleum knife, or (in a pinch) a safety razer blade with a reinforced back, can be used to trim the mat where professional service is not available. In all cases, when cutting, a metal straightedge, or perhaps a wooden two-by-four should be used as a guide and no attempt should be made to go through on the first cut. Extreme pressure on the knife results in a ragged wavy edge, and the springiness of the rubber will deflect the cutting edge with danger to the worker. Keep drawing the knife with a fairly firm pressure through the same cut even if it takes five or six strokes to get through to the bottom of the rubber.

Mat Maintenance

Although rubber, for certain purposes, can outwear steel, it is very susceptible to chemicals such as are used in terrazzo, brass, oil and other polishes and solutions used in general theatre purpose cleaning. Caustics in the cleaning pail and the failure of the porter to change the water have probably eaten away the life of the rubber mats more than anything else.

Do not use hot water. Lukewarm or cold water in itself is a good dirt cleanser, and a vegetable fibre brush not too stiff will do the rest. Occasional use of a soap that is free of alkali will help considerably.

Alcohol will remove chewing gum without affecting the rubber. Carbon-base cleaning fluids, such as benzol derivatives, soften the rubber and rot it within a very short time.

The mat recesses should be thoroughly cleaned. Small pebbles, chewing gum or tinfoil wads underneath the mat will result in bulges in the rubber and increase the wear at that point; if left there long enough they will belly the mat permanently.

The corners of the recesses should be watched carefully to prevent their filling up with dirt. A mat corner projecting up receives buffeting in such a manner as to separate the top layer of rubber from the reinforcing cotton liner and in a short time it will develop into a flap over which patrons may stumble.

Where a mat edge is on a level surface and of necessity exposed, it should be properly beveled. Surface separation from too rapid edge wear can be prevented by having your supplier order the mats with a so-called "traffic-edge," which is made by bringing the top layer of rubber around to the bottom of the mat and then vulcanizing it while under the press in the factory. By the time this wears back to the reinforcing cotton liner, the mat surface will probably be worn out. With this protective construction, your mats will not split or separate at the wear edge prematurely.

Handling of Mats

In handling for cleaning, roll the mat up before lifting. If it is too heavy to handle by picking it up, tie it around the center and roll it on the ground to where you want to place it. Hard jerks, creasing and dragging weakens and breaks the lining, with resulting layer separation and cracks between perforation.

Store rubber mats in a cool dry place. If the mats have not been used for quite some time, carefully unroll them when they are to be relaid and lay them face down for a day or so in order to take the set out of the upturned edges.

[The author, who is known to readers of Better Theatres for a recent series of articles on theatre carpeting, has had considerable experience with floor coverings of all types, and for a time specialized in the designing and installation of rubber mats.]

A new "curve tester" developed by RCA particularly for projection room check-up. It serves as a form of cathode ray oscillograph when used with an audio oscillator. A signal derived from the oscillator is applied both to the system amplifier and to the horizontal scanning circuits of the curve tester. The amplifier output is wired to vertical scanning circuits. The tester circuits are so designed that the cathode ray screen under those conditions shows the characteristic curve of the amplifier under test, accurately revealing imperfections in its performance. An amplifier circuit included in the tester makes possible similar check-up of the soundhead when a variable frequency test film is run, connection being made to the tester directly, not through the system amplifier.

Characteristics of Arc Mirrors Affecting Projection Light Costs

• The third article of a group dealing with field observations in the operation of the projection light source and submitting practical test data

By HENRY D. BEHR

IT IS COMMON knowledge that there remain two general types of arc lamps capable of delivering a high-quality image to the screen; namely, High-intensity condenser arc lamps, and so-called "Simplified High-Intensity Reflector Arc Lamps." The latter are coming into more general use because of their proven efficiency and low cost of operation. Of course we must not overlook the fact that there are still a great many low-intensity lamps in use. Replacement of these lamps is going on steadily, however, and in time they may become as rare as Mazdas.

High standards of projection are out of the question when theatres operate with equipment incapable of delivering the best quality of light to the screen. On the other hand, the best equipment in the world, unless properly handled with due regard for inherent shortcomings, will give unsatisfactory results.

Waste Causes Overlooked

The majority of the motion picture theatres in the United States are equipped with reflector arc lamps as the source of light for screen illumination, referred to as low-intensity, hi-lo, or "Simplified High-Intensity" arcs. Inspection of equipment in a number of theatres to determine the reason for excessive operating costs indicates that too little thought and attention are given to the fact that a considerable loss of light is due to improper mechanical adjustments of the arc, and too few managers and projectionists associate waste of light with waste of money.

It is generally known that the beam of light emanating from these arcs is reflected and concentrated by means of a curved glass reflector mirror. The method of operating this delicate and most important piece of equipment is of great importance, due to its close relationship to the rest of the projection plant. The diameter of the glass reflector mirror, the depth, curvature and focal length, as well as working distance, are designed by or for each manufacturer, to furnish maximum screen illumination for his type of lamp, which must spread out as evenly as possible over the entire screen area. The focal distance of the reflector must be sufficient to minimize, as far as possible, influence of carbon flame, smoke and heat. To secure proper focus, horizontal movement of mirror reflector should always be provided since it is essential that the geometrical center of the mirror be positioned at the correct distance from the aperture.

BETTER PROJECTION PAYS

A fact sometimes overlooked is that only astronomical or other highly scientific mirrors are ground and polished to extreme accuracy—for example, the large piece of glass which is being ground and polished to make the mirror 17 feet in diameter for the observatory on Mount Palomar in California. The work on the original casting has been in progress over four years and the cost to date exceeds one million dollars.

Correct Reflector Design

The very high cost of such scientific precision products, involving tremendous labor expense, excludes them from use in theatre arc lamps. The mirror reflectors furnished with arc lamps are manufactured for commercial use; they are produced on a basis calculated to keep prices within reasonable limits. Such reflector mirrors, when in proper position, are designed to permit the circle of a cone-shaped light beam to cover completely the aperture of the projector. An inferior quality mirror (which can be determined by simple test) will require more current to produce light on the projection screen and will be more expensive.

Horizontal focusing may be accomplished through movement of both carbons, which would require the arc itself to be shifted backward or forward from a predetermined position. This in turn will lengthen or shorten the focal distance between reflector and arc crater. Such movements also change the position of the arc image on the screen of the arcoscope with the possibility of confusion to the projectionist. Manipulation of adjustments which permit horizontal shifting, in addition to usual devices for tilting the mirror, make it possible to refocus quickly while the lamp is burning.

To protect the mirror when the arc is being struck, an asbestos or insulated metal flame shield is swung into place between carbon crater and mirror. This affords only temporary protection to mirror from carbon action, which ceases when shield is moved into normal position; however, if sufficient time is allowed for the carbon to burn in before swinging the shield out of the light beam, protection of the mirror will have been provided during the period of greatest need. Many flame shields are connected with the dowser and do not move out of position until projector is started. Flame shields on some lamps are too small, of filmsy construction and hence do not afford adequate protection.

Cost of Poor Adjustment

A dependable method for permanent protection of the mirror, to extend its life and usefulness, has long been sought. The different phases of this problem merit attention of all who are interested in projecting a first-class picture. Apparently, the weakest link in the reflector arc is the reflector mirror. The subject of arc mirror adjustments deserves considerable attention, especially in view of the fact that they directly affect the quality and quantity of light reaching the screen. Improper adjustments cause waste of light, and the only alternative is to increase current at the arc to compensate for light drop. Table A will give some idea of resultant cost of this wasteful means of overcoming improper lamp adjustment. Figures are given on three carbon trims, based on 300 hours of operation per month.

Sometimes the manufacturer or supply dealer is blamed for this excessive operating expense, whereas the cause is more often an attempt to offset, by increase of arc current, the inefficiency and waste due to wrong setting or operation of arc equipment.

Five years ago the so-called "Suprex" carbons came on the market. They are copper-coated, of smaller diameter than standard high-intensity carbons, and pack a very powerful wallop. To produce a snow-white light, such as the carbon manufacturers have done, requires the materials of the core to be enclosed in a suitably strong copper-coated shell, held within a diameter of 6, 7 or 8 mm. on positive carbon (corresponding negatives about 1 mm. smaller). This without question represents a revolutionary accomplishment.

Carbons of this type have been improved and are steadier than those originally put on the market, yet it is in the nature of their construction and the conditions necessary for high-intensity operation that they (especially the positive) will cause some pitting of the reflector mirror. This is especially true if it is not protected for a sufficient length of time after striking the arc. The heat and the deposit from the material in the carbon core also have a tendency to dull the glass and the silver backing that gives it reflectivity and life.

Mirror Protection

This deterioration in most instances takes place so slowly that you cannot percieve it unless you compare the actual screen illumination by proper tests and readings at regular intervals. Some of the scientific minds in the industry have given this problem deep thought and consideration. The simplest and cheapest device suitable for this purpose is a glass protector or shield of the same or similar curvature as the reflector mirror. It is placed in front of the mirror, and to all intents and purposes becomes a single optical unit with it. Since the cost is approximately one-fifth that of a mirror, it may be discarded and replaced five times before the expenditure equals that of a mirror and at the same time maintains some degree of uniformity in light output of the arc over a period of time. This protector takes the brunt of the attack which the burning carbons would otherwise make upon the mirror and protects the latter from the effect of drafts, excessive heating or cracking.

[This discussion of mirrors and arc operating costs will be concluded in the next issue of Better Theatres. Numerous charts and tables will be presented with that installment for both comparison and guidance, based on actual operating tests. . . . The author is supervisor of projection for the Wilmer & Vincent circuit.]

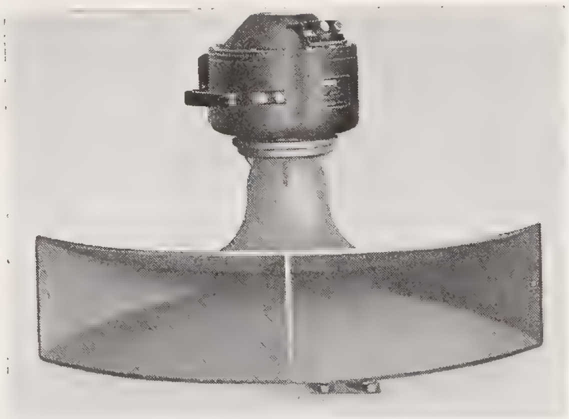
The amplifier tube line-up consists of two 6J7's in cascade, a 6C5 as phase inverter, and two 6L6G beam power tubes for output, with a 5Z3 rectifier and a single 6F6G as monitor speaker amplifier. Inverse feedback, and separate high-frequency and low-frequency tone controls in an unusual circuit arrangement are among the amplifier features.

Special advantages claimed for the equipment include exceptional sturdiness of design and construction, silver-plated switching contacts and pre-testing of component parts for immunity against extreme climatic conditions.

New Wide-Angle Trumpet Unit

A NEW high-frequency loudspeaker trumpet particularly adaptable to wide theatres has been brought out by the Western Electric Company. Known as the 31A horn, the new trumpet operates with the 594A speaker unit to constitute the high-frequency component of sound system reproducing apparatus. So used, it is capable of distributing 25 watts of sound power over a horizontal angle of 120°. At the same time, vertical spread of sound is restricted to 40° to avoid excessive ceiling reverberation. The frequency response is flat within 5 decibels up to 10,000 cycles.



Used for certain public address purposes, the new horn is associated with the Western Electric 707F receiver, and without assistance from a separate low-frequency speaker unit covers the audible band from 300 to 6,500 cycles, at 25 watts power and 120° horizontal spread.

Push-Pull in Demand

A NEW HIGH in sales of Simplex sound systems was reached in October with orders for 55 complete installations, according to Walter E. Green, president of the National Theatre Supply Company. Orders included those for a B. & K. screening room in Chicago, for the Tower theatre in Camden, N. J.; 20th Century theatre in Juneau, Alaska; Park theatre, North Canton, Ohio; and the Pix theatre, Chicago. Many of the systems were ordered with provisions for playing push-pull tracks.

COMMENT ON PROJECTION AFFAIRS

and answers to inquiries . . . By F. H. RICHARDSON

RESPONSIBILITY FOR PROPER REPLACEMENT OF THE SCREEN

A POINT OF serious neglect in the theatre that simply has me stumped is the screen. Even in theatres that are painstaking and vigilant in their repair and replacement of other elements of projection, one finds screens that are not really fit for the projection of a clear, well defined image, having all the pictorial, hence the dramatic, values obtainable from the film—at least a good image cannot be obtained efficiently.

Certainly, no alert, aggressive showman would ordinarily permit this if he realized it, and in hunting around for some sensible explanation I can find only this: The screen deteriorates so gradually that those who work in the theatre, seeing the picture on this particular screen every day, just do not see any change. If this be the case, then the only thing for the management of every theatre to do is to make periodic tests—say, on the first of each month for theatres in good-sized towns, big cities and industrial distícts; and on the first of every other month elsewhere.

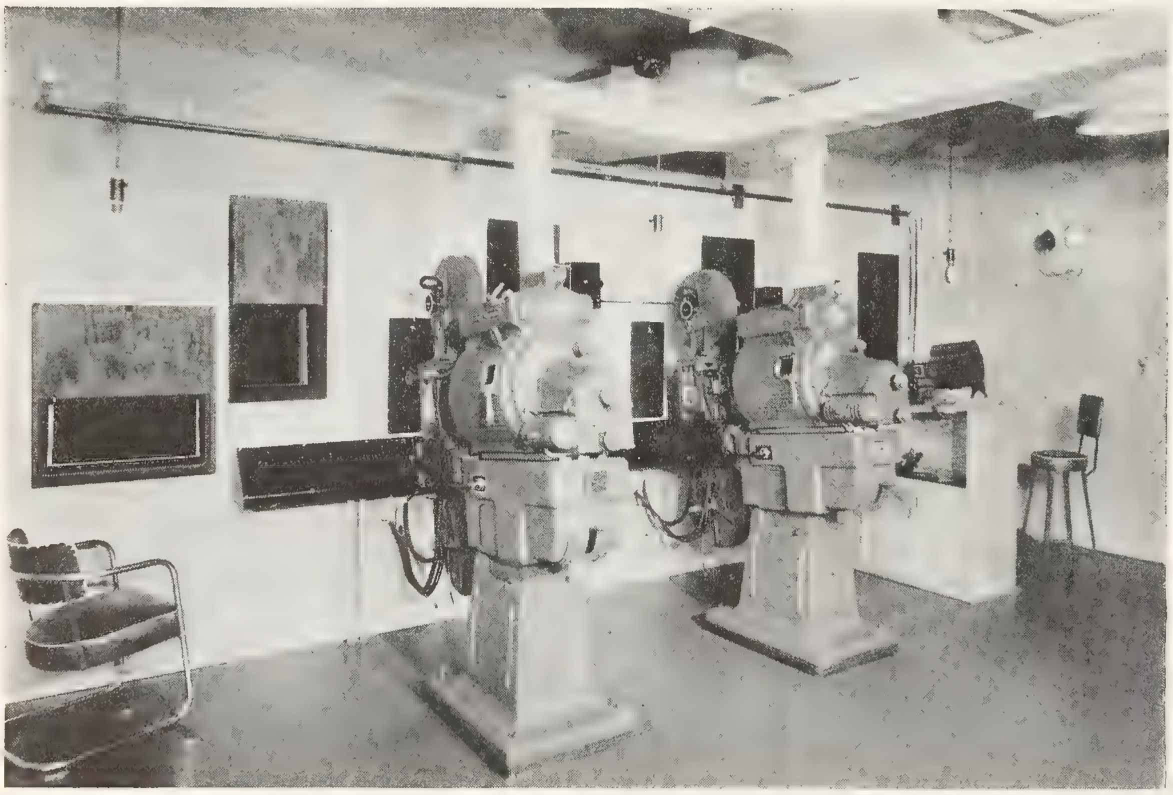
It may be well to repeat here how such a test can be easily made. When a new screen is purchased, a piece of the very same fabric about a foot square should be wrapped in a clean, soft black cloth and stored in a safe, dark, dry place. If this has not been done, and the screen is of the white variety, a piece of white glossy paper can be used. With paper clips or similar devices, the piece of screen fabric or paper can be readily attached to the screen by means of the perforations. Then the regularly employed light should be projected on the screen. The eye will quickly tell what the dirt and gasses of the air have been doing to the screen surface.

I realize, of course, the presence of the installation cost factor. So far as the cost of the screen itself, it seems to me too slight a factor today when you consider that the screen is your stage, that your show is merely light reflected from it. But in later years especially, and more notably in the larger communities, the cost of installation has become, in general, an important factor. I know of instances where members of the stage employes' union had to be hired, in which the cost of installing and masking a medium-sized screen was almost as much as the cost of the screen itself. A hundred or $150 is one thing; $200 or $300 is something else. I have been a union man since 1883, and always a firm believer—and fighter for—good wages for union men. But I am also a motion picture man.

The wage scale, however, may not be the most significant factor here. I have reason to believe that in some cases, at least, it isn't. What causes a restrictively high screen installation and masking cost in such instances is the number of hours required. And these may be required because the crew is not organized to do the job efficiently. Either the members don't know enough about it, or there is not proper direction. In fact, some circuits prefer to have projectionists do the job, with the stage employes required standing by. In such instances, of course, the projectionists have been trained for this work, and the job is properly supervised as well. The total wages are thus increased, but it has been found that sufficiently less time is required to make the aggregate hanging and masking cost less than it otherwise would be, reducing it possibly to as little as twenty or twenty-five dollars.

A dull screen means a performance of less effectiveness than it ought to have—and we have come to the time when every effort must be made to have every motion picture show as effective as it possibly can be. At least indirectly and in time, a dull screen affects the box office, from which wages come; or it creates the necessity of increasing the projection light, which increases operating costs.

Screen prices are down to a level making it entirely feasible to replace a screen every eight, or twelve or fifteen months, as necessary; and with rare exceptions eighteen months represents maximum life for a theatre screen. Installation costs should not be a factor preventing such replacement. The screen plays too vital a part in the selling of what the theatre has to sell.



The spacious projection room—35 feet wide by 20 feet deep—of the new Tower theatre in Sacramento, Calif. The Tower is a new holding of the Blumenfeld circuit of San Francisco. Equipment includes two Motiograph Model K projectors with Brenkert Enarc lamps supplied by Brenkert copper-oxide rectifiers; RCA Photophone sound system, Golde automatic rewinders, and Dalite screen 24 feet wide.

In fact, the picture is not in as sharp definition as we used to secure with low intensity lamps, Series 1 lenses, 9x12 screen image, and front shutter projectors. We have tried everything, including other lenses, but without improvement. Any help you can give us will be deeply appreciated."

There are several things that might cause such trouble as you describe—film not held perfectly flat over projector aperture, an element of the projection lens loose or reversed, oil on outer surface zones of some element of the projection lens, for example. However, let us consider these factors:

In the other theatre you were projecting a screen image 12 feet wide, which your lens had sufficient "depth of focus" to project sharply at all its points. You now have a screen image 14x17, which at your present projection distance compels using a lens with only 3.75 inch E. F., which lens is unable to focus an image of that size sharply at all points—center sharp, outer zones hazy.

You may check this in either of two ways. Borrow a lens that will give a 12-foot-wide screen image (approximately) at that distance. I think it very likely your trouble will disappear, whereupon you have only to consult the makers of your lenses, asking them to advise what they can do about it.

You also may make a satisfactory test by stretching a piece of bleached muslin, or even a sheet of white paper on a frame, say, two or three feet square, and focusing the center of your picture sharply. Hold this frame against the outer edge of your screen image and move it slowly toward the lens, holding it level with the screen surface. If a point is reached where the focus is sharp, that's the answer—it is the lens. It cannot focus a flat image that large in area.

WOODEN SHIPPING REELS USED IN NEW ZEALAND

C. WYATT, projectionist of the New Plymouth theatre in New Zealand, has sent a photograph of wooden reels now in use in that country for shipment of films. The reason for their adoption seems to be cheapness of construction and lightness of weight, which of course means lowered shipping charges. They carry up to 2,000 feet of film. In describing them, Mr. Wyatt does not mention that the reel sides are laminated, as undoubtedly they are. He writes: "The 2,000 foot shipping spools are made of Georgia pine, approximately 14 inches in diameter. The hub diameter is 3½ inches; its length, 1⅝ inches.

"The hole in the side (one side only) is opposite the hub slot. Reel sides are attached to the hub by means of four 1-inch clout head nails, each ⅜-inch across the head. One type of reel has its edges bound with white adhesive tape; another is merely rounded and polished.

"The cloth strip shown hanging down is 4 feet long. It is used to wrap around the film when the reel is ready to pack for shipment. To it are attached four or five wooden paddles (one is marked X on photo) designed to be thrust between the reel-sides and film-roll to take up all lost motion. They make a solid 'chunk' of reels when several are ready for insertion in the metal shipping can. There is then no possibility of the weight of the film breaking the reel-sides. These reels are, of course, used for nothing except shipment of film."

We thank Brother Wyatt for the opportunity afforded us to examine the wooden reels, of which we had heard.

CITES VALUE OF NAMING PROJECTIONIST ON SCREEN

MARION B. STOUT, projectionist of Petersburg, Alaska, submits some thoughts which deserve careful consideration by exhibitors. I base this statement upon the fact that since it is pretty well established that "better projection pays," hence anything that costs but little and tends to encourage desired results should at least be very carefully examined, and unless good reasons for rejection can be advanced, be adopted. Friend Stout says:

"During past years you have many times suggested the projection of a strip of film at the beginning of each show, bearing this legend: 'Projection in this theatre is in charge of John Doe,' naming the projectionist, which of course presumes the appointment of one man as chief in theatres employing more than one projectionist. A moment of thought should convince one of the highly beneficial effect of such an announcement to audiences. In theatres employing but one projectionist, it most certainly would put him on his metal to avoid errors. It would induce chief projectionists to keep much closer watch on assistants, as well as on the various equipments. When one's name is publicly attached to something, it follows that one hates like the devil to have faults appear therein!

"It is too bad that your recommendation in this regard was not adopted. For one, I ask that you take the matter up again. In the theatre where I work I try to deliver good results, as also does my apprentice, John Steadman, who has charge at matinees and on my day off. While we do try, still I can see that were our names thus shown on the screen, the net effect would be to keep us literally on our toes to avoid all possibility of avoidable fault in both image and sound.

"In closing may I ask if you would or would not consider a dark green projection room front-wall as a bit more pleasing and somewhat more easy on the eyes than black?"

A dark green wall is all right, provided it be really dark and without gloss. That it is easier on the eyes I cannot agree. I projected for years with a flat black front-wall and experienced no eye strain due to the color. As to the "pleasing," from the time I entered the room my whole attention was wholly absorbed in my work, which to me was intensely interesting.

As to the other matter, the effect is purely psychological, but fairly strong nevertheless. While the projectionist in a small town may feel that everyone knows who he is, nevertheless when each audience has its attention directly focused on the fact that it is he who is putting the show on, there is a very decided effect produced, an effect easily justifying the expense.

LIGHT BEAM AND THROW "PUZZLERS"

L. J. GRANT, of Mobile, Ala., writes, "What does a pronounced ring of light surrounding the light beam indicate? It appears on the asbestos board with which the projection room wall opening is finished. In this board is an opening half an inch larger than the diameter of the light beam itself.

"Secondly, where there is 110-volt d.c. available, would you recommend voltage reduction by means of rheostats or motor-generator? Third, where it is equally possible to have a projection distance of 115 or 75 feet, which would you recommend?"

The ring of light described probably indicates that the black paint with which the projection lens barrel is coated on its inside surface has worn off, or partially so. Disassemble the lens and coat its inside surface with coach painter's lampblack ground in "japan."

Where 110-volt current is available there there is not enough saving in the motor-generator set, as compared with the rheostat, to justify the relatively high cost of its installation.

I cannot imagine a condition where either of the two projection distances would be available and equally satisfactory. However, on the assumption that all things are possible, I answer thus: Using a good, correctly selected and correctly adjusted lens system and a screen image not exceeding, say, 20 feet wide, just as excellent a picture can be projected at the shorter distance as at the longer. But there is possibly less waste of light in the shorter focal length optical train, hence it is likely to be the more efficent of the two.

I say "possibly less waste" for the reason that, whereas the really expert projectionist who is permitted to select the optical train elements may be able to avoid waste of light, the one who is not permitted to make such selection might and probably would have a very considerable waste of light, hence of electric power.

You wouldn't call this the modern way to roast that turkey

But isn't it just as old-fashioned to use an outmoded sound system on modern movies?

Here's an important fact to remember—Hollywood is now producing finer sound than ever before—because movie fans demand good sound. To properly reproduce it—and build up your business—install . . .

New RCA Photophone Magic Voice of the Screen

with Rotary Stabilizer plus Shock-Proof Drive

—available at low cost to theatres of every size!

LET'S LOOK AT FACTS. You can show the finest pictures in the world—but you'll have empty seats in your theatre if the sound is poor. Because nowadays movie fans know good sound from bad—and patronize the theatre where listening is as much fun as looking.

Hollywood knows this and that's why Hollywood puts such excellent sound on its films. But how about you—are you letting an outmoded sound system hurt your takes?

It will pay you to find out about the new RCA Photophone Magic Voice of the Screen. For here's the equipment built for true reproduction of modern movie sound. It's the tonic your box office needs. And its low cost will surprise you, just as its many new features will delight you. Full details from your RCA Photophone representative.

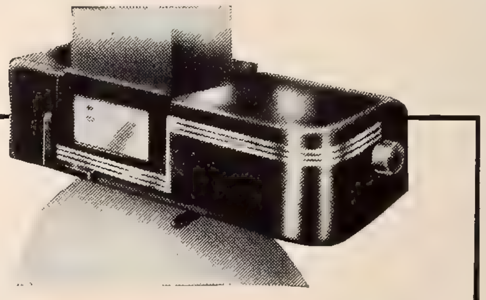
Better sound means better box office—and RCA Tubes mean better sound.



Only the New Magic Voice of the Screen offers all these Features!

This splendid new equipment gives you full assurance of constant film speed by adding the amazing new Shock-Proof Drive to the famous Rotary Stabilizer! Besides this great feature, the new Magic Voice brings you new styling, new protection, new convenience, new added reserve power and many other outstanding proofs that it's the best value you've ever seen! Ask your RCA Photophone representative for complete information.

RCA Photophone's service organization has a low cost theatre service plan in which you'll be interested.

SCREEN STATUS

WHEN the Screen Artists Guild and the Artists' Managers Guild came to a code agreement governing terms for agents, a fortnight ago in Hollywood, the document was found to contain a passage, referring to conditions of a revision, which said: " . . . or that the relative standing of the film industry as a branch of the entertainment world has suffered materially so as to reduce the motion picture to a position of substantially less importance . . . "

That tentative clause is the first official setting down, for many a year, of a doubting of the continued status of the screen.

It causes one to remember that in 1905, with the rise of the nickelodeon, there was considerable use of the phrase: "The movies are here to stay." In 1912 the theatrical magnates of Broadway, in the flush of a transient victory in adverse legislation, said, "We've got the movies on the run." But again in 1915, after "The Birth of a Nation" had flowered and Famous Players and Triangle were spectacularly in the field, again the press discovered both that "the movies are here to stay" and also that "the movies are only in their infancy".

Let us say again that the movies are here to stay.

It is true indeed that the motion picture, as the first important product of the impact of the machine age on the art of expression, has continued on and grown into an era filled with competitions which it did not experience in its early years. We need but mention radio, tentative and nascent television. But among the competitions of somewhat greater importance are the motor car and its consequences, such as roadside cabaret and public dancing at every crossroads, to say nothing of sex-up-the-lane and a terrific expansion of the individual play area from walking distance to a hundred mile circle. Then there's the bridge mania, hip-flask gin, football and baseball in new terms of appeal and showcraft, cheaper fiction and more of it, rental libraries, nationwide horse and dog track gambling, and, important too, installment selling to grab the wage earner's dollar before he can get it in pocket to spend.

All that is competition, and of a new and increasing nature.

In the face of it, while the motion picture has too generally ceased to be a habit of going "around the corner to a show", it has done magnificently well in holding its own.

THE motion picture is unlikely ever to be reduced "to a position of substantially less importance", in the words of the agents' code, until and unless a better way to tell a story is found—a better medium of re-creating events. The motion picture re-creates events, tells stories by recording fictional events, by means of their sights and sounds. That process is basic. When a more effective telling of the story is discovered, it also will be a motion picture.

When Mr. Darryl Zanuck was making a speech in Hollywood the other day he said something reported as indicating that he expected the industry might be facing "radical change".

That probably is true.

But it is to be expected that it will be the motion picture industry itself which makes those changes, radical or not, because, as its hectic history has proved, this industry is made up of an order of persons who persist in doing business, regardless, and by whatever arrangements seem necessary.

There have been down the years not a few periods of radical change. Many who could not or would not adjust to the change are no longer among us. Their places have been taken by those who could adjust, by those who found new opportunity. The business has gone on.

The movies are here to stay.

They can do the best job, at the least price. If they are underbid it is their own fault—and it will be other movies that do it.

SOUND EFFECTS

DILIGENT, dynamic Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia has been in public—and publicity—conference with various union officials concerning a project to make work for technicians by bringing "the motion picture industry back home"—which appears to reduce to a notion that it would be nice to get about ten per cent of Hollywood's work done in New York.

A lot of statistics of sorts were tossed to the press on the subject at the weekend—none of them pertaining to any claim of benefit to the motion picture industry or its customers.

It is not indicated that the Mayor has taken the matter up with the motion picture business. It is to be remembered, however, that a few months ago the Board of Estimate of New York City was considering some special taxation calculated either to produce important revenues, or else bring production here.

If the city authorities are concerned with the building of local payrolls, there would appear to be magnificent opportunity among various industries which now tend to seek escape from rising taxations and rising union scales. Interesting data could be had pertaining to magazines now printed in Ohio, Pennsylvania, upper New York State, and Connecticut, once printed here.

No competent authority would dispute that many benefits would accrue from a movement that would bring the production center eastward and out of the chaos of problems which it has accumulated in Hollywood. Such a movement would, however, entail important costs, would require an overcoming of a certain inertia which has held production in Hollywood so many years past the day when it used California sunshine and open stages.

Probably the motion picture will not be leaving Hollywood. Certainly it will not be leaving Hollywood for any region where it would find promise of facing more problems and an intensification of present problems.

If the production center of the motion picture ever moves it will be somewhere where there is promise of peace without politics. That is not New York, just now.

IN his new and poignant opus, "Freedom and Culture", Dr. John Dewey, out of the fullness of his eighty years and abundant research, says: "What purports to be experiment in the social field . . . is rather a process of trial and error accompanied by some degree of hope and a great deal of talk." One might fancy that Dr. Dewey had been hearing about the trade practice code.

This Week in the News

Pistols for Two

WHEN AN EXHIBITOR pulls a hit picture one day short of its full engagement, that's news.

When a producer "bawls out" a customer in public, that's news.

When the producer is the spectacular Mr. Zanuck, the exhibitor the independent and long famed Si Fabian, and the picture "Drums Along the Mohawk," the matter becomes in the nature of exciting.

Mr. Fabian cut the run of "Drums" at the Proctor in Schenectady. Mr. Zanuck wrote a letter about how exhibition could cut its throat, and spoke of obligation of exhibition to support production in days of war-shrunken markets. Twentieth Century-Fox heard "officially" that Mr. Fabian was merely adjusting his opening day schedule.

Mr. Fabian also wrote a letter, which he did not give out. To the press he made pungently the observation:

"Mr. Zanuck makes pictures; we run our theatres."

Mr. Fabian has 29 houses from Port Jervis to Schenectady.

Exhibition and production; buyer and seller. Darryl and Si. (See page 14*)*

Mr. Zanuck had other things to say during the week on the subject of "Drums Along the Mohawk," hailing the radio dramatization of the production on Kate Smith's program as the "wedlock" of radio and films—another wedding of the much married pair. (See page 14)

War News Tangle

MINISTERS of Information, Directors of Propaganda, Censors Militaire and others of Europe's warring nations through whose fingers passes the red tape controlling press and picture matters of war coverage, have turned up some fresh headaches for the managements of America's newsreels.

In Germany, Paul Goebbels, director of propaganda, has cut off the supply of official Nazi war films to the United States newsreels, turning about-face from the flow of official pictures which they gave out freely during the first eight weeks of the war. As usual, Herr Goebbels gave no reason, and speculators in New York attributed the cut-off first to a stricter German censorship, then to a Nazi "mad-on" against the U. S. A. for enacting neutrality legislation that presumably would aid the Allies.

Behind the action, however, is the delay of the American newsreel managements in New York in answering the Nazi's quietly placed demand that each reel promise, in writing, not to use any of the official German newsreel releases in any way detrimental or derogatory to Hitler, his henchmen or the Nazi cause.

In both England and France, a unique war ruling finds Paramount and Twentieth Century-Fox providing their competitors—Pathe, Universal, MGM-Hearst "News of the Day"—with most of the British and French war films used by those three, without any reimbursement, and whether they like it or not, which they don't.

Newsreel war regulations in both countries stipulate that all footage shot must be turned over to the war censors, who, after deletions, provide all reels with an identical copy of the film that is permitted for public consumption. Paramount and Fox are the only two reels having established organizations in the two countries, a single cameraman representing each of the others. They contribute nearly all of the film required, and passed.

"Wild East" next

THE BIOGRAPHICAL TREND is still going and this week got as far as the Bowery, when it was announced that Paramount's producer-director Edward H. Griffith had acquired rights and title to Nick Lukat's story of Tom Noonan, famous missioner, once known as "The Bishop of Chinatown."

The story of Noonan is a tale of redemption from the underworld of New York, tong wars and the stuff of the old Sunday supplements in the days of Steve Brodie's saloon and John McGurk's "Suicide Hall." Noonan was an early radio hit, with 13 years on the air. He was first pictured for the screen in the early days of sound by Pathe News.

It will be a picture of the "wild east."

Hitler Department

BEN JUDELL'S "Hitler—Beast of Berlin" has been, under argument, retitled "Beasts of Berlin," at least so far as New York is concerned and was this week granted an exhibition license by the State Board. The picture was scheduled to open at the Globe theatre Saturday. The picture was also at last reports approved "as to content" by the Production Code Administration in Hollywood, but the revised title had not yet been given sanction. (See page 66)

"Hitler's Reign of Terror" by Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., is being reissued by Jewel Productions, Inc., who announce that it has been revised by Edwin C. Hill, commentator.

Art & Democracy

"THE MOTION PICTURE is the first of the arts to be controlled by the whole people, an art of democracy, as contrasted with the older classic arts which have taken their authority from princes, potentates, cults and the arrogances of scholarship," Terry Ramsaye told the air audience of WNEW station in New York this week, at the second anniversary broadcast of David Lowe's "Soundtrack" daily program on and about the screen and stage. Questioned on the air, Mr. Ramsaye urged that the issue of double bills was a problem between the individual exhibitor and his audience; that persons seeking to put "social messages" into films should hire a hall; and that stars are and ever will be of dominant importance, "because people are interested in people."

The Vogel Touch

"HOLLYWOOD SAGA" is a new book on yesterdays in the orange groves, done by William C. DeMille. A reviewer remarked the other day that, unlike his brother Cecil, William "seemed content to get along without spectacle and to depend for box office results on the quiet sincerity and humanness of his stories."

That seemed to remind A-Mike Vogel that once upon a time he was a Paramount "field observer" supposed to be contributing exploitation to production. The picture in process was "The Fawn," portrayed by Charles DeRoche in a g-string leaping ledges and hedges.

After a few days of leaping, A-Mike, a bit bored, remarked "Artistic, but what do we do for box office?"

"Not my concern, I'm just making the picture," returned DeMille. "But what would you suggest?" Just then the fawn came over the hedge again.

"A water jump," said Mike.

Why the Hell not?

ALONG ABOUT THE TIME that the motion picture industry decided to implement the Production Code with a Production Code Administration, it became almost painfully conscious of its circumspect virtue, and there were "rules" considerably beyond the code—among them a prohibition of the use of the words "Hell" and "Damn."

This week the tidings oozed out that the rule was off and to hell with it.

Probably, however, there will be an implied injunction, like that on screen drinking, "where essential to the story."

"Cut-Throats and Pals"

YOUNG JAMES ROOSEVELT made a speech in Chicago Monday last, urging the labelling of pictures "with a propaganda touch," and promising box office reward from the public for such candor.

Mr. Roosevelt's remarks were on the lecture forum of Sinai Temple. He urged that the primary purpose of the screen is entertainment, and declared it the most important purpose.

"I would like," said the speaker, "to advance the contention that pictures should be allowed to use the label 'propaganda' at such times as may be necessary. All goods sold should carry the right label."

Mr. Roosevelt urged motion picture audience acceptance research, better public relations, better labor relations, preparation for television, training of young people for the industry, and remarked upon cut-throat competition, considered the more remarkable because "the next day they are pals."

"There is still gold in the hills of Hollywood," Sam Goldwyn's vice-president observed, "but from now on it will have to be earned." In an interview after the lecture Mr. Roosevelt forecast an important development of the South American market at such time as a "home owned five-cent theatre" is established. He urged that prices must fit popular buying power there.

Blue Bird for Road

WHEN CHARLES E. McCARTHY returned from Hollywood this week it was announced that "The Blue Bird," which had been scheduled for release by Twentieth Century-Fox for Christmas week, had been withdrawn for "roadshow treatment."

Announcements for its presentation will follow a period of consideration in the home office, upon the return of Herman Wobber. As those who saw the famous Maeterlinck play of 1912 will recall, the piece is deep fantasy, but more laden with poignant emotion than most of what has been offered in this fantasy category on the screen of late. Indications are for a spectacular address to the market, with an awareness of the precedents of "Snow White" and "The Wizard of Oz," a consciousness of the whimsy attack of "Gulliver" and "Pinocchio."

Important significances, apart from this production, may be involved for "the growing-up career" of Shirley Temple, a subject of considerable current debate. It may be observed, meanwhile, that at the present state of MOTION PICTURE HERALD'S annual Moneymakers poll of showmen, still voting, little Miss Temple continues to enjoy high status with the men at the box office.

20th buys Biblical

A 20TH CENTURY-FOX announcement says: "Twentieth Century-Fox has purchased 'The Great Commandment,' a religious picture just finished by Cathedral Pictures Company and produced by John T. Coyle and the Rev. James Friedrich, an Episcopal minister. The picture has a biblical theme based on the Commandment, 'Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.' So impressed was Darryl Zanuck, production chief, with the production and the direction of Irving Pichel that he also signed Pichel to a long term contract. No date for the release of 'The Great Commandment' has been set yet."

Hollywood speculates that there will be a spectacular remake.

"Mr. Smith" is Alone

THERE BEING a deal of this and that and assorted bickerings about the political status of "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," Columbia's current Capra production, A. Montague, sales manager, has issued a special, studied and emphatic statement to the effect that it was being sold under individual contracts and that it will be screened in advance of selling for any exhibitor who wants to see it. (See page 30)

Publicity Threat

ANOTHER "labor threat" appeared on the producers' clouded horizon this week. The Screen Publicists Guild was to meet Wednesday night, in Hollywood, to decide whether to strike against its employers, saying the latter had refused to sign a contract which they had ratified. Deadline for the signature was 6 P. M. Wednesday; the strike meeting was to follow.

The Guild's executive committee on Tuesday rejected an unofficial request by the producers, for deferment of action.

Both the Newspaper Guild, affiliated with the CIO, and the A F of L are reported angling for the affiliation of the independent press agents' guild.

Still Wondering

THE BIG BROADCASTERS, wondering for weeks when Washington would lift the lid on restrictions against commercialization of television, wondered again this week when the Federal Communications Commission would act on recommendations, made Tuesday afternoon, by its three-man fact-finding committee, to allow advertising sponsorship of television programs.

Even though the recommendations provide only for limited commercialization, a sponsorship under which the telecasters would be required to earmark all monies accruing therefrom for experimentation only, the ledger-keepers of the telecasters began to see signs of the day when the lid would be lifted entirely and they might write entries on television operations in black ink. (See page 16.)

FIRST public exhibition of David Oliver Selznick's "Gone With the Wind" after its world premiere in Atlanta on Friday evening, December 15th, was set Wednesday by Loew's-MGM home office officials for December 19th at Broadway's Capitol and Astor theatres.

The Capitol, "home of Metro pictures," with a policy of continuous performances, will have a "Wind" screening every four hours and 38 minutes—the picture will run three hours, 38 minutes—at regular Capitol prices and there will be a one hour interlude between performances.

At the Astor, further down Broadway, at Longacre Square, "the home of Metro road shows," the picture will play two-a-day at roadshow prices, not the scale prevailing there in recent months.

Hollywood is still full of "Gone with the Wind," and this week was rolling about marvelling words at a report, basis undisclosed, that Mr. Selznick had declined an M-G-M offer of a "million over cost" for the picture, choosing rather a percentage. (Also see page 17)

C'EST LA GUERRE. Because of the war they're taking ship news pictures in Grand Central Station. The subject is Ruth Terry who, according to Walter Wanger publicity, "sings and dances in 'Send Another Coffin'." The opportunity for the caption was so good we couldn't resist using the picture.

DEBUT. This is Gloria Ann White, making her screen debut at one year in "The Cisco Kid and the Lady" with Cesar Romero who is reported to have accused her of "stealing every damn scene". Seeing her work in the Cisco picture, Mal St. Clair promptly enlisted her as a Jones Family member. She is the much admired daughter of the people who own a restaurant where our Hollywood staff eat—when they do. Interoffice memo: All right?

"GULLIVER" IN COLOR. Paramount will present its first feature length cartoon, produced by Max Fleischer, at a world premiere in Miami on December 17th and thereafter for national release during Christmas week. The voices of Princess Glory and Prince David, in the scene at right, are recorded by Jessica Dragonette and Lanny Ross. Below is a scene in Lilliputia, where Gulliver traveled.

REOPENING. Nathan Smith, president of the Walker Theatre Corporation; Jean Parker, and W. R. McNair, for many years an executive in the William Fox organization and now general manager of the Walker circuit, at lunch before the first performance at the newly refurbished Tivoli in San Francisco, once the west coast's leading opera house. The Walker company has opened the long dark house and is showing first-run pictures with elaborate stage shows.

"INCREDIBLE", SAYS ZANUCK WHEN FABIAN PULLS "DRUMS"—LETTERS!

Hot Words Flow as Producer Challenges Policy of Exhibitor with Hit Picture at Schenectady

Producer-exhibitor fireworks flared and flamed again this week. Darryl Zanuck let drive at Simon Harry Fabian, independent, over "Drums Along the Mohawk," pulled from the Fabian Proctor Theatre in Schenectady, at the end of its sixth day, instead of playing the seventh day and full week.

Mr. Zanuck issued a very open letter, about his hit picture, challenging Mr. Fabian's procedure with words like "short sighted," "no conceivable excuse," and "incredible."

Mr. Fabian made private reply to Mr. Zanuck, and gave a terse word to the press:

"We run our theatres; Mr. Zanuck makes pictures."

Supports Schenck Plea

Mr. Zanuck's letter appeared to be a specific, implementing, support of a plea made by Joseph M. Schenck in September urging theatres to extend playing time to "do their part in helping producers overcome the crisis caused by the loss of revenues from war-torn Europe."

At Twentieth Century-Fox in New York it was said that the reason given to their distribution department for the unexpected withdrawal of the film was Mr. Fabian's decision to cut short the week's booking in order to return the theatre to a former opening day schedule. He had at the time started his week's runs on Thursdays, but closed "Drums" Tuesday night, the sixth, to resume Wednesday openings.

A Twentieth Century-Fox official, however, thought that Mr. Fabian withdrew the picture from the Proctor house, where it was playing on a percentage basis of from 30 to 35 per cent, to move the film over to his subsequent-run Grand on the flat rental arrangement prevailing there.

Mr. Zanuck's broadside letter reached Mr. Fabian first and by surprise in the trade press. It seems it was addressed to him at Schenectady, whereas he offices in the Paramount Building in New York, home office for his 29 theatres between Port Jervis and Schenectady. He waited for the official mail copy and wrote a reply which was not made available to the papers.

Zanuck's Letter

Mr. Zanuck's letter, dated November 10, said:

Dear Mr. Fabian:

"It has just been called to my attention that you grossed $6,812 at your Proctor's Theatre in Schenectady and that you pulled the picture after the sixth day despite the fact that 'Drums Along the Mohawk' in six days grossed more than 'Hollywood Cavalcade,' 'Stanley and Livingstone,' 'The Rains Came,' and even more than 'Alexander's Ragtime Band,' which was the biggest grossing picture of last year from any company. More remarkable is the fact that 'Drums Along the Mohawk' grossed more in six days than 'Alexander's Ragtime Band' grossed in seven days.

"It is incredible to think any exhibitor possibly could be so short-sighted as to pull out a big picture when it is still making excellent money, thereby depriving his own theatres of additional revenue and consequently cutting the fair return to Hollywood. If 'Drums Along the Mohawk' had shown a tendency to peter out during its run there might have been some slight justification, but the fact remains that the six-day run did much more business than did the seven days on 'Alexander's Ragtime Band,' a picture that grossed over $3,000,000 in America alone.

Personal Appearances

"Mr. Fabian, do you realize that we at the studio cooperated with you in opening at your theatre in sending you personalities for your opening day engagement? Do you realize there is a war in Europe, and that we the producers and distributors face a tremendous loss in foreign revenue? Do you realize that already because of currency deflation and frozen currency in the foreign market, we have lost in Europe almost one-third of our year's gross and that there is no indication of what may come along these lines with each day some new government placing financial restrictions on us and forcing us to realize more and more that we must depend only on America for our revenue? Do you realize, Mr. Fabian, that the cost of producing moving pictures is double what it was eighteen months ago? Do you realize that labor today receives a higher percentage of payment on each individual production than do the stars themselves, and that cost of building material and equipment makes it impossible for us to produce a big picture subject at a reasonable price?

Producers' "Gambles"

"Mr. Fabian, if the exhibitors of America do not realize these very important matters and do not prepare to do their share in encouraging and aiding us of the studios, then it is going to be a sorry day for the exhibitors of America. If producers find that they cannot at least break even, then, naturally, they cannot be expected to take the fabulous financial gambles that we are forced to take today.

"If the rest of the American exhibitors

Zanuck Hails Radio-Film "Wedlock"; Owners Warn Stars: Get Off Air

Twentieth Century-Fox's test radio dramatization of "Drums Along the Mohawk", to determine the value of similar treatment regularly for outstanding productions at the time of their opening, has brought "a flood of congratulatory messages from radio and motion pictures" to Darryl Zanuck, Fox production head. In hailing the "wedlock" of radio and films, however, Mr. Zanuck declined to disclose the reactions of 500 exhibitors who had been invited to send collect wires to him expressing their opinions. The studio's explanation for withholding the contents was that Mr. Zanuck did not think it proper for him to disclose them.

This second "wedding" of radio and films—they were pronounced wedded four years ago by Merlin Hall Aylesworth, acting in behalf of RCA's NBC and RKO, which he represented at the time—caused Mr. Zanuck to conclude, "If motion pictures and radio work harmoniously together, outstanding results may be obtained beneficial to both."

The "test" was conducted Friday evening, November 3rd, on the Kate Smith program, when a dramatic presentation, running an hour, was woven around the Kate (Moon Over the Mountain) Smith program. Henry Fonda and Claudette Colbert were the principal weavers.

In the matter of film stars' radio appearances, the Independent Theatre Owners Association in New York on Wednesday issued its "last warning" to both players and producers to "get off the air". If they don't, said the ITOA, "appropriate action" will be taken. The nature of the action was not disclosed.

Citing 68 film-star appearances on the air during October, the ITOA on Wednesday changed its line of attack from the producers to the stars themselves, sending letters to scores, advising them that "the cumulative appearances of picture performers tend to decrease box-office receipts and dissipates the stars' own box-office standing; that the investments of theatre owners are imperiled and the complete removal of stars from radio is the only solution to the problem that is now of major importance in the industry."

"A declaration of intention" is demanded of the stars. Copies of the letters were sent to all exhibitor organization heads and to producers.

POINTS TO WAR EFFECT ON REVENUE

pull any picture when it is doing legitimately fine business, then, in my opinion, they will be cutting their own throats because the producers are eventually going to come to the realization that they will have to depend upon smaller, lower price pictures, as it is impossible to expect us to take the gamble without fullest cooperation from every exhibitor and theatre manager in the nation.

"Mr. Fabian, there is no conceivable excuse for your action, and I am writing you this open letter in the hope that it will awaken response from exhibitors so that moving pictures worthy of extended engagements will be given same and so that they will be permitted to earn for you and for us every dollar that they can in your territory so that a proper share of that money can be returned to Hollywood to be used to make other pictures just as fine and fitting as 'Drums Along the Mohawk.'

"Regards.

Sincerely,
(signed) Darryl F. Zanuck

Mr. Fabian
Proctor's Theatre
Schenectady, New York"

In 50 key cities, says Twentieth Century-Fox, "Drums Along the Mohawk" is doing as much business as did "Jesse James," "Stanley and Livingstone" and "The Rains Came"; in 14 cities, the film drew even better than the three mentioned. In the Uptown theatre, Kansas City, the intake was comparatively, 138 per cent; in Loew's Poli, Hartford, 129 per cent; in the Hippodrome, Cleveland, 108 per cent.

Attendance at the Roxy theatre, New York City, totaled 86,272 for the first four days; the attendance for the first week was over 130,000. In Utica the receipts exceeded those for "Alexander's Ragtime Band" by $500; in Amsterdam by $1,500; in Gloversville by $125; in Schenectady by $400. In six days at the Fabian Proctor's, Albany, the picture did $6,812 compared with the $6,495 for "Alexander's Ragtime Band" for seven days.

The picture has had 45 day and date engagements throughout the country.

Mullin and Pinanski Buy Joelson Circuit

The M. & P. Theatres Corporation (Martin Mullin and Sam Pinanski) have bought the Joelson Circuit, operated by Julius Joelson. Included in the circuit are five theatres: the Capitol, Arlington, Mass.; Ball Square and Central, Somerville, a Boston suburb; Park, Taunton, Mass., and the Elizabeth, Falmouth, on Cape Cod.

Mr. Joelson, connected with theatre business in New England for the past 12 years, is retiring. He said that having surveyed the field he elected to transfer the operation of the circuit to M. & P. Theatres "whose record in New England for many years guarantees that it will give the type of theatre management best calculated to serve the interests and needs of the community."

BRANDT ALSO TO STUDY EXHIBITION

Harry Brandt, president of the New York Independent Theatre Owners Association, who leaves New York Monday on a previously announced trip to study the product situation in Hollywood, decided Wednesday also to look into exhibition problems en route.

He will talk with exhibitor leaders in Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago, Minneapolis, Des Moines, Omaha, Denver, Salt Lake City, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Dallas and New Orleans in an attempt to consolidate viewpoints on such matters as government suits, trade practice code, picture stars on the air, stars who have outlived their usefulness, and other matters. Mr. Brandt may be back in New York by Christmas.

Two Cities Cut Admission Scale

St. Louis and Milwaukee first-run theatres are using a below-normal admission scale. The prices have been cut in four St. Louis first-runs and there is a parallel trend in the Milwaukee territory, where summer low-price scales have been maintained.

The St. Louis theatres have cut their weekday night prices 15c, and the top price is 40c, the lowest for first-run theatres in recent years. The Fox, Missouri and Ambassador theatres, operated by Fanchon & Marco, and the Loew's State are affected by the reduction. The reduction was made after the Esquire, deluxe second-run neighborhood house opened with a 35c top.

In Milwaukee first-runs have kept the 25c scale. About 25 subsequent-runs, with 40,000 seats, are charging 10c at least once a week. Warner Brothers has announced family bargain days, Wednesday and Thursday, at the Venetian in Racine and the Sheboygan in Sheboygan, at 15 and 25c. At the Majestic in Sheboygan 10c is charged on Tuesdays and Wednesdays.

The only increase in admission scale in the territory is at E. J. Weisfeldt's Riverside, where the top has been raised from 30c to 35c.

The Circle theatre, San Francisco, is being remodelled to show newsreels exclusively and will operate under the new policy by Christmas, according to manager D. B. Levin. The theatre, operated by the Aaron Goldberg Circuit, is located in the downtown area. The step was taken following the unusual success of San Francisco's first newsreel theatre, the Telenews, operated by the Pacific Newsreel Company.

2-Way Holiday Puzzles Exhibitor

Cincinnati exhibitors are finding themselves on the borderline and in the thick of Thanksgiving conflict, both at the same time. Ohio will observe November 23rd but Kentucky, immediately across the river from Cincinnati—and thousands of Kentuckians work in Cincinnati—will observe the traditional last Thursday in November. In Cincinnati regular programs and prices will prevail on the 30th. So, too, most of Indiana will observe the 23rd but Ohio River towns near Louisville plan to celebrate on the 30th.

Elsewhere Thanksgiving observance will be about evenly divided. In New York City all houses will observe the November 23rd date only and the New England States the 30th.

Colorado also is reporting date trouble. The merchants requested the 23rd but the governor proclaimed the 30th, and it is expected that city, state and government offices will be closed both days. The schools will be closed November 23-24, remaining in session November 30th. Denver retail stores will observe the 23rd only.

Nearly all Boston will celebrate Thanksgiving on the 30th. Theatres plan to follow the state's lead in this, and although no plans have as yet been set as to special observance, all declare the 30th will be the day.

Theatres in Alabama will observe the 30th and will ignore the earlier date.

Both the 23rd and 30th will be observed in many Texas cities where exhibitors have made plans for special programs.

Towns in Pennsylvania Vote for Sunday Films

Of 14 municipal sub-divisions of Pennsylvania voting on "blue law" referenda Election Day only the borough of Forty-Fort and the borough of New Philadelphia defeated the proposal to permit Sunday motion pictures.

Five boroughs in Tioga County approved the proposal. They are Blossburg, Elkland, Mansfield, Wellsboro and Westfield. Other communities approving the Sunday film issue included Freedom and Koppel boroughs, Beaver County; Mt. Penn and West Reading boroughs, Berks County; Bristol township, Bucks County; Coalport borough, Clearfield County, and Bigler township, Clearfield County.

The Guilford theatre, Guilford, Conn., will have Sunday afternoon films, Leo Schapiro, operator of the theatre, announced this week, following action of the town's authorities to lift the "blue law."

W. M. Karrh, owner of the Dixie theatre, Swainsboro, Ga., and C. M. Bridges, manager, have been indicted by the Emanuel County grand jury on charges of showing films on Sunday. The case will be heard in January.

TELEVISION COMMITTEE OF THE FCC FAVORS LIMITED COMMERCIALIZATION

Favors Greater Participation and Easier Financial Paths but Warns Against Unswaddling Too Soon

Television, described last May by the Federal Communication Commission's three-man television committee to be "barely emerging from the first or technical research stage," this week was viewed by the same Committee as still in the second or "experimental operation" phase and at a "crucial" point.

To aid the infant industry through its teething period, the subcommittee on Wednesday made a number of recommendations to the main FCC committee designed to bring about greater public participation in experimental operation, encourage the construction of additional stations by properly qualified applicants and make easier the financial path of those who embark upon transmission operations.

Would Moderate Ban

It was suggested that the Commission moderate its prohibition against commercialism to permit sponsorship of experimental programs provided the funds therefrom were to be expended on experimental operations. Complete commercialization, it is held, is not feasible yet.

Although no date has been set by the FCC for announcing its decision on its committee's recommendations, action is expected soon.

There have been many prayerful pressures by broadcasters for a Federal Communications Commission amendment of present experimental licenses to permit commercial sponsorships as in sound-radio, as reported last week in MOTION PICTURE HERALD (page 23). The Federal Communications Commission, it was said, has been debating how soon television should be given the "go" signal, commercially. Numerous factors were said to be involved, broadcasters generally believing that commercial licensing would give television the impetus it has been needing and would provide some revenue for further experimentation and for program development.

Commercial licensing would permit sponsored programs, which in turn would help defray the heavy cost of the present program service, broadcasters say, and this would also help the relationship of television to the film industry as the broadcasters then would be in a position to pay somewhat more for film program material than they now can afford.

Second Report

The views and recommendations of the FCC committee were made Wednesday in a "second" report, an addition to its initial report of May 22nd, last, prompted by the improvements which have since taken place and the numerous applications for increased television facilities.

Since its first report, it was pointed out, "electronic systems have been developed for the transmission and reception of television to such a degree that these systems justify public trial."

The critical situation in which television finds itself today, the FCC's television committee now says, is due to: (1) Lack of facilities on a nationwide scale; (2) Lack of program service, both in quality and quantity, in any community; (3) Hesitation of the public to purchase costly receivers at an early stage of technical development; and (4) Lack of sufficient information upon which to base a logical licensing policy.

TELEVISING OLD FILMS A LEGAL COMPLICATION

Legal complications are preventing NBC from televising old silent motion pictures. Television officials have been using independent and foreign made film because the major companies refuse to provide any product which might build competition for theatres. It was felt that good silent pictures would make excellent program material for television.

However, in attempting to purchase films made before 1930, legal difficulty is encountered because film rights were granted for stories and music but no provision was made for television rights. Although the film itself is televised, NBC attorneys feel a legal question is present and do not wish to occasion a lawsuit on this point. A further difficulty is presented by the fact that some of the companies that owned rights to these silent films have been dissolved and the rights to other silent pictures are owned by major companies that are not cooperating with television.

"In spite of these discouraging factors, the Committee is of the conviction that, while the public has not been eager to purchase receivers at this time, the public does not desire to be deprived of the opportunity to enjoy the benefits of television when it is ready for public service," the Commission was told.

Program Cost Factor

Another important element, the report continued, is the cost of producing programs which will sustain the general interest.

"In spite of the convenience afforded by television in the home, it cannot be assumed safely that the public would be entirely satisfied with a quality of television program service inferior to that secured from competitive media, such as motion pictures, particularly the news reels," the committee commented.

Yet, it was added, the cost of the average motion picture production approximates $300,000, and the approximate cost of rendering television programs in New York City for one week on a 12-hour per week basis is $15,000. "Thus, if television is to become a real service to the public, the licensees must be adequately financed and be assured of an adequate revenue from the service rendered," it was pointed out.

"Not only must this huge cost be shared by several licensees, but also many stations interconnected in a program distribution system appear at this time to be necessary before adequate program service to the public is possible."

Fears Scramble for Channels

Both wholesale distribution of receivers and the lifting of the bar on commercial operation are opposed by the committee as potentially dangerous to the future progress of television. Sale of transmitters on a broad scale is opposed on the ground that buyers would not receive adequate program service; commercial operation, it was said, might lead to a scramble for television channels by unfitted applicants and otherwise retard "logical" progress. On the other hand, the committee pointed out, sponsorship might be permitted, "provided such sponsorship and the program facilities or funds contributed by sponsors are primarily for the purpose of experimental program development."

The report pointed out that while several groups of channels have been set aside for television work, most of the operations have been carried on in seven of the lower-frequency channels and comparatively little is known as to the adaptability of other channels for such service. Accordingly, it was suggested, there should be a division of those seven developed channels, with three assigned to stations in cities of more than 1,000,000 population, two for cities of between 500,000 and 1,000,000 and one for cities of smaller population, and that further experimental work be encouraged on the 12 higher frequency channels.

The committee report, approved by all three members—Commissioners T. A. M. Craven, chairman; Norman S. Case and Thad H. Brown—was divided into three parts. Since two sections dealt with applications and other pending matters which must be decided by the commission, only the one section, dealing with the subject objectively, was made public.

Warns of Moving Too Fast

Suggesting that the study of television be continued, the committee warned the commission against moving too fast in relieving the industry of its wraps although it strongly urged that the FCC keep abreast of development and be prepared to amend its regulations as rapidly as such action became advisable.

"There are pitfalls in giving television a 'green light' prematurely," the committee held. "For example, we are informed that there are many 'promoters' who are inexperienced in rendering any type of radio service to the public, but who are, nevertheless, planning to promote 'television' companies.

"While the commission should take no action which discourages pioneering by sound business enterprise, it also has its duty to the public. To permit a wild rush to erect stations throughout the country—many of which would have to be operated by individuals or groups without adequate experience or sound background and many without program facilities of good quality—would result in a disservice to the public and might possibly result in a retardation of good television service. It should be reiterated that only seven channels have been developed technically. This means that many applicants cannot be granted television station licenses without detriment to good service.

"It should be realized that television is not yet a completed service to the public. Consequently, television should not be expected to reach overnight the objectives which are necessary ultimately. It seems logical that a normal healthy growth is the more certain road to a sustained life of public service."

The committee concluded that since only the few experimental stations are broadcasting to not more than 1,000 receivers, there is no convincing argument that removing the ban on commercialization will affect the development of television.

All Warner "A" theatres in New Haven, Hartford, Bridgeport, Springfield and Worcester have changed from Wednesday to Friday for the opening day of each week's new program.

RADIO, PARAMOUNT, MONOGRAM ARRANGE FOR FANFARE PREMIERES

Four Bands in Parade at Rocky Mount, N. C., for Kay Kyser; Holiday Specials and Test Shows Set

Fanfare premieres in the field are fast becoming the normal method of firing the opening gun to introduce new pictures. Last week's field ballyhoos for "Drums along the Mohawk" and "Allegheny Uprising" were followed this week by similar treatment given Kay Kyser's "That's Right, You're Wrong," and by Paramount's decision to launch "Gulliver's Travels," "The Great Victor Herbert" and "Geronimo" with special attention during the holidays.

Monogram pictures also are being given "world premieres" in the field, the company's "Gentleman from Arizona" bowing in at Phoenix, Ariz., on November 22nd.

Parade Launches Kay Kyser Film

The celebration in connection with the world's premiere of Kay Kyser's first motion picture, "That's Right, You're Wrong," at both the Carolina and Center theatres in Rocky Mount, N. C., began early the afternoon of November 15th, with a parade, including four bands, with 500 pieces reported. In the line of march were Governor Clyde R. Hoey of North Carolina, Turner W. Battle, assistant secretary of labor, seven state supreme court justices and congressmen.

The streets were decorated with "Welcome Kay Kyser," a home town tribute to the band leader. The dance jamboree in the Planters Warehouse was attended by up to 14,000.

RKO-Radio executives present included President George J. Schaefer, Ned E. Depinet, S. Barret McCormick, Cresson E. Smith and Ken Hallam.

Manager Hal Orr of the Center theatre and executives of the Wilby-Kincey Circuit arranged for city managers to assist in greeting and seating the audience at the premiere.

The local Evening Telegram printed a special edition Wednesday and station WEED covered the celebration, while 165 stations of both NBC's networks picked up Kay Kyser's regular Lucky Strike program broadcast from the theatre. At midnight WJZ in New York and a coast to coast blue network carried the program from the tobacco warehouse. Lucky Strike distributed 30,000 packages of cigarets.

Three Premieres Planned by Paramount

Neil Agnew, vice-president in charge of Paramount sales, announced that the three holiday specials, "Gulliver's Travels," "The Great Victor Herbert" and "Geronimo," would be launched with special premieres.

The first will be for "Geronimo," a double opening on November 24th at both the Orpheum theatre in Phoenix and the State theatre in Tucson.

The world's premiere of "Gulliver's Travels" will take place at Miami, where the picture was produced, on December 17th. This opening is timed to attract visiting newspapermen and exhibitors. The picture starts at the New York Paramount December 20th.

Plans for the opening of "The Great Victor Herbert" are still in the formative state. The picture may be introduced at Weatherford, Texas, home town of Mary Martin, Paramount's singing star who makes her screen debut in this picture. A radio program featuring Miss Martin and Allan Jones is planned.

SPECIAL PREMIERES FOR SHORTS, TOO

Even short subjects are having "big ballyhoo world premieres" in the field, for word arrived this week from Seattle that preparations are underway for the world premiere of three Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer FitzPatrick Traveltalks at the Fifth Avenue theatre there.

All three will be shown on the same program, with personal appearances and talks by Governor Clarence D. Martin, Mayor Arthur Langlie and other state and city leaders. The subjects are "Seattle, Gateway to the Pacific Northwest", "Natural Wonders of Washington State" and "Glimpses of Washington State". All are in color and were filmed in the territory last summer.

Paramount has arranged test engagements for "Our Neighbors—the Carters," featuring Fay Bainter, Frank Craven, Edmund Lowe and Genevieve Tobin. The picture will play in Los Angeles, Fort Worth and Providence prior to the national release date. In each city all the families named Carter will be enlisted. In Fort Worth, the Carters will be headed by Publisher Amon Carter of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

Lou Diamond, head of Famous Music Corporation, announced that the greatest number of recordings ever made on a motion picture have been made on "Gulliver's Travels," sixty separate recordings.

The first of several hundred advertising and exploitation tieups promoted by Paramount for "Gulliver's Travels" was announced by the Hazel-Atlas Company, Wheeling, W. Va., making tumblers and glass containers.

Exhibitors, Newspaper Men Watch Work on "Biscuit Eater"

Exhibitors and newspapermen from all over the South were guests of Paramount at Albany, Ga., where they watched a unit on location filming the Billy Lee starring picture, "The Biscuit Eater" last Thursday.

Film exhibitors from ten southern states were invited by Y. Frank Freeman, Jr. Jack Moss produced the film. The Albany Herald handled the invitations to southern newspaper men. Eight syndicate writers flew down from New York City to cover the affair.

After watching a day's camera work the visitors were entertained at a southern barbecue.

U. S. Senator Walter F. George, Governor E. D. Rivers and 100 southern exhibitors accepted invitations.

Monogram Has "Field Day", Too

"The Gentleman from Arizona" will have a special world's premiere at Phoenix on November 22nd. W. Ray Johnston, president of Monogram, Eddie Golden, vice-president and a number of Monogram stars will attend. Ted Richmond will represent the Golden West Productions.

"Gone with the Wind" Opening Arrangements

On the night of December 14th there will be a Junior League ball. Clark Gable and Vivien Leigh will fly to Atlanta for the ball and premiere.

Following the opening the picture will play at the Atlanta theatre twice daily on a reserved seat basis. The film's running time is three hours and 40 minutes.

"Gone With the Wind" may be the Christmas week attraction at the Capitol in New York where it would begin an extended run.

Organize Anti-ASCAP Group in Wisconsin

The Tavern Music Protective Association of Wisconsin has been organized in Milwaukee for the purpose of bringing action against the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers for alleged discriminatory and illegal fee assessments. Volmer Dahlstrand, president of the Milwaukee Musicians' Association, has been named to the board of directors of the newly formed association.

The association plans to contest cases under Wisconsin statutes and also will attempt to have the national copyright law amended to outlaw the minimum $250 fine for infringement violations.

B & K Club Elects

The Balaban & Katz Employes Club in Chicago elected the following officers: President, A. M. Eisner, Pantheon theatre; first vice-president in charge of welfare, W. T. Methe, Tower theatre; second vice-president in charge of entertainment, Charles Cottle, Marbo theatre; vice-president in charge of athletics, Hugh McGinnis, State theatre; treasurer, Joseph Kearns, home office and secretary, Melvin Rainey. The new directors are: Al Waldman, Chicago theatre; A. L. Leonard, Cornet theatre, Evanston; James Ellis, Crystal theatre; Roland Schwartz, Tivoli theatre and Dean Jones, Paradise theatre. Roy McMullen, Granada theatre, is the retiring president.

Two New Law Partnerships

A. Ronald Button, Herbert T. Silverberg and J. G. Moser have formed a partnership for the general practice of law at 6331 Hollywood Boulevard, Hollywood. Another firm was formed by Milton Diamond, Benjamin J. Rabin, Bernard Botein, David Mackay and Samuel Yamin at 598 Madison Avenue, New York.

John H. Tobin, motion picture and radio commentator, has been signed by the new Telenews Theatre in San Francisco to be regular commentator for its newsreels.

STOP LEAKAGE OF UNFAIR 16 mm. FILM SHOWS, EXHIBITORS DEMAND

Reports of Increased Activity Draw Fire of Organized Exhibition and Appeal That Distributors Protect Them

Many exhibitors, especially those in rural areas, who have complained of a decline of patronage when 16 mm itinerant show operators have invaded their situations, are wondering why it has been allowed to grow apparently without strong opposition, and, especially, why there is now a noticeable increase in activity in this form of competition. Ten thousand operators are reported to be regularly exhibiting 16 mm product.

Organizations Complain

Some exhibitor organizations, in official complaint, have attributed the tremendous growth of 16 mm exhibition to "bootlegging" of 35 mm prints, their reduction to 16 mm and exhibition by questionable operators. Others have attributed the new competition to the producers' laxity.

Demanding that the industry "Stop this leak," national Allied States Association, in a bulletin from its Washington headquarters, last week declared:

"From many parts of the country, particularly from Indiana, Wisconsin and Michigan come reports of increased activity in the public exhibition of 16 mm film. Don Rossiter, executive secretary of the Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana, has done a fine job of investigating this abuse. The facts have been communicated to the major distributors. There is no doubt about the prevalence of this nuisance or the gravity of its menace to established motion picture theatres. No distributor in his right mind would knowingly allow his productions to be transposed to 16 mm and released for public exhibition. Either these films are being shown in violation of copyright restrictions or certain distributors have been grossly negligent in the wording of their contracts.

"It is urged that every company examine the contracts under which it has permitted copyrighted pictures to get out in 16 mm form. If they permit public exhibitions, care should be taken that no further contracts of that kind are made. If they do not license public exhibitions, then let the Copyright Protection Bureau get after the infringers."

Authorized by Several Companies

From reports, however, the socalled "bootlegged" 35 and 16 mm prints are not so great competition to the showman as the "legitimatized" product, authorized in situations by the three large companies which allow their product to be transcribed into 16 mm: RKO, Paramount, and Universal.

Catalogs from the large commercial distributors of 16 mm features, such as Walter O. Gutlohn, Kodascope, Bell and Howell, and the Motion Picture Bureau of the National YMCA, disclose that features as recent as "The Plainsman," "The Texas Ranger," "The General Died at Dawn," "The Big Broadcast of 1938," "Magnificent Obsession," "My Man Godfrey," and "Diamond Jim" are available to the 16 mm projectionists. The screening of these is approved by the majors' sales departments, under their contracts with 16 mm libraries. These contracts provide that each booking by an operator from the library must be approved by the producer whose feature is being shown.

This approval is given for 16 mm showings in non-competitive situations, but exhibitors say that the wide use of cars in rural districts renders even an allocation ten miles away competitive.

INDIANA ALLIED ASKS COMPANIES TO ACT

"Stop the showing of your pictures in 16 mm. form, in any place but a private home," the Allied Theatre Owners of Indiana are asking the majors.

The request, embodied in an official resolution passed at the recent convention, and sent, in individual copy, to the sales executives of each company, calls the growth of 16 mm. shows "one of the greatest menaces to the theatre industry".

The growth of 16 mm projection had always been recognized as a natural corollary of the 35 mm art's growth. While 16 mm was limited to silence, while its fare was commercial, industrial, and scenic reels, while it could be shown only in non-theatrical forums, it was regarded as only slightly competitive to the 35 mm showman.

Then sound arrived. Sales of 16 mm cameras and projection machines increased, tremendously. The large 16 mm projection equipment companies, Eastman, Bell and Howell, and others, pushed these sales. Sound added to the horizon of 16 mm entertainment. There came mechanical improvements; greater steadiness, better lenses, greater lighting power—an increased "throw."

Hundreds of Libraries

There are now hundreds of 16 mm libraries, led in importance by the firms mentioned, and fringed by very small companies whose sole asset may be one man, a suitcase, and a can of film—but they sell that film, nevertheless, exhibitors pointed out.

There are over 10,000 exhibitors of 16 mm. These comprise the Y.M.C.A., of course, and recognized large or reputable operators. But the field is fringed, and also inhabited largely, by "shoe-string" operators, bound by no responsibilities, and able to operate if possessed merely of a rented, or bought machine, the money for transportation, and the money or sales ability to pay hall rental, and against these the exhibitors have raised their voice.

A 16 mm operator may lease films from a large 16 mm distributor of major product. In that case, he is bound to show the films in a situation "non-competitive" to the nearest theatre, the major examining the contract. However, a 16 mm show to a Civilian Conservation Corps group, or to a social group, or at a church even 15 miles away from the nearest town, still is decreasing that theatre's patronage, says the exhibitor. And the competition is not conducted on equal terms. The 16 mm operator charges lower admissions; he may sell his services and product to some organization which may run the show gratis; he may have some sort of percentage agreement. In any case, he is showing product as recent as last year's, at a lower admission charge—and, because last runs may receive product almost six months after issuance, he is showing product almost as attractive as that of his competitor who pays rent, taxes, and other overhead.

Then, also, the 16 mm operator may lease film from a smaller library. The smaller library bought or leased its films from independent producers or state rights exchanges—with no "non-competitive" restrictions. So, in this case, the 16 mm entrepeneur may exhibit his 16 mm wares, not 10 miles away from a theatre, but next door to it.

Of course, he does not obtain product as attractive, but he overcomes this handicap, to some extent, by his ability to operate himself, and by his ability to charge vastly lower admission, or to charge, under some devious arrangement, no admission. Sometimes the smaller libraries have major product four, five or six years old; product which was run to what the majors, regarded as the limit, and then state-righted, the state righters then marketing it, with new prints, through every channel, and especially, 16 mm.

The 16 mm operator may buy film, outright. All rights to many westerns and independent product having been relinquished by the producers or marketers, he may own a lively western and draw the working class and kiddie patronage, with product as exciting to them as a new film of a western star might be.

May Buy "Pirated" Film

The 16 mm operator may buy "pirated" prints. Thus, he may show 1938 or 1937 major product without observing, or knowing, the "non-competitive" restrictions the majors place on 16 mm. use of their product. When he is apprehended, the damage has been done; and the responsibility is not his, anyway; it is that of the person or laboratory from whom he bought the print.

The situation has been aggravated by the reported willingness of some of the 16 mm equipment films to back sales and use of their product so far that they resort to financially exaggerated promotion, such as loaning a 16 mm operator his equipment till he can pay for it, advancing him product till his screenings enable him to pay the rentals. Reports on 16 mm activity indicate the big 16 mm firms are absolutely and violently in favor of an increase in 16 mm showings, regardless of its invasion of the 35 mm entertainment field.

Observers familiar with the copyright situation say that, despite a certain percentage of "illegitimate" 16 mm operation, fully 90 per cent of the activity is "legitimate," and "nothing can be done about it, except to ask the three majors who issue 16 mm licenses, to stop encouraging an enemy of their customers."

Georgia Ruling Fails To Halt Sunday Shows

Despite a ruling by the Georgia court of appeals declaring Sunday films, baseball and other professional forms of amusement illegal under the state's old blue law, theatres in seven Georgia cities continue to operate on Sunday. Meanwhile Ellis Arnall, attorney general, said enforcement of the state ban on Sunday films would fall upon city and county police authorities.

The appellate court's decision was made in a case involving the Avondale theatre in suburban Avondale.

Warner District Office Moves to Wilmington

A. J. Vanni's Wilmington district office of Warner Brothers theatres has been moved from Philadelphia to Wilmington, to centralize supervision. Twenty-four theatres in Delaware and Pennsylvania and part of New Jersey are included.

IATSE STANDS PAT; RAISE PAY OR WE STRIKE, SAY OTHER AFL UNIONS

Leaders of All Other Federation Crafts in Production Except Painters and Actors Set Monday Deadline

BULLETIN

Union leaders representing all AFL crafts in film production except painters and actors served notice Wednesday night that a strike call would be issued at 2:30 P.M. Monday unless demands for a 10 per cent increase in wages were granted. IATSE leaders refused to rescind the increase they recently gained and supported the other demands.

Hollywood's studio labor assembled at 6:30 P. M. (E.S.T.) Wednesday and commenced to weigh the plea of producers to reduce wages, to help the studios meet losses which they claim are accruing from the international situation.

William Bioff's invitation to the studio creative guilds to sit down with his IATSE craft unions and the producers, at an all-industry conference, was rejected again guilds separately let it be known that they would cooperate with the Alliance for certain causes only, but wished to retain "freedom of action."

Extending Raise Demand

Mr. Bioff issued the invitations after a meeting, with the heads of the Alliance studio unions, at which it was decided that the Alliance not only would not give up the 10 per cent increase, but would work for a similar raise for all American Federation of Labor unions in the studios; and that it would favor a careful examination of salaries being paid top-flight stars, directors and executives.

The producers have scheduled a conference on December 6th, with all of the studio AFL unions.

There was a brief strike last Wednesday at the Selznick International Studios. Approximately 125 Alliance camera, sound, and makeup men walked off, protesting they had not been paid the increase.

Following a meeting between Henry Ginsberg, vice-president of Selznick International (since resigned); Frank Stickling, international representative of the IATSE; and Pat Casey, producers' labor contact, the strike was called off, pending a possible settlement this Wednesday. The men involved were said to have been paid above the standard IATSE scale, and the producers were accused by the union of contending that such men were not entitled to the increase.

Question Economies

"Spokesmen for the producers say that drastic economies must be effected, or the industry cannot survive," Mr. Stickling said. "We propose to find out whether these economies are to begin with the little fellows whose average income is $900 a year, or are both to begin at the top, where salaries are $100,000 a year, and up."

Meanwhile, the Screen Publicists Guild was threatening to strike unless the producers replied to a guild demand that they sign a wage and hour agreement ratified on August 23rd by all majors except Columbia.

Heads of the newsreels and Cameramen's Local 644 are conferring on clarification of an agreement reached in Hollywood last month for a ten per cent wage raise and elimination of "pooling" of resources while covering a story. The 10 per cent increase has not been effected yet; it is retroactive to September 1st.

The Screen Writers Guild last week elected Sheridan Gilbney president, Sidney Buchman vice-president, Boris Ingster treasurer, and Dwight Taylor secretary.

Ed Heim, an extra, filed suit in Hollywood superior court to compel the Screen Actors Guild to grant voting rights to Class B members.

Called to Washington

A sidelight of the present Congressional investigation into the National Labor Relations Board came this week when Walter Speckels, regional director in Hollywood, was ordered to appear in Washington before the investigation committee, on December 1st.

Charles V. Henkel, suspended from the Society of Motion Picture Film Editors, is suing that organization in Los Angeles superior court for $126,900, on grounds he was illegally suspended.

In New York, after two weeks of negotiation, an arbitration board Monday night awarded to New York City projectionists Local 306 a ten per cent wage increase and an additional week's vacation with pay, from members of the Independent Theatre Owners Association of New York City.

At a meeting of the ITOA in New York on Wednesday the members expressed "great dissatisfaction" with the decision of the arbitration board.

The arbitration was conducted under terms of a 1937-1947 contract which provides for periodical readjustments of wages and hours. On the arbitration board were Joseph Basson, president, and Charles Kielhurn, business agent, of the union; W. French Githens, of the Embassy Newsreel Theatres; David Weinstock, of the Normandie Theatre, and Dr. Paul Abelson, "neutral" arbitrator.

The increase gives a minimum approximately $5.20 a week additional to the lowest paid projectionist, the contract providing variation in pay of projectionists, according to individual theatre seating capacity, and now allows the projectionist two weeks vacation.

Empire State Merger Dropped

At the same time, it was reported that the proposed merger of the Local and the Empire State Motion Picture Operators Union had been dropped. The local, however, continues to seek a wage increase from the New York City circuits, through another arbitration board.

In St. Louis this Monday, Chauncey B. Nelson, personnel director of the Fanchon and Marco Service Corporation, testifying in the suit by that corporation and the St. Louis Amusement Company, to restrain the local Movie Operators Union from picketing the Fox Theatre and six neighborhood houses, said business had fallen 25 per cent at the Fox since the picketing began.

In New Haven it was announced that the film exchange employees union will hold a film ball at the Baybrook Inn on December 5th. Jerry Massimino is general chairman.

The New York State Labor Relations Board last week dismissed charges of unfair labor practices brought against the Aban Amusement Corporation, operators of the Manhattan theatre, by the Empire State Motion Picture Operators Union.

In Milwaukee, exhibitors and projectionists' Local 64 reached an agreement, extending their two-year contract.

Expect Exchange Staffs To Ask Higher Wages In New Union Pact

Representatives of the 32 locals of the Film Exchange Employees Union are expected to ask for a wage increase when negotiations begin soon in New York on a new contract to replace the present two-year agreement expiring November 30th.

Fifteen regional representatives will negotiate for the 32 locals, aided by an official of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees with which the exchange workers' union is affiliated.

There are approximately 3,000 members, 300 of them in the New York unit.

This week the locals were submitting suggestions for incorporation in the new agreement, to their regional delegates. These will adopt a "platform" of demands before meeting the distributors' representatives.

In the New York unit, elections will take place December 4th. Lou Johnson, the president, and Lew Braun, the vice-president, have been nominated for reelection. Mr. Johnson is head of the MGM exchange shipping department. Mr. Braun is with Paramount.

Other nominations are Dave Newman of Warners (incumbent) and William Lytle of RKO, for secretary-treasurer; Gerard Lee and Herman Berland of MGM, for recording and corresponding secretary, and August Kubart of MGM and Harry Bernstein of Warners, for sergeant-at-arms.

Loew's, Inc., American Telephone and Telegraph Company, Weco, Electrical Research Products, Inc., Western Electric of New York, Chase National Bank, Halsey Stuart & Company, Inc., and Clarence Dillon were named defendants Wednesday in a New York supreme court suit by Norman Wolf and Mannie Fuld, Loew's stockholders. Licensing contracts between AT&T and Loew's providing for leasing of sound equipment are attacked in the suit, which seeks a cancellation of the contracts, an accounting of profits and judgment for damages.

UA to Continue High Budgeting

United Artists, adopting a "bold" policy, will set production budgets for next year higher than ever before, Murray Silverstone, the company's chief executive, said Tuesday afternoon, after annual meetings of the stockholders and directors, in the New York home offices.

Officers Reelected

All officers of the company were re-elected. The stockholders elected Herbert Maass, New York lawyer, to the board as representative for Mary Pickford.

Before the meetings, reports that Samuel Goldwyn would leave United Artists were resurrected, this time mentioning RKO and Paramount as possible tieups for him. Mr. Goldwyn has pending a suit against the company to nullify his present contract providing for exclusive release of all his pictures through United Artists, and to reinstate an old contract allowing him to release elsewhere.

In Hollywood, Mr. Goldwyn refused to deny or confirm the reports.

Amplifying his announcement about expenditure of more money on next season's pictures, despite a decline in foreign revenues caused by the war, Mr. Silverstone declared the new policy was due to exhibitor "co-operation and aid" shown during the current season. The domestic gross is over $7,000,000 above last year's, Mr. Silverstone said.

Other pertinent UA data from Mr. Silverstone included the news that the Charles Chaplin picture will be completed and released this season; that the company will deliver 15 more films to the exhibitors before the season's close; that Alexander Korda will give the company three more pictures for this season, "The Lion Has Wings," "Thief of Bagdad" and "Over the Moon," the latter two having been booked into New York City's Radio City Music Hall for winter screenings.

Alexander Korda will not make pictures in Hollywood because his services are too necessary to the British Government, Mr. Silverstone believed.

Last week, upon his arrival in New York from Europe, Mr. Korda said that the war would not change his plans to produce his 1940-41 schedule for United Artists. He also said at the time that "The Lion Has Wings" was not a propaganda picture, as reported several times, and that it was not financed by the British Government. The picture stars Merle Oberon, his wife, and will be distributed in Canada as well as the United States, by United Artists.

Mr. Silverstone said he would leave New York for the coast, shortly, to start conferences on new plans with the producers.

At the stockholders' meeting were Mr. Silverstone; Emanuel Silverstone, representing Alexander Korda; Charles Schwartz, representing Charles Chaplin; Dennis F. O'Brien, for Douglas Fairbanks; James Mulvey, for Samuel Goldwyn; and Edward C. Raftery, for Mary Pickford.

Puppet Opera Company To Make National Tour

After playing to over 300,000 persons at the New York World's Fair, the Victor Puppet Opera troupe will begin a national tour with a four-week stay at the Midtown Hall in New York starting on November 20th. It is said that over 25,000 unsolicited letters prompted the tour. The troupe intends to bring grand opera "within the eye and pocket of the mass America public for the first time in miniature and recorded form."

Special History Display for "Elizabeth and Essex"

For several years now the motion picture has been making special approach to the potential patrons among the school age folks with such documents as the "Photoplay Studies." This week, with English history for a provocation, Warner Brothers have issued a special display for schools and libraries on "Elizabeth and Essex," covering facts, story and processes of production. The presentation includes display cards which can be made integral with lessons in history. Distribution has been made through the Hays office. The document carries a foreword by Carl E. Milliken. It is the first exploitation device to dissect a first rank on paper in popularized detail.

Columbia's London Chiefs In New York on New Plans

Irving Asher, Columbia production head in London, and Joseph Friedman, managing director of the company's London office, arrived this week in New York from Hollywood for home office conferences. The two had come from London to discuss future activities in England with Harry Cohn, Columbia president, and Jack Cohn, vice-president.

Until the wartime regulations affecting production and the restrictions on withdrawal of money from Great Britain are definitely determined, no final arrangements concerning the company's London production will be determined.

RKO has signed Edna Best for top roles in two undetermined pictures. The decision was made after studio executives had seen rushes of her work in the Towne and Baker "Swiss Family Robinson."

New York Ticket Code Revision Is Approved

The New York ticket code will be extended another year. Actors Equity approved in principle on November 14th the revised ticket code as worked out by a sub-committee and representatives of the League of New York Theatres. The present code has been extended until November 22nd by which time details of the revised agreement must be worked out by a special committee.

The independent arbitrator will be selected, as occasion demands, either by agreement of the parties concerned or from the American Arbitration Association lists.

Mussolini Prefaces Italian Film Almanac

"Every nation having a motion picture industry of its own must publish an almanac; it's a sign of vitality and enterprise," says Vittorio Mussolini, son of Il Duce, in his preface to the "Almanac of the Italian Motion Picture," the current issue of which is the first published in that country. Containing more than 300 pages of information on the Italian industry, this volume, issued under the auspices of "Cinema," Italy's leading trade magazine, presents a resumé of the laws and regulations governing the Italian motion picture industry; a pictorial gallery of stars, producers and technicians, and more than 2,000 biographies of personalities. Rosario Leone, Italian journalist, is editor.

"Mr. Smith" Sold Alone, Columbia Says Officially

In sequel to much trade and lay press discussion of "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," Columbia Picture Corporation's current Frank Capra production, an emphatic special, official and formal statement was issued this week by A. Montague, general sales manager. Mr. Montague sets forth that the picture is being sold under individual contracts, that it is to be shown in advance to any exhibitor who wants to screen it, that regular customers have first opportunity to buy.

Mr. Montague's statement said:

"There need be no misunderstanding as to how Frank Capra's picture, 'Mr. Smith Goes to Washington,' is sold by Columbia Pictures. Much propaganda has gone forth in an effort to convince members of Congress that the Neely Bill is a necessity because exhibitors have purchased this outstanding picture as a part of Columbia's program for 1939-'40. Frank Capra's 'Mr. Smith Goes to Washington' has been and is being sold as an individual picture, under an individual picture contract. It has been and is the desire of the distributor to show this picture in advance to any exhibitor in the United States who desires to see it.

"For the last three years all of Frank Capra's pictures have been sold separately and apart from the regular Columbia program.

"Our regular, established customers have, of course, had the first opportunity to negotiate for 'Mr. Smith Goes to Washington.' That is and always has been our policy.

"Many of our regular customers licensed this particular Capra picture at the time they contracted for our 1939-'40 program because in each instance these exhibitors insisted upon completing negotiations for 'Mr. Smith Goes to Washington,' clearly indicating that they wanted to be assured that they would get this particular feature.

"Thousands of exhibitors have already purchased this picture on separate contracts and there has not been a single request from any exhibitor in the United States to cancel or relieve him of his contract on 'Mr. Smith Goes to Washington.'

"Despite the fact that no such request has been presented, we are perfectly willing to discuss with any exhibitor who has contracted for the Capra picture any difficulty that has grown out of his having made such a contract. I want to stress, however, that this in no wise differs from our general policy. We are at all times willing to discuss with exhibitors particular situations where they have contracted for our pictures and where special circumstances arise that have to do with the playing of any particular picture."

Three Variety Clubs Elect New Officers

The Variety Club of Milwaukee has elected Oscar Olson, business manager of the local operators union to be chief barker. The other new officers are Frank Mantzke, assistant chief barker; Jack Frackman, treasurer, and B. J. Miller, secretary. In addition to the officers the following are directors: Frank Clark, Frank Fischer, H. J. Fitzgerald, George L. Levine, Jack Painter, Jack Silliman, Charles W. Trampe, former chief barker, E. J. Weisfeldt and Sam Shurman.

The Atlanta Variety Club, meeting at the Henry Grady Hotel, reelected its officers: William K. Jenkins, chief barker; Harry G. Ballance, assistant chief barker; Charles E. Kessnich, second assistant; R. B. Wilby, treasurer, and E. E. Whitaker, property manager. The board of directors, also reelected, includes John Ezell, W. A. Finney, Harold F. Wilkes, R. L. McCoy, Walter Anderson and Paul Wilson.

The St. Louis Variety Club has selected for chief barker Tony Matreci, manager of the Uptown theatre. Other new officers are Tom Williamson, owner of the New Movie theatre, first assistant; John Walsh, National Pictures, Inc., second assistant; Herbert Washburn, National Screen Service, property manager, and Harry Hynes, Universal Pictures, Inc., treasurer. The new executive committee members are Al Wolff, Nat Berger, Jack O'Brien, Fred Wehrenberg, Matt Schulter, Barney Rosenthal, Ray Colvin, Harold W. Evens, Ray Curran and Lou Ansell, retiring chief barker.

Plans are being formulated by the St. Louis Club for a boxing program. A midnight performance on the Golden Rod showboat will be held November 18th.

The Pittsburgh Variety Club has arranged a series of parties every Saturday night. Each local exchange has its opportunity to play host. United Artists take over the club's quarters November 11th; Republic November 18th, and Warner Bros. November 25th.

2,000 at Kansas City Ball

The Kansas City Variety Club's ninth annual film ball at the Pla-Mor was attended by more than 2,000. The ball netted $3,000. Earl E. Jameson was general chairman for the fourth year. He was assisted by Finton Jones and Norris Cresswell, co-chairmen.

The MGM Club of Detroit elected Marie Mielock, president; John Dembeck, vice-president; Mrs. Mildred Liles, secretary, and Bob Thompson was reelected treasurer. On November 17th the annual party for members and guests will be held at the club's office.

'Night of Stars' Benefit Held

Film executives and stars joined radio and stage Wednesday night at Madison Square Garden, New York, for the sixth annual "Night of Stars" show for refugee aid, sponsored by the United Palestine Appeal. The show was broadcast by Station WHN.

Stage Proposes Broadcast Tax For Charities

Saying that "if they don't want to spend 10 cents to see a radio show, let them spend a little more and help the box offices of the country," a plan has been advanced by Alan Correlli, New York head of the Theatre Authority, of the Broadway stage, under which all the charities maintained for the benefit of theatrical performers would be maintained through one central source.

The idea advanced by the head of the Theatre Authority, which is a clearing house conducted by the stage for "gratis" shows using people of the entertainment world, would consist of having those attending a radio broadcast make a payment in the neighborhood of 10 cents apiece to a centralized entertainment charity fund.

The idea is similar to the plan now used by the Seamen's Fund, whereby people visiting boats in New York harbors pay 10 cents, which is turned over to the Fund. The theatre plan would, of course, hinge upon the fulfillment of the "one big union" plan which has been hanging fire for some time past, but which, it is believed, is closer to being achieved than it has been at any prior stage.

Meanwhille, late last week a plan was put into effect whereby the Theatre Authority will require "standby" shows to supplement gratis entertainment playing for charity. Heretofore, the Authority has required only a percentage of the gross realized at charitable functions at which stars of radio, screen or stage perform, of 15 per cent of the first $15,000 and 10 per cent on all over that. This money, amounting to $125,000 in the past four and a half years, has been turned over to such theatrical charities as the Actors' Fund, the Motion Picture Relief Fund, the Authors' League of America Fund and the Stage Relief Fund.

Under the recently adopted plan, the cost of the standby shows will be deducted from the gross before the percentage is computed on shows of average size. On benefits which gross over $10,000, a flat fee is to be set by the Authority. About $100,000 a year is expected to be paid to the standby shows through this method.

Open Pylon Theatre in Toronto

Mrs. Joshua Smith and Theodore M. Sterling recently opened their new theatre, the Pylon, at College and Clinton street, Toronto.

R. Fawn Mitchell, former manager of Andre Debrie, Inc., of New York, and for 12 years head of the Bell & Howell technical service in Chicago, has been made manager of Precision Film Laboratories, owned by the Berndt-Maurer Corporation.

Nu-Art Films has acquired the exclusive 16 mm rights to a series of 12 Horoscopes, one for each month. These astrology shorts were produced by James A. FitzPatrick of the FitzPatrick Traveltalks.

Charles Daggett has joined the publicity department of Selznick International. The department is headed by Don Roberts.

PARAMOUNT, DU PONT FILM, PATHE REPORT PROFITS ON OPERATIONS

Columbia Broadcasting Nets $3,511,224; Eastman Kodak Declares $2,440,000 Wage Dividend for March 25th

Paramount this week estimated its earnings for the third quarter at $710,000 and its earnings for the nine months ended September 30th at $2,840,000, including $1,355,000 share of undistributed earnings of partially owned non-consolidated subsidiaries. Financial statements also were made this week by Du Pont Film Manufacturing Corporation, which showed a nine months net profit of $1,244,229.97; Pathe Film Corporation, reporting a net profit of $192,002.20 for the nine months, and Columbia Broadcasting System and subsidiary companies showing a net profit of $3,511,224.

Eastman Kodak declared a 1940 wage dividend for employees, amounting to approximately $2,440,000, payable March 25th, next. The distribution is the 28th since 1912, and brings the total so distributed to around $45,750,000.

Paramount Earnings

Paramount's earnings for the nine months period, which includes the company's share of undistributed earnings of theatre subsidiaries, amounting to $1,355,000 compares with a net of $1,876,469 for the first nine months of 1938, which included $1,660,000 of undistributed earnings of theatre subsidiaries and $245,000 profit on purchase of Paramount debentures.

The earnings for the third quarter are estimated by the company at $710,000, including $377,000 of undistributed earnings of Paramount theatre companies. Earnings for the third quarter last year were $650,658, including $495,000 of undistributed theatre earnings and $233,000 profit on purchase of Paramount debentures.

A company statment said: "The results of operations of all foreign subsidiary companies have been included at the current rates of exchange. In the case of the English and Canadian subsidiaries which have outstanding debt payable in local currencies in excess of the net current assets of such subsidiaries, the provision for the decline in dollar value of the net current assets of these companies has been offset against the amount of outstanding debt payable."

After deducting $300,268 of dividends accrued for the quarter on 144,672 shares of $100 par 6 per cent first preferred, and 555,071 shares of $10 par 6 per cent second preferred, the earnings for the period represent 17 cents per share on the 2,465,927 shares of common, compared with 14 cents per share for the third quarter last year.

The nine months earnings represent 79 cents per share on the common, compared with 40 cents per share for the corresponding nine months last year.

Du Pont Net Increases

The Du Pont report of a nine months net profit of $1,244,229.97 ending September 30th compared with $929,388.46 for the corresponding period of 1938. The stock of Du Pont Film Manufacturing Corporation is held 65 per cent by E. I. du Pont de Nemours and Company and 35 per cent by Pathe Film Corporation.

The company reports a net profit for the third quarter after all charges of $417,817.27, compared with $290,425.27 in the corresponding period in 1938.

COLLEGIANS BEGIN NEWSREEL SERIES

The filming of a newsreel of undergraduate life at City College of New York was started last week by members of the Film and Sprockets Society. The film, which is scheduled for completion by the end of the week, will be the first in a series of six sound pictures to be produced this year.

The purpose of the newsreels is to preserve a visual record of City College and its students through the years, George Kaplan, '40, president of the society, said.

Pathe Statement

The Pathe Film Corporation consolidated statement of profit and loss for the nine months ending September 30th showing a net profit of $192,002.20, after provision for all charges and federal income tax, compares with a net operating profit for the entire year of 1938 of $77,158. Pathe earnings from the 35 per cent of the outstanding Du Pont Film stock owned by the company amount to $435,000 for the first nine months, compared to $325,000 in 1938.

Eastman Dividend

The 1940 wage dividend for Eastman Kodak employees amounting to approximately $2,440,000 was taken coincident with the declaration of the regular quarter dividends of $1.50 each on Kodak's common and preferred shares. Both of these dividends will be paid January 2nd to stock of record December 5th.

Each employee who has completed five years service at the end of 1939, and who is with the company on March 25th, will receive a check for more than three times his average weekly wage during the five years from 1935 through 1939. Employees with the company more than six months in 1939 but less than five years will receive payments in proportion to length of service.

CBS Shows Gain

The Columbia Broadcasting System consolidated net operating profit of $3,511,224 for the first nine months of 1939, after all reductions, compares with $2,606,157 for the same period last year.

A cash dividend of 45 cents has been declared for Class A and Class B stock of $2.50 par value, payable on December 8th to stockholders of record on November 24th.

Net income from the sale of facilities, talent and wires, less time discounts and agency commissions, was $20,126,990 for the period, as compared with $17,082,915 last year.

The consolidated profit does not reflect operations of Columbia Recording Corporation.

United Amusement Dividend

Directors of United Amusement Corporation, Ltd., Montreal, have declared a dividend of 45 cents a share on the company's outstanding capital stock for the period ended October 31st,

Theatre Building Exceeds '38 Period

Theatre building and large scale remodeling have totaled $1,500,000 more in the first nine months of this year than in the same period of 1938 in the 37 states East of the Rockies. The summary by Dodge Reports shows that the favorable comparison is due to marked increases in theatre construction in the past three months.

The survey states that contracts valued at $17,992,000 have been awarded so far this year against $16,568,000 for the corresponding period of last year. 615 new theatre projects in the 37 states were reported in the period just ended. The floor area of the new projects totals 2,221,000 square feet. In the period in 1938 only 592 projects were listed.

According to the same report the peak of construction was reached in May when 97 projects valued at $3,383,000 were listed. January was the lowest month of the year for theatre construction with only 47 projects totaling $881,000. September shows a good improvement over last year: 68 projects valued at $1,712,000 this year and 47 at $1,266,000 in 1938.

Committee to Control Spanish Industry

The Spanish Government has ordered the establishment of a subcommittee within the Ministry of the Interior to exercise control of the film industry. The committee will be composed of representatives of laboratories, writers and actors, but producers and distributors will not be represented.

A high ranking official of the Ministry of Commerce, in a recent article in a semi-official Madrid newspaper, attacked a memorandum of the Film Board in which it was claimed that Spain is exporting 200,000,000 pesetas annually, or 50 per cent of the gross revenue of the country's film theatres. A protest followed from responsible bodies within the industry, standing by the figures as published in the memorandum.

Vinolas Gets MGM Position in Spain

Manuel Garcia Vinolas, head of the Spanish Motion Picture Service, has been appointed general secretary for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in Spain. The company plans an intensive drive in the Spanish market. In the week of November 20th all 130 theatres in Barcelona will show MGM pictures.

O'Donnell Joins Judell

Joseph O'Donnell has been made story editor for Producers Pictures Corporation's three production units at Prescott, Ariz. Eight pictures will be made there by each of the following: Bobby Clark, 13 year old, champion cowboy; Tim McCoy and George Houston.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Always Trouble

With the defeat of the "Ham and Eggs" plan, called by many a wedge which would have driven the industry out of California had it been adopted, production breathed a bit easier for a time this week, only to become downhearted again at the prospect of the widening of the theatre of European war to include the Netherlands and Belgium in the cast.

On the first upturn, the number of pictures shooting increased to 37 from last week's 32 and the 31 of the week before. Seven, the same number as in the week before, were finished, and 12 started, as against the preceding period's eight.

However, on the downbeat of war news, 13 were being prepared this week compared to the 21 of the week before, with 83 editing, one less than in the previous seven days.

Twentieth Century-Fox led with three completed: "The Blue Bird," "He Married His Wife" and "Charlie Chan in Panama." Warners and Columbia accounted for the remainder, with two each. Warners wound up "The Fighting 69th" and "Brother Rat and the Baby;" Columbia finished "Music in my Heart" and the as yet untitled Charles Starrett story which is third in the series.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer started four: "Congo Maisie," "Florian," "Young Tom Edison" and "New Moon," followed by RKO with "The Primrose Path" and "The Saint's Double Trouble." Columbia began work on the fourth Charles Starrett vehicle, Paramount on "At Good Old Siwash," Republic on "The Days of Jesse James," Hal Roach on "1,000,000 B. C.," Twentieth Century-Fox on "Young as You Feel" and Universal on "Honeymoon Deferred."

Paramount Builds

Drawings of plot plans proposed for Paramount's new studio, in West Los Angeles, have been submitted to department heads by T. Keith Glennan, studio operations manager.

Additionally, features of the plant have been made known by W. L. Pereira, architect in charge of planning the project. The total area in the new studio, including outdoor shooting areas, is 150 acres, compared with 26 acres in the present plant.

The planning includes a system of zone control, broken down into actual production; control, planning, scheduling and inspection, and service and fabrication.

Included in the first of the zones are wardrobe, make-up, dressing rooms and stages; while the departments included in the second zone are to be constructed on a plaza some 15 feet above street level, with parking space provided beneath the buildings.

Lure of the East

Southern California's aircraft industry would seem to be not alone in reaping business benefits from the European conflict—the romantically inclined apparently finding it cause for exploitation of the field so well popularized by the late Mata Hari.

Appearing in last Sunday's Los Angeles Times under an advertisement of a "Psychic Marvel" who "satisfies the critic, convinces the sceptic" was the following: "Two young women, world wide experience and sales ability, leaving December 15th for Japan, China, Straits Settlements, India, Africa, will transact any hazardous, unusual, or interesting business. Confidential." Maybe the girls would like to defend an anti-trust suit.

SO THAT NONE MAY BE MISLED

So that no reporter nor syndicated columnist may be misled by what he sees or thinks he sees, and in turn mislead his public, the Darryl F. Zanuck production of John Steinbeck's novel, "The Grapes of Wrath", is being filmed on a stage to which no one not actually concerned in the making of the picture is admitted. Nor are visitors admitted to the stages whereupon Charles Spencer Chaplin is producing "The Dictators".

Similar secrecy was maintained, it will be recalled, in the production of Warners' "Confessions of a Nazi Spy", the difference being that the Warner publicity department whipped up almost as much publicity by exploiting said secrecy as they might have obtained by inviting everybody in to watch the wheels go 'round.

Plans for "Grapes of Wrath" and "The Dictators" are that they will be completed to the satisfaction of their producers and flashed upon an uninformed and therefore presumably unprejudiced preview audience as is.

In Argentina

While the majors on the one hand were petitioning the United States Government for preferential treatment in a proposed reciprocial trade treaty with Argentina, the Government's Department of Commerce this week was reporting that approximately two-thirds of the films shown in Argentina during the first nine months of this year, were American.

The report originated with the American Trade Commissioner at Buenos Aires. The figures are given at 347 films exhibited during the period, 232 of them American.

Selznick Change

Daniel T. O'Shea will be elected vice-president of Selznick International at the next meeting of the board of directors. He will replace Henry Ginsberg, who resigned this week as vice-president and general manager to take effect at the end of the year. Mr. O'Shea has been serving as secretary of the Selznick Corporation. He was with RKO from 1930 to 1936.

David O. Selznick, president, and John Hay Whitney, board chairman, expressed regret over Mr. Ginsberg's resignation. Prior to joining Selznick Mr. Ginsberg was vice-president and general manager of the Hal Roach Studio.

Weekend reports that Mr. Ginsberg would affiliate with Pandro Berman, on his completion with RKO on December 1st, in independent production with possible release through United Artists proved groundless on inquiry. However it is known that Mr. Ginsberg is working on an independent production setup although no details are ready for disclosure now.

HOLLYWOOD NOT RUSHING BACK TO SUPPORT OF THE BROADWAY STAGE

Amendments to Basic Agreement Considered Improvement, But Film Companies Call Further Adjustments Advisable

There are no present indications that the major motion picture companies will give any extensive backing to Broadway plays this season, despite the new amendment to the Dramatists Guild Basic Agreement governing Hollywood's participation in play sponsorship (MOTION PICTURE HERALD, November 4th) which, as made known two weeks ago, was drawn up to restore film money to Broadway.

Cites Adjustments Needed

The amendments to the basic agreement are generally considered an improvement over the old system under which the play, though backed by a motion picture company, was put on the open market and picture rights sold to any company. The film company backer had only the privilege of first opportunity to buy at the price set by the author and Guild negotiator.

The new plan makes it possible for a film company to back a play and obtain the picture rights on a royalty basis. The run of the play determines the price. One of the chief objections to the system, according to film company men, is that motion picture rights to a hit might cost several hundred thousand dollars. Also, they said, the method of closing the play presents difficulties.

MGM Leads in Objections

MGM is leading the objectors to the new amendment. That company wished the closing arrangements changed and wanted an optional clause inserted that would make it possible for the film company to hand over all rights in the play to the author and producer after the play had run two weeks. Sydney Philips of MGM held that the provision of the agreement governing the suspension of production (Article V, Section 3a) is unworkable because the play might be kept running for a long time at a great loss. The formula for closing the play requires that the grosses for each of three succeeding weeks be less than operating expanses, and each week's gross lower than the preceding week's.

The regular basic agreement which requires that the picture rights be sold in an open market caused a virtual boycott by the motion picture companies. Few companies wished to back plays and risk having them sold to competitors. However, several plays have been backed right along under that system but many companies preferred to bid for picture rights after the particular play had been produced and proved itself suitable for motion pictures.

Has Option on Plans

The motion picture backer of a play has the option to choose whether he wishes to use the new or old plan, provided by the amendment and by the regular basic agreement respectively.

RKO had been considering backing stage plays, contingent on the adoption of a satisfactory amendment to the basic agreement. Then the war situation arose. Now the decision rests with George J. Schaefer, president, who has been out of town visiting the studio. Leda Bauer, eastern story editor of RKO, said the new agreement has advantages over the old but there are still matters that need adjustment, such as closing the play and an optional clause for withdrawing from the play in favor of the playwright and the producer.

LOBERO THEATRE MADE CALIFORNIA LANDMARK

The historic Old Lobero Theatre in Santa Barbara, Cal., has been set aside as an "historical landmark" by the State Department of Natural Resources.

The theatre opened in 1872 and is considered the first community theatre in the state.

A Columbia Pictures Corporation executive said, "At present the company's plans do not contemplate production of stage plays."

John Byram, eastern editor of Paramount, said that the company has no plays planned now. Difficulty in obtaining suitable manuscripts and other causes contributed to this decision, he said.

Mr. Byram held that plays could be backed successfully by film companies under the new amendment. However, he believed that a few points, especially relating to the clauses governing the closing of a play, should be adjusted.

Larney Goodkind, Universal's eastern story editor, said, "Universal is in the business of making pictures that will sell and not in backing stage plays. Universal has no present plans to back stage plays." He considered play production another business and called the open market buying of plays for pictures better than prior backing by a film company.

Warner Contracts Made

Barney Klawans, of Warner Brothers, declared nothing is planned this season under the new amendment to the basic agreement. Plans for this season already have been made. He said that the company had made several contracts under the old agreement and nothing will be done so late in the season under the new plan.

Jake Wilk, Warner eastern story editor, was out of town and could not attend the final conferences with the Dramatists Guild, although he played a principal part in carrying out the negotiations, in which Mr. Byram of Paramount and Mr. Philips of MGM also had shared.

John Wharton, theatrical attorney, began negotiations with the Guild over a year ago. The Guild Board rejected his proposal to change the basic agreement. This proposal has been called the Wharton-Wilk plan. Sought in the basic proposal was a method of buying film rights on a royalty basis. This is retained in the amendment. The optional clause permitting a motion picture company to drop its interest in the play after production had begun was voted on twice by the Guild Board and rejected both times.

Negotiations Launched

The Dramatists Guild held that only a minority of their members was interested in making any change in the basic agreement, but negotiations were willingly entered into with the motion picture companies. The Guild listened to the proposals offered and then drew up the amendment. Several of the film company men concerned, it was reported were surprised to find that some points in the final amendment were at variance with what had been understood by them at the last conference.

The Guild's position, according to Don Douglas, is that the author's rights must be protected in every way possible and nothing must be permitted that might close plays before their runs are finished. The Guild has adopted the amendment for a one year's trial, ending Dec. 31, 1940.

No great increase in play production is expected by the Guild as a result of the new plan. A 10% increase is given as the probable influence.

Points to Successful Season

William J. Fadiman, eastern story editor of MGM, pointed out that Broadway has been enjoying the best season in recent years with little Hollywood backing so far. Film companies will continue to back plays, Mr. Fadiman said, but he added the current Broadway stage is not a great source of motion picture stories when the total number of scenarios required each year is considered.

Joseph H. Moskowitz, New York representative of Twentieth Century-Fox studio and personal representative in New York for Joseph M. Schenck, had no comment to make on the amendment to the Dramatists' Guild basic agreement or the company's plans with respect to stage production.

The League of New York Theatres, legitimate stage producers' group, was to have voted Wednesday on the amendment to the Dramatists Guild Basic Agreement, but a quorum was not present and the vote has been postponed. The approval of the League amounts to a formal vote.

The amendment went into effect when it was adopted by the Dramatists Guild two weeks ago.

Minneapolis Council Delays Permit Actions

The city council of Minneapolis last week tabled four applications for theatre licenses after a spirited session. The applications were submitted by H. L. Griffiths, Irving Gilman, Rudy St. Anthony and W. R. Frank. Mr. Frank, head of Franklin Amusement Company, appeared at the meeting to oppose his own application. He said the application was made for his own protection against threatened competition of Mr. Gilman.

W. A. Steffes, head of Allied Theatres of the Northwest; Randy Merriman of the Minneapolis Theatre Company, and Ben Friedman and Frank Woskie, independent theatre operators, attended the hearing. They contended that Minneapolis is overseated and that the granting of new permits would cause closing of existing theatres.

McElhinney to Singapore

Joseph D. McElhinney, Twentieth Century-Fox salesman in Salt Lake City, will take over the Dutch East Indies branch of the company on January 1st. He succeeds Keith Goldsmith. Mr. McElhinney has been in New York receiving instructions from foreign manager, Walter J. Hutchinson.

Exhibitors Back Child Ban

Providence exhibitors are going to cooperate with the city solicitor's ruling that children under 10 should not be admitted to theatres unless accompanied by a person over 18.

EXHIBITORS BELITTLE CONCESSIONS; CONNECTICUT MPTO UNIT RESUMES

New Menace of Drastic Taxes on Admissions Is Rising, Says MPTOA; Virginia Group Will Meet January 18th

Trade practice concessions offered by several of the large distributors are merely "appeasement" and not a substantial solution of exhibition problems, delegates of the Eastern regional units of the National Allied States Association decided Monday, after meeting in the Philadelphia offices of the national Allied's Eastern Pennsylvania unit, the Allied Independent Theatre Owners of Eastern Pennsylvania. The meeting followed one last week in Pittsburgh, by the Allied Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Western Pennsylvania.

Allied Tuesday decided to hold eastern regionals henceforth every two months, the next to be held in Washington in January, when national directors will hold their annual session. Regionals heretofore have been held once a year.

The consensus at the Philadelphia meeting was that the companies are using the present concessions as a "sop" to defeat the Neely Bill and other trends which the Allied organization thinks will "cure" the motion picture industry of its present ills.

It was also remarked at the meeting that the present concessions have not been effective long enough to allow a just appraisal.

Attending were delegates from the Allied units in New England, the District of Columbia, Maryland, New Jersey, and Eastern and Western Pennsylvania.

Frank Lydon, of Boston, who presided, told the delegates that, despite the Allied concentration on legislation and litigation, local service to members must not be neglected.

Sidney Samuelson, of the Eastern Pennsylvania unit arranged the meeting.

The meeting in Pittsburgh, last week, of the Allied Western Pennsylvania unit, resulted in a protest resolution against local theatre licensing ratios.

MPTOA Warns of Taxation Problems

"In the midst of utter confusion, apparent disorganization and lack of direction of the motion picture industry," the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America on Tuesday urged exhibitors to "do a little serious thinking about what we are heading into."

In a bulletin emanating from MPTOA national headquarters in New York, over the signature of Edward L. Kuykendall, president, owners were warned of the new menace of drastic taxes on admissions, at rates "three to five times the rate of taxation on other retail sales." This is imminent in many states, and in Congress attempts are likely to be made to reduce ticket tax admissions from the present 40-cent level to 10 cents, declared the bulletin, which also reiterated the organization's opposition to the Neely bill to outlaw block selling.

The block booking issue will continue, however, as long as several of the distributors refuse to provide a fair right to cancellation, it was said.

"The most serious and urgent trade practice problems" requiring attention in distribution-exhibition, declares the MPTOA, are: Block booking, overbuying, clearance-and-zoning and double features, giveaway and premiums.

"There must be a limit to this stupidity somewhere. Sooner or later we will have to start to work out business and economic problems on our own initiative outside the courts and the legislatures if we are to survive."

"We have a hunch that impending developments will bring about a sharp change of attitude all of a sudden. When such a change does occur, and it becomes possible to go ahead

Majors and U. S. Resume Trust Talks; Delays, Dismissals of Other Actions

Attorneys for company defendants in the Government's New York anti-trust suit were again conferring in New York this week with Paul Williams of the Attorney General's staff, principally on matters pertaining to the preparation of the defendants' answers to the Government's comprehensive interrogatories.

The conference resulted in further agreement between the two sides on the exclusion of certain questions and the simplification of other parts of the Government's interrogatories "to lighten the burdens of the defendants in answering them."

An extension of time to November 30th for United Artists to serve and file answers to the interrogatories was granted by the federal court Wednesday. Government aids indicated that the same extension would be granted other defendants.

Issues in Oklahoma Case Studied at Conference

Issues in the injunction requested by Oklahoma Theatres, Inc., against distributors were scheduled to be set at a pre-trial conference in federal district court in Oklahoma City this week. The trial on merits was previously set for December 11th by Judge Murrah.

The application for an injunction asks the court to force distributors to sell Oklahoma Theatres, Inc., second and subsequent run product for its Odeon theatre at Shawnee, Okla. The application claims that each of the distributors named defendants have such product in their vaults that has not been contracted for in Shawnee, but which they have refused to sell to Oklahoma Theatres, Inc., which is headed by A. B. Momand.

Trial of Fried Trust Suit on December 11th

The anti-trust suit of Harry Fried, operator of three subsequent run theatres in Pennsylvania, against Stanley-Warner and seven majors is scheduled for hearing December 11th in the United States district court in Philadelphia.

Mr. Fried, who has the Suburban theatre, Ardmore; Anthony Wayne, Wayne, and the Seville, Bryn Mawr, charges unreasonable clearance and accuses the distributors of joining in an unlawful combination, agreement and conspiracy and said attempts to monopolize and to refuse to deliver any motion pictures to the plaintiff for exhibition except upon the restrictions fixed by the defendants.

Named in the suit, which was filed in September, 1938, are Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., Warner Brothers Circuit Management Corporation, Warner Brothers Theatres, Inc., Paramount, Vitaphone, Columbia, Loew's, RKO, Universal, United States and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

United Artists Asks Folly Suit Dismissal

The United Artists Corporation filed a notice of application in U. S. district court in New York this week, which will be heard Friday, for dismissal of the anti-trust suit of Folly Amusement Holding Corporation or in the alternative for a bill of particulars and additional time to serve an answer.

The suit, which seeks treble damages totalling $750,000 against the eight majors, Monogram Distributing Corporation, Republic Pictures Corporation and other defendants, claims that the plaintiff was compelled to close the doors of the Folly theatre in Brooklyn because of lack of product.

Postpone Fox West Coast Hearing to December 4th

The hearing on the motion, filed by the defendant companies, for a bill of particulars in the Department of Justice action against Fox West Coast and major distributors, scheduled for Monday in Los Angeles, was postponed to December 4th.

Grant Postponement In Westway Action

A final postponement of the Westway Theatre Company action against the Edgewood Theatre and seven major producing companies has been granted by W. Calvin Chesnut, federal judge, in Baltimore to allow attorneys for the defense to get depositions. This was agreed upon following a conference between attorneys and the judge, the hearing being postponed from November 15th to December 7th.

Nashville Hearing Delayed by Court

A hearing scheduled to be held in federal court in Nashville last Saturday on a motion for a bill of particulars filed by defendants in connection with the Government's anti-trust action against the Tony Sudekum circuit and major distributors was postponed to November 25th, due to the unavailability of a judge to hear arguments at that time.

again with effective self-regulation in distribution and exhibition, it will require organized cooperation and a real effort," declared the MPTOA bulletin.

Connecticut MPTO Revives; Arthur Lockwood, President

The Motion Picture Theatres Owners of Connecticut revived activity last week in New Haven, elected officers, and set meeting days.

Named officers were Arthur Lockwood, of the Strand, Winsted, Stuart, Lakeville, and Windsor theatres, Windsor, president; Irving C. Jacocks, Jr., of the Branford and Adolph G. Johnson, of the Strand, Hamden, vice-presidents; Al Robbins, Strand, Hamden, secretary; George Wilkinson, Wilkinson, Wallingford, treasurer; Herman Levy, executive secretary.

On the board of directors are Lou Anger, Harold Eskin, Hy Fine, B. E. Hoffman, William F. Hoyt, Mr. Robbins, Ralph Pasho, Harry F. Shaw, Joseph Quittner, Samuel Rosen, Max Tabackman, Mr. Wilkinson, Irving Wheeler, Mr. Lockwood, Mr. Jacocks, Mr. Johnson, and Samuel Weiss.

On the committee to revise the unit's bylaws are Mr. Hoffman, Mr. Johnson and others. On the budget committee are Messrs. Shaw, Rosen, Hoffman, Fine, Jacocks, and Tabackman.

Connecticut Allied Meeting This Week

The Allied of Connecticut held a luncheon meeting this Tuesday in New Haven. Albert M. Schumann presided.

Virginia MPTO Will Assemble January 18th

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Virginia will meet in the John Marshall Hotel, Richmond, on January 18th, according to the directors, who met at Richmond last week. The mid-winter convention will consider a proposal for a uniform building code for the state, Harold Wood, secretary, announced.

Charles Somma and Morton Thalheimer, both of Richmond, head the legislative committee as chairman and vice-chairman, respectively. A. Frank O'Brien, of Richmond, will serve as chairman of the convention committee, comprising Ellison Loth, of Waynesboro; Herman Rubin, of Petersburg; Hunter Perry, of Charlottesville; Allen Sparrow and Harold Wood, of Richmond.

Attending the board meeting were William F. Crockett, president; Benjamin T. Pitts, vice-president; Mr. Wood, secretary; Sam Bendheim, Jr., treasurer; William Rippard, Mr. Thalheimer, Mr. Sparrow, Mr. Somma, J. Frank Falls, A. Julian Brylawski, Mr. O'Brien, Mr. Loth, and Colonel Robert T. Barton.

Games and Transportation New York MPTO Subjects

Western zone directors of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New York discussed games and film deliveries this Monday, in Buffalo. Further talks on the delivery situation are expected next week.

Perlewitz Given Permanent Post

Harry Perlewitz, long active in Wisconsin independent theatre operation, last week was named permanently to acting secretaryship of the Independent Theatres Protective Association of Wisconsin and Upper Michigan.

FILM TALK HALTED BY HOPKINS' ILLNESS

The prolonged illness of Harry Hopkins, Secretary of Commerce, has halted the conferences of the department officials with film leaders from all branches of the industry. The discussions on industry problems began last spring.

Department officials are described as having reached the point where they can do nothing further on their own responsibility and the next move must be made by Secretary Hopkins. No more meetings of department officials, either with industry representatives or officials of other Government departments are in prospect. Moreover, due to his present condition, no action in the matter is anticipated from Secretary Hopkins soon.

Aboaf Sees No Film Shortage in Italy

Americo Aboaf, formerly Paramount manager in Italy and lately representing Universal interests there, arrived in New York from Rome last week, denying that he represented the ENIC, Italian Governmental film monopoly, in a move to reopen negotiations for American distribution in Italy.

Mr. Aboaf said that, to his knowledge, there was no change in the situation, and no shortage of pictures in Italian theatres. He said American pictures sent to Italy before the beginning of this year were still circulating.

American companies withdrew from the Italian film market at the first of the year, after their protests against the financial terms of the new Italian film agency, the ENIC, were unheeded.

MPPDA Presents Program For Music Organization

The members of the Musical Adventure Club of New York were to be guests of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America at a cavalcade of musical films on Friday. Arthur H. De Bra of the MPPDA was to present a commentary, "A Decade of Music in the Movies."

The cavalcade of musical films included the first talking motion picture, "The Jazz Singer," and traced the advance of screen-music up to the present day. "Viennese Nights," the first color motion picture, which starred Alexander Gray and Bernice Claire, was a feature. Mr. Gray sang.

Atlantic Coast SMPE Unit Meets; Election Underway

The Atlantic Coast section of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers met Wednesday at the Hotel Pennsylvania, New York. Two papers were presented: "The Polyrhetor—A 150-Channel Film Reproducer," by G. T. Stanton, S. R. Marion and D. V. Waters of Electrical Research Products, Inc., and "Eastman Kodak Automatic Slide Film Projectors at the World's Fair," by Fordyce Tuttle of the Eastman Kodak Company. Mr. Stanton presented the first paper which described the film reproducing equipment of the General Motors Exhibit at the World's Fair.

The election of officers of the Atlantic Coast section is now in progress, by mail. The following were nominated at the meeting of the Board of Managers November 2nd: P. J. Larsen, chairman; J. A. Maurer, secretary-treasurer and R. O. Strock, manager. Mr. H. Griffin has one more year to serve as manager. The officers whose term expires on December 31st, 1939, are D. E. Hyndman, chairman; G. Friedl, Jr., past-chairman; P. J. Larsen, secretary-treasurer and R. O. Stock, manager.

"Chips" Ends 26 Weeks; $275,000 Run at Astor

"Goodbye, Mr. Chips" 26-week run at the Astor theatre, New York, ended Saturday night. It is estimated that the picture grossed $275,000 during the run with the final week's figure about $5,500. During the run of "Goodbye, Mr. Chips" the Astor operated on a continuous run policy with a 55-cent top admission scale on weekdays and a 65-cent on weekends and holidays. The Astor seats 1,145.

"Mill on the Floss," English film, opened Tuesday at the Astor. The deal was made by Standard Pictures, the distributor and World Pictures, franchise holder in the New York territory with Loew's. The house policy will be the same as was in force for the "Chips" run. "Mill on the Floss" was produced in England under the direction of Tim Whelan from a story by John Drinkwater. This is one of the few motion pictures not made or released through MGM to play at the Astor theatre in several years.

"Information, Please" Is AMPA's Subject

"Information, Please" was the object of attention at the regular AMPA meeting Thursday. The radio program observed its first anniversary under sponsorship this week. John Kieran, sports editor of the New York Times, represented the "experts." Dan Golenpaul, originator and producer of the radio program, and Frederic Ullman, Jr., general manager of Pathe News and producer of the "Information, Please" short subjects, also were on the program.

Stanley-Warner de luxe first-run theatres in Philadelphia have returned to a 68 cent top admission price for Saturday nights.

IN THE CUTTING ROOM

Judge Hardy and Son

(MGM)

Hardy Family

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's Hardy family—Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone, Fay Holden and Cecilia Parker—reunite an old couple and their daughter, saving the couple's home, and live through a crisis revolving around Mrs. Hardy's case of pneumonia in "Judge Hardy and Son," in which the effervescent Mr. Rooney is his dynamic self.

George Seitz again had directorial charge of the family affairs, after having taken time out to direct "Thunder Afloat," while W. S. Van Dyke, II, took over "Andy Hardy Gets Spring Fever." This is the seventh of the series Mr. Seitz has directed.

Ann Rutherford, as Andy's best girl, is given some competition by June Preisser, Martha O'Driscoll and Margaret Early. The immigrant couple helped by the Judge are portrayed by Maria Ouspenskaya, seen in "Love Affair," and Egon Brecher, who appeared in "Nurse Edith Cavell."

Release date: Dec. 22, 1939.

The Narrow Path

(Republic)

Melodrama

Charles Bickford, seen recently in "Stand Up and Fight," and Owen Davis, Jr., who appeared in "These Glamour Girls" and "Touchdown Army," head the cast in this story of a city boy who gets embroiled in a killing in a small town.

Robert North was associate producer, as on "Penitentiary," while John Auer, who directed "Calling All Marines" and "Smuggled Cargo," handled that assignment here.

Release date: To be determined.

The Invisible Killer

(Producers Distributing Corp.)

Melodrama

A murder solved by a newspaper reporter is the essence of the tale told by "The Invisible Killer," featuring Grace Bradley and Roland Drew.

Swiss Family Robinson

(The Play's the Thing Prod. - RKO)

Regeneration of a Family

The first of the films made by Gene Towne and Graham Baker, functioning as "The Play's the Thing Productions," is a picturization of Johann Wyss' famous novel, "The Swiss Family Robinson."

Adapted from the novel by Towne and Baker, who have a certain repute for adventure of the madcap variety commonly defined as partaking of the essence of Hollywood, the screen play was written by Walter Ferris. Edward Ludwig, who directed "That Certain Age" and "The Last Gangster," was director here also.

Towne and Baker in their seven years of writing collaboration have provided such screen fare as "Eternally Yours," "Joy of Living," "Stand-In" and "Ali Baba Goes to Town."

The story of "Swiss Family Robinson" is basically that of a man seeking escape for himself and his family from the artificiality of existence in the London of the early 19th century. En route to Australia, a shipwreck forces them to a deserted island, where the four boys, as well as their mother, recapture strength and happiness in having to work out their own salvation.

As the wealthy Swiss watchmaker and his wife are Thomas Mitchell, who appeared in "Gone With the Wind," "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" and "Stage Coach," and Edna Best, who was in "Intermezzo." The four boys are played by Freddie Bartholomew, Tim Holt, Terry Kilburn and Bobby Quillan.

Release date: To be determined.

Yukon Flight

(Monogram)

Melodrama

With James Newhill in the "Renfrew of the Royal Mounted" role, "Yukon Flight" has the Mounted Police foil attempts to keep a girl from getting the gold from her mine. The effort involves an airplane fight and a deal of detective work.

Produced by Phil Krasne, the picture was directed by Ralph Staub, who handled "Western Jamboree" and "Prairie Moon." Edward Halperin was responsible for the screen play, suggested by the novel, "Renfrew Rides Again," by Laurie York Erskine.

The feminine lead is taken by Louise Stanley.

Release date: To be determined.

The Light of Western Stars

(Paramount-Sherman)

Western

Based on an original story by the late Zane Grey, "The Light of Western Stars" deals with a wealthy young woman whose forced marriage to a soldier of fortune is the instrument which saves the best characteristics of each.

Victor Jory, who appears in "Gone With the Wind," and Jo Ann Sayers are the principals in the picture produced by Harry Sherman.

Lesley Selander, who worked with Mr. Sherman on "Heritage of the Desert," "Silver on the Sage" and "Renegade Trail," directed from a screen play by Norman Houston, who wrote "In Old Caliente."

Release date: To be determined.

BRITISH THEATRE RECEIPTS ON WAY BACK TO NORMAL DESPITE BLACKOUTS

West End Most Affected by Limitations — Salesmen and Exhibitors Alike Note Return of Patrons to Picture Houses

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

From a box office point of view, and that is the first and last point of view after the more urgent considerations of patriotism, the process of adjustment upon which the wartime trade should stand or fall, would seem to have begun. Business at the British box office, for the first weeks of the war the lowest on record, has started very noticeably to improve, and hope has begun to wreathe around salesmen and exhibitors.

Receipts Returning to Normal

Despite the blackout, the greatest obstacle the trade has been called upon to overcome, figures at the Automaticket have gradually but definitely approached the normal. Oscar Deutsch, one of the leaders of the British theatre business, has recorded to his shareholders, graced in a time of stress and emergency with a ten percent dividend on the ordinary shares, that "the public's desire for entertainment under present conditions is reflected in the fact that takings are now nearly back to normal in most areas." Arthur Dent, director of Associated British, declares that business is certainly not more than 10 per cent lower all round. . . . Some areas in the provinces are not down at all, while some suburban theatres are doing better than before the war."

With British picture-house patrons now getting accustomed to the blackout, the blackness of which scarcely can be appreciated by those who have not encountered it, with a slight relaxation of lighting, so slight as to be unnoticeable to the uninitiated, with an increasing use of the hand torch, and the intervention of various luminous paint devices in cinema vestibules, audiences are flocking back to the cinemas, and as a result takings are getting nearer to normal. The abolition of exterior lighting, and the cuts in press and poster advertising, direct result of a paper shortage, mean less overheads, with an equivalent betterment of the debit balance. On the cards is the likelihood that the prosperity period foreshadowed a few weeks back in these columns may be just around a corner or two.

It is clear that no legislation could have been more effective in the Government's purpose of clearing persons from the streets during the blackout than the blackout itself. Those who do brave the darkness, with its transport complications (buses and trains are not only fewer but often unidentifiable), go straight to the cinema and go straight home again. The major difficulty has been in getting them there in numbers sufficient to make evening opening an economic proposition. That is gradually being achieved but it has been a costly process.

Late Closing Won

The theatremen's achievement of winning the Home Secretary's permission for an 11 o'clock closing, gained last week, is expected to have an important effect on grosses.

The average time taken to get to a cinema, to see the program and get out again is three hours. British patrons, quick to arrive at such judgments, were unwilling to pay their money at the cashbox after seven o'clock, under the 10 o'clock curfew. Patronage for some time was negligible. In industrial districts where the artisan and worker is accustomed to get home after six o'clock or seven o'clock, to wash and eat an evening meal, picture house proprietors felt the pinch more grimly than most of their confreres.

TOWN'S FIRST HOUSE ON WAY

Now that electricity is available for the first time in Mora, N. M., the town, with a population of 1,500, is to have a theatre for the first time. N. Cornett plans to open one there.

No revolutionary increase of patronage followed extension of the hours but the residue of business will be a valuable factor in restoring figures to the normal. No large crowds are expected until the blackout is a thing of the past.

West End Most Affected

London's West End probably had suffered even more acutely from the blackout and the opening restrictions than any other area. It no longer can be regarded as anything but a localized area attracting for the most part local custom. The attraction of pre-release pictures, save with supers of more than normally powerful appeal, vanished in the face of the blackout, with the realization that they eventually would be seen in comfort locally.

That the first extension of opening from 6 till 10 meant something to those cinemas so permitted is reflected in the fact that the Warner theatre in its first 10 o'clock closing week doubled takings registering $12,000 as against an operating cost of $6,400. The Odeon, too, doubled receipts though losses totalled $5,600. The Plaza doubled takings, reducing a loss of $4,000 to $1,400. The new closing hour is expected to bring similar improvement, though the stagger system of opening is still in force for the West End houses.

All over the country, thus, matters improve. With a more generous attitude on the part of the authorities and the process of adjustment on the part of the paying public continuing at its present rate, the outlook may not be so black as the blackout might lead many to fear.

Calls U. S. Companies Ready

It is authoritatively understood that American major companies have mature plans for the launching of production programs in England immediately after the Government declares its intentions relative to restrictive legislation.

The executive committee of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association on Tuesday discussed product shortage, considered the possibilities of cooperative production and the abolition of the blind and advance booking clause of the Films Act, and named a committee to draw up a concrete plan.

A political hitch has developed in the relations of the Government-sponsored Association of Film Entertainment and the Army Films Council, resulting in the holding up of the supply of films for the British army as planned by the new organization.

The Cinematograph News Films (Prevention of Abuses) Bill, sponsored by Sir Ernest Graham-Little in the pre-war period, has been abandoned. It was aimed to prohibit newsreel companies from restricting the rental of their films to commercial theatres.

Cinema Leads in Mexico Popularity

by JAMES LOCKHART
in Mexico City

The cinema continues to lead in amusement popularity in Mexico City. The report of the municipal treasury department reveals that the 60 theatres in the city that function regularly sold 27,409,367 tickets for a total of $3,225,000 last year. (The average admission price is computed at 11½ cents.) The total revenue for all paid public amusements last year was $4,250,000. Mexico City has a population of some 1,300,000 of which, the report reveals, only 25 per cent attend paid public amusements.

Sets Box-Office Record

In this respect it is interesting to note that United Artists' "The Man in the Iron Mask" has set a new box office record for Mexico City and in fact for Mexico. The film grossed $10,250 in a week at the select Cine Teatro Alameda with a top price of 45 cents. United Artists also scored a record with "Algiers" at the same theatre last year with $8,060 in one week.

The Government-owned Palace of Fine Arts in Mexico City, which cost $6,000,000 and was in construction some 30 years, has not proved to be profitable and may be leased to A. Warshawsky, Austrian impresario. Mr. Warshawsky is negotiating for a five-year contract at monthly rental of $1,200 for the first year and up to $1,400 for the remainder of the contract. If the contract is signed Mr. Warshawsky plans to show films as well as presenting stage attractions, which isn't too pleasing to exhibitors here. They contend they already have too much competition. Only two films have been shown at the Palace of Fine Arts—a Mexican picture and Warner Brothers' "Juarez."

Speaking of competition it is to be noted that plans have been drafted for two large modern cinemas in select sectors of the city by interests headed by Emilio Azcarraga that own and operate the Cine Teatro Alameda. Work on them is to start before the end of the year.

Establish Safety Regulations

Two theatre safety regulations have been put into effect. Smoking in theatres here has been banned with penalties ranging from $2 to $10 or 36 hours in jail for violations and a regulation banning standees in theatres has been put into effect.

To enforce the employment of musicians in cinemas and other amusement places that feature music, the Government of Tamaulipas state has passed a law that provides a monthly tax of $30 for each "canned" music apparatus in its principal cities, Tampico, Nuevo Laredo and Matamoros, the latter two cities on the American border, and of $20 each for such equipment in the other communities of the state.

Mexican exhibitors have formed a national union of cinematographic impersarios for mutual benefit and production. Officers are Ernesto E. Trujillo, president; Pedro F. de Leon, general secretary, and Edrulfo Escandon, treasurer. The headquarters are at Avenue Cinco de Mayo, No. 27, office 43, Mexico City.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

HOLLYWOOD MOTION PICTURE personalities this week were coming in for some attention on the subject of horseflesh—not of the racing stable variety with which so many Hollywoodites are identified, but rare specimens of horseflesh, like Winfield Sheehan's Lipizzans which he is using in the production of "Florian," which he started this week at Culver City in a return to production.

On Mr. Sheehan's ranch at Hidden Valley, California, some eight to ten Lipizzans have grown from the two pairs which some part of Austrian officialdom presented as a gift to Mrs. Sheehan-Jeritza some years ago.

They are described as magnificent, of most unusual stance and behavior, by those who have visited the ranch—and are the only horses of their kind in the United States. They're as black as coal when colts, turning later to a snow whiteness. The horses are noted as very special types for show, performing uniquely fancy gaits and prances.

Even more unusual is the 110-pound, three-feet high "midget" horse, called Sir Arthur, which is owned by Watterson R. Rothacker, vice president of Quigley Publications in Hollywood.

What is his origin? Scientists are not sure, but they think they have the answer.

Several years ago an airplane pilot flying exceptionally low over the Grand Canyon noticed, on an isolated mesa known as the The Throne, what appeared to be a herd of small donkeys. He reported his observations to the California Institute of Technology, and subsequently an expedition was sent to investigate.

The rocky plateau proved almost inaccessible, but at length, with the aid of experienced mountain climbers, the scientists achieved their goal, and learned that what the pilot had seen was a herd of small horses.

After much difficulty, two were captured, and it is one of these that is now in Mr. Rothacker's possession. The other is owned by Dr. Robert A. Millikan, of the institute.

It is believed the horses are descendants of Arabian mounts brought to America by a Spanish expedition in 1600, and that in time they strayed away to a part of the Grand Canyon which eventually became an isolated mesa through wind and time erosion.

William R. Weaver, our careful Hollywood editor, reports that the little horse looks very much like a Shetland pony.

He has one horse that doubles for his hard riding scenes, another to pinch-hit for him when he has to take abuse in a scene, a third who waits patiently under the reflectors while a shot is being lined up. A fourth is used when he is turned tail to the camera."

Whether by accident or design, deponent sayeth not, but the fact remains that natives in Cincinnati were somewhat startled by the story heading the theatre page of a newspaper there, which read: "All Quit on the Western Front."

He offers in the way of locations the sea, lakes, mountains and, presumably, the dunes of Maine or Cape Cod for desert backgrounds. Other inducements he puts forward are that New York is a music and art center, that its libraries and museums would insure against those little historical slip-ups for which, he says, the movies are famous.

All of which causes the Hazelton, Pennsylvania Standard to conclude that, "But for one all-conquering reason, the motion picture industry will never budge an inch from Southern California, because when a magnate ventures abroad there, he is preceded by a red plush carpet, a pack of leashed leopards, a chorus of hosanna-criers and he rolls under a gold umbrella. He is the Caliph of Bagdad. His veriest whim is law. New Yorkers, on the other hand, are a cynical bird-giving race. Try just three minutes of it."

No fraidy-cat, Critic Potter accepted, and after an hour of acting up a jittery Jeeter before curtain time and trying to chaw black plug-tobacco behind stage whiskers on the stage, he decided that the place for the critic is behind the typewriter.

SHOWMEN'S REVIEWS

This department deals with new product from the point of view of the exhibitor who is to purvey it to his own public.

Another Thin Man

(MGM)

Another "Thin Man"

There's not much to tell a showman about this picture which he doesn't know, except that it's all he wants it to be. He knows it's William Powell's first picture in a pair of years. He's aware that it's the third Dashiell Hammett murder-mystery melodrama, that Myrna Loy and Asta are again alongside Mr. Powell, that Hunt Stromberg is again in capable charge of production, and that it ought to be, by logic based on the box office performance of "The Thin Man" and "After The Thin Man," hot stuff. All these circumstances add up to a substantial equipment of exploitation ammunition, and what the exhibitor would need to know, beyond that, is whether the picture stands up. Let it be reported here that it does.

There are a good many reasons why this is so, at least one why it could not well be otherwise. That one is Hunt Stromberg, producer of this and the previous Powell-Loy adventures, who seems somehow able to strike at will and any given moment the high comedy pitch of the first Hammett hit and maintain it steadily. Others are, of course, the sheer acting ability of the congenially cast stars, the high caliber of the supporting cast supplied by an astute studio management and the renowned competence of Frances Goodrich and Albert Hackett in the screen play department. Too, Hunt Stromberg again used as director W. S. Van Dyke, II, who served in like capacity on the previous undertakings.

The story of this Hammett adventure in confusing the customers is intricate, so much so that even the hero only partially clears it up in the finale, but it is amusing, and that is the important aspect. There are two murders, some fisticuffs, many false clues, many interesting characterizations, many situations purely humorous of intent. All this is run off spiritedly, gaily, pleasantly. It's another "Thin Man" in fact as literally as in title.

Previewed with fanfare and trumpets as the ceremonial opening attraction of the Fox-West Coast Theatre's new and swanky Academy theatre situated in a mushrooming residential area midway between Los Angeles and Inglewood, Cal. A goodly representation of the great, near great, professional, lay and merely curious turned out for the ceremony. There were speeches, a newsreel was made and a broadcast was cast. And the film measured up to every square inch and candle-power of the occasion, according to audience reaction. That seems to promise an all-condition, all-purpose performance of impressive proportions.—W. R. W.

City in Darkness

(20th Century-Fox)

Mystery Melodrama

Weighty in topical exploitation values, "City in Darkness" presents "Charlie Chan" in Paris, where a spy ring attempting to send munitions out of the country has its machinations exposed in a blackout during a threatened air raid. The time is September, 1938, and the picture opens with a montage showing activities of European powers preceding the Munich conference when war clouds hung heavily over Europe.

From murder of an agent of an unnamed foreign government there spring various developments which lead to a number of suspects, entangle the lives of an innocent couple, and create added tension for a number of persons already nervous because of the pending war.

Sidney Toler enacts "Chan" with customary savoir faire. His support consists principally of Lynn Bari, Richard Clarke, Harold Huber in a comedy role, Pedro de Cordoba, Dorothy Tree and C. Henry Gordon.

The screenplay by Robert Ellis and Helen Logan, who adapted the Earl Derr Biggers character to the play by Gina Kaus and Ladislaus Fodor, moves swiftly and punchily to the climax. Herbert I. Leeds saw to it that his direction kept pace with the tempo of the situations. John Stone was associate producer under executive producer Sol M. Wurtzel.

Reno

(RKO Radio)

Approach to Divorce

Reno, which got to be "the biggest little city in the world" through its simplification of divorce procedure, is here presented as a case study in American mores and as a background for the story of a divorce lawyer.

The first aspect, that of Reno as a social problem in its simplification of marital disunion, is secondary to the tale of the growth of the divorce mill as told by Richard Dix, in a court trial in which he is accused of operating a crooked gambling house. Brought to trial by his own daughter, in Reno for a divorce, his story of divorce and its effect upon him sends her home to her husband.

With able acting by Richard Dix and Gail Patrick, as his wife, the tenor of the story is interrupted by an occasional striving for effect, as when a picture of Reno at the beginning of the century is used as a device leading into the flashback which unfolds the main body of the story, or when Mr. Dix is shown winning his first case by relying on the effect of alcoholic bottled goods upon the jury.

Kay Kyser Comedy

If the popularity of his radio program and the records of his personally conducted theatre appearances may be taken as indicative, Kay Kyser's first motion picture imposes no greater selling obligation on the practical showman than that of billing far, wide and loudly its coming, arrival and, doubtlessly, its holdover. For the film has in it everything that the Kyser program has, including the Kyser program, and the story of the film is in whole and in short the story of how Kay Kyser came to Hollywood to make a motion picture. The film had the preview audience under complete control for 88 minutes and applauding delightedly at the finish.

Produced and directed by astute, versatile David Butler, who also collaborated with William Conselman on the story, the picture is sharply out of routine as to context and treatment, well nigh inspired as to conception. Instead of presenting the band leader as a band leader distressed by complications, it presents him simply as Kay Kyser, brought to Hollywood because of his radio popularity to star in a picture, found impossible as an actor and, ultimately, paid off without making a film. The trick of making a picture which purports to say that no picture can be made is easily the neatest trick of the year. Mr. Conselman and James V. Kern share credit for the extremely adroit screen play which achieves all this.

Mr. Kyser's radio associates are with him throughout the picture, the Ginny Simms of his program scoring a distinct personal hit, the band as a whole turning in one sock number after another. These experts of the radio are by no means left without experienced assistance, however, nor is their radio popularity the exhibitor's sole selling point. Adolphe Menjou is on hand in his best impersonation of a film producer, May Robson contributes a warm character bit, Edward Everett Horton and Hobart Cavanaugh play a writing team in the classic tradition of the craft, and other dependables carry on as helpfully. For good measure, half a dozen syndicated columnists portray themselves in a sequence of key importance.

The Phantom Strikes

(Monogram)

Mystery

"The Phantom Strikes" is a mystery picture made in England by producer Michael Balcon based on the novel "The Ringer" by Edgar Wallace. The stars and feature players, with the exception of Wilfred Lawson who appeared in "Pygmalion" and is currently in "Allegheny Uprising," and perhaps Sonnie Hale, will be new to American audiences but Wallace's name and his book, "The Ringer," are known to many.

Sonnie Hale handles his part capably as a comedian portraying the cockney crook, Alexander Knox is the Scotch criminologist and Patrick Barr the detective.

The romantic side is secondary as is customary in Wallace's stories.

"Maurice Meister," a criminal lawyer with a shady reputation, is threatened with death within forty-eight hours by "The Ringer." The police and "Inspector Wembury" are summoned to protect "Meister," and "Sam Hackett," a convict, is brought along to identify "The Ringer." Death strikes and "Meister" is killed, but "Inspector Wembury" exposes "The Ringer."

This is one of the better mystery pictures made in England and brought into this country. Sidney Gilliat adapted the book for the screen and Ronald Neame handled the photography.

Cowpunchers vs. Counterfeiters

In this present saga of good old western days and ways, when a man's best friends were his holster and horse, the gentleman mounted in the saddle is Jack Randall, a true son of the code of the range, who clears out a band of counterfeiters, solves an Indian murder, wins a pretty G-woman, and carries the mail in general.

There are some fancy and furious galloping across bumpy but expertly photographed landscape, lightning streaked gun drawing, quietly tense moments when the villains stalk the hero.

Two bits of action are likely to win the hearty approval of the spectator. The first comes when "Jack" tells the town "gorilla" that this is a free country and the people in it are allowed to go wherever they please, and the other is the trick work of "Jack's" horse, "Rusty."

Previewed at a trade showing in New York at which an invited audience, mostly of feminine reviewers and better picture councils, found some bits of the western manners unintentionally funny according to the effete Eastern sense of humor but obviously considered the picture as a whole quite interesting and exciting—Joseph F. Coughlin.

Day-Time Wife

(20th Century-Fox)

Sophisticated Comedy

This is the one about the husband whose wife, discovering that he's been stepping out with his secretary on those nights when he's been supposed to be working late at the office, gets herself a job as a secretary in another office to find out what it is that secretaries have which wives haven't. This is also the one in which wife and secretary, husband and wife's employer, come together under circumstances in which none speak freely, and this is, finally, the one in which the husband's secretary ultimately tells the wife the husband is really okay on the moral side but likes to step out so he can feel "like a little boy" again. Somewhat regrettably, however, this is not, as its predecessors were, the one in which the husband's deportment is extenuated at the picture's end for the benefit of convention and the peace of mind of wives in the audience whose real-life husbands employ secretaries. This omission of the traditional "out" limits the picture, as to entertainment value and appropriateness, to those adults who find husbandly philanderings unevil and amusing.

Treated lightly and wholly for humorous effect, the screen play by Art Arthur and Robert Harari contains much good dialogue and makes a number of familiar situations seem fresh. Direction by Gregory Ratoff is above his average. Raymond Griffith, himself once upon a time an ace actor in light comedy, served Darryl F. Zanuck ably as associate producer.

Tyrone Power plays the errant husband satisfactorily and Linda Darnell proves her talent as the wife. Warren William handles a light-heavy chore admirably. Binnie Barnes and Joan Davis help out importantly on the distaff side with less to do than their doing of it merits.

Previewed at the Village theatre, Westwood, Cal., where an audience composed largely of college students, press and studio representatives, found it quite amusing.—W. R. W.

The Lion Has Wings

(Korda - United Artists)

War Propaganda Document

With this vivid and compelling picture, British government-sponsored film production makes its wartime bow. Korda made it with his own finance, but with State collaboration and a Ministry of Information option to purchase, and shows that he can capture the headline with wartime ballyhoo no less directly than with peacetime fiction. Propaganda it may be, with certain limits therefore on its extra-British appeal, but one hundred percent screen entertainment it is, nonetheless, with a world market assured. The absence of flagwagging, the honesty of statement, the quiet humours, and the unique glimpse it affords of the British military machine at work should more than counter foreign doubts about the appeal of case pleading and propaganda. The mysteries of the fighter defence control, the plotting of raids and defence movements, the reconstruction of the epic Wilhelmshaven exploit, with the quiet heroes themselves on the screen, the flashes of Spitfires roaring the skies at 400 m.p.h., or of nonchalant lads piloting the heavy Wellingtons to enemy objectives, are engrossing screen entertainment no matter what colour the flag that flies atop the local flagstaff.

The film took ten days to make, greatly from library matter and newreel cuts, but likewise from dramatised episodes and location shots, but it has polish and sheen and would seem to have cost more than its actual $125,000. It is a cutter's masterpiece and a cameraman's triumph.

There is a personal element of meager dimension with Ralph Richardson as an officer in the R.A.F., and Merle Oberon as his wife. Chamberlain's war declaration is the background of a dramatic passage. Hitler's rantings are cross cut with a pretty pattern of racecourse tipsters, cheapjacks and park orators. E. V. H.

Emmett, British newsreel commentator, does a grand and witty job behind the microphone.

Productions such as this obviously enter a new category of showmanship.

Screened to a press audience at the Leicester Square Theatre and with an air raid warning hardly as yet died away and enemy planes off the East Coast, the film was received with an unsentimental, emotion-free absorption one would hardly expect in a country at war.—AUBREY FLANAGAN.

First Film Concert

(World Pictures Corp.)

Musical Program

Under the title "The First Film Concert" a series of short subjects has been blended to offer to the musically appreciative audiences an entertaining fifty-three minutes of renditions by some of the more famous of France's musicians.

Produced by the Society of International Artists and distributed in the United States by World Pictures, the "Concert" is presented without a plot and much as the usual concert. The camera by angle and close up shots takes the audience closer to the performer.

The concert presents Alfred Cortot at the piano playing Debussy's "Children's Hour," Gregor Piatigorsky, 'cellist, rendering "Andante et Rondo" by Weber, A. Brailowsky in a piano recital of Chopin's "Valse Brillante," and Jacques Thibaud, violinist, presenting "Malaguena" by Albeniz. The "Ave Maria" by Schubert is sung by Elizabeth Schumann, opera star, against an angelic background. Clotilde Sakharoff Magda Tagliafero at the piano renders "Young Girl in a Garden" by Frederic Monpou. Here the camera offers montage effects that are a little startling and distracting. Ninon Vallin sings "Les Berdeaux," a nautical cradle-song, by Gabriel Faure, and there are intimate glimpses of the Corps de Ballet, featuring Serge Lifar, and the orchestra of the Paris Opera.

Reviewed at the Fifth Avenue Playhouse in New York where an afternoon audience, expecting just what they saw, listened attentively and applauded at the finish.—G. S.

Produced by the Societe des Artistes Internationaux in France and distributed in the United States by World Pictures Corp. Released, October 31, 1939. No P.C.A. number. Running time, 53 minutes. General audience classification.

Marseillaise

(World Pictures)

French Revolution

Jean Renoir, creator of the highly successful French film "Grand Illusion," which was concerned with the World War, also brings "Marseillaise," which is about the French Revolution. He produced, directed and had something to say in the writing of the story. Here the emphasis is on the people rather than on the love affairs and regime of Marie Antoinette, especially as it concerns the revolutionary troops from Marseilles and their marching song, that was to become a national anthem, "La Marseillaise."

To be sure, Marie Antoinette, Louis the Sixteenth, the gentlemen in waiting and the ladies in waiting are not overlooked but the beheading scene is not here. The cast is large, and the program speaks of some 10,000 altogether. It is an amiable film with a fair share of comedy and although it would appear as if the production was originally intended for its dramatic possibilities it never approaches dramatic intensity as did Mr. Renoir's "Grand Illusion."

The actual fighting is confined to a brief but bloody skirmish within the palace courtyard, between the Marseilles troops and the national militia on one side and the Swiss Guards on the other.

"CAN ALWAYS BET ON 'HERALD' REVIEWS"

"Enclosed is my renewal check for another 52 weeks of the 'Herald'.

"This will mark my second year receiving it and, believe me, it is my every Sunday evening companion. I still can't see how I did without it before last year. In my opinion it plays a very important part in the everyday operation of the theatre. I am especially fond of the Reviews about the new pictures. You can always bet on them."—WOODY ESLICH, Deport Theatre, Deport, Texas.

Inspector Hornleigh on Holiday

(20th Century - Fox)

Detective Comedy-Drama

Cashing in on the success of the first "Inspector Hornleigh" film, 20th Century-Fox herewith presents the same team, Cockney Gordon Harker and Scotsman Alastair Sim, in a dramatic extravaganza which, while it uses the same brand of treatment, presents nonetheless a different story. The radio fame of "Inspector Hornleigh" is dimmed somewhat by the war, but it still has a certain saleability, and screen audiences this side should find the repetition of the original team's comedy handiwork a considerable drawing factor.

Dramatically the story, adapted by Sidney Gilliat from Leo Grex's original thriller "Stolen Death," is ingenious, even if the directorial vamping has transcended the bounds of plausibility with occasional enthusiasm. It finds Hornleigh and his aggrieved Scottish sergeant torn from a seaside holiday to dissect an insurance racket which includes the secret use of corpses from a London hospital. Macabre though such a theme may be, there is little macabre in the development of the yarn, which extracts the utmost comedy.

Jack Cox has photographed the film in a way which is a definite asset and Vetchinsky's sets are impressive. There are some grand character cameos in minor roles.

Though made to the English audience pattern, the film is not too English for other markets.

Seen in London in 20th Century-Fox's preview theatre, the film was received very agreeably by an audience of trade viewers.—AUBREY FLANAGAN.

The Frozen Limits

(Gainsborough - General)

Gold Mining Burlesque

The Palladium Crazy Gang, British equivalents of the Marx Brothers, have a following mainly Metropolitan in Great Britain, built on the strength of their stage appearances. Provincially, notably in the less adult sectors of the wildwoods, their brand of twentieth century fooling still needs to be sold. Like comments might be made of the Gang's potential appeal outside these shores. Their humours are broad, inconsequential and knowing—and the humours of this latest romp are to type.

Their high spirited knockabout and vaudevillian backchat this time are set in a Klondyke frame whither the Six Wonder boys misled by a reference to Mr. (Joseph) Chamberlain in an ancient newspaper, go to seek their fortune.

Technical qualities are up to the Gainsborough standard.

The picture raised plenty of laughs at its trade screening though the more highminded critics stayed a little detached and it was considered not necessarily the best of the Crazy Gang comedies.—A. F.

Dark Eyes of London

(Argyle - Pathe)

Horror Melodrama

British thrillers seldom offer such full measure of horrors as this adaptation of the Edgar Wallace melodrama with its corpses floating in the Thames and sinking in the mud, small armies of blind men, a doctor who drowns his patients for the insurance money, and a monster who might be a close friend of Frankenstein's chef d'oeuvre. Highly tinted though it be, it is a capably made little picture.

Bela Lugosi's role is sinister but essentially gentlemanly; he plays the part of a Jekyll and Hyde who runs a home for the aged blind under one name and makeup, and an insurance racket aided by murder and forgery under another. Jake, an imbecile monster, drowns his victims for him in a convenient tank. Hugh Williams, English actor, is Inspector Holt of Scotland Yard.

The macabre element is competently sustained and should send thrills creeping down the spines of the unsophisticated.

Production qualities are neat but not gaudy,

American Royal

(RKO Pathe)

Livestock Champions

A Pathe Reelism, this is a most interesting film. It was photographed for the most part at the American Royal Livestock Show in Kansas City and shows prize animals in parade, but what makes the reel particularly arresting are the performances and form of several pairs of champion harness horses. There is one five-gaited equine model of perfection that has to be seen to be believed. Running time, 9 minutes.

Screen Snapshots, No. 2

Hollywood Animals

Getting away from the run of Screen Snapshots, this subject concerns the training of animals that play in pictures. Hollywood's stars are only supporting players here, among them Jean Arthur, Alan Dinehart and Mischa Auer. —Running time, 10 minutes.

Aqua-Rhythm

(Paramount)

Sportlight

Rhythmic swimming, popularized by Billy Rose's Aquacade at the New York World's Fair, is treated in Grantland Rice's latest sport subject. The girls of the Tarpon Swimming Club of Florida execute the aquatic designs in Wakulla Springs. Narrated by Ted Husing, this is a picturesque and entertaining subject.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Boy Meets Joy

(Universal)

Musical Featurette

Old timers who have been bemoaning the disappearance of vaudeville from the boards of the local opera houses should be considerably pleased that that particular branch of theatrics has not exactly gone from the stage scene but is still in existence under the celluloid disguise of miniature musicals. At least, an inspection of this song and dance featurette offers a round of vaudeville turns with about everything but the opening act of trained seals, virile acrobats or nimble handed jugglers. The lad of the title is presented in the drawling personality of that recognized tunesmith, Pinky Tomlin, and the other half of the titular combination is taken care of by the vocally capable and smooth appearing Joy Hodges, whose appearance in this minor matter after a successful stay in feature length productions may be characterized as a busman's—or buswoman's—holiday. Pinky plays smoothly and Joy sings sweetly and that is all there is to this talent demonstration. Of course, there are breathing spells for the principals, which allows the opportunity for the introduction of the supporting roster of performers to offer their individual wares. The bill includes acrobatic dancer Lucille Page, a young woman with what would appear to be a rubber band constitution; Mary Ruth, infant piano prodigy, whose minute but fleet fingers, tap out a Chopin waltz, and a group of elderly women billed as the Elderblooms, who give a choral swing rendition of an excerpt from "Martha." Some captious critics, hearing these silver haired swingsters, may excuse the songbirds on the grounds of age.—Running time, 17 minutes.

Fresh Fish

(Vitaphone)

Merrie Melody

This is another of the clever Merrie Melody cartoons from producer Leon Schlesinger. The cartoon is a travesty on the professor and his diving bell. While the "professor" of the cartoon is searching for the whim wham whistling shark, the camera scouts around for some oddly appearing and acting fish. The "professor" finally bags his whim wham whistling shark and the diving bell is hoisted to the boat. When the door of the diving bell is opened, the "professor" has disappeared and the shark is picking his teeth.—Running time, seven minutes.

Hunting Hounds

(RKO Pathe)

Sportscope

The hunting hounds with which this Pathe Sportscope is concerned are those trained to pick up the scent of wildcats and corner them while the huntsmen set about capturing them alive. In the first chase a wild cat is treed and easily taken by a huntsman who climbs the tree and with rope and pole lowers the animal into a bag held by other sportsmen. The second chase is not so successful, as the wild cat takes refuge on the side of a rocky incline inaccessible to the hunting party. The hounds on both occasions perform well. Narrated by Andre Baruch.—Running time, nine minutes.

Zoo in Manhattan

(Central Films)

Central Park Zoo

"Zoo in Manhattan," the latest subject to be produced by Central Films makers of "Chinook's Children," is a study of wild animal and bird life in Central Park Zoo and Lake. The subject opens with a shot of the entrance to the park and then goes into the zoo itself. Offscreen commentary by John S. Martin gives the habits and the idiosyncrasies of the animals and birds. An entertaining 10 minutes' subject.

Ted Fio-Rito and Orchestra

(Paramount)

Dance Band

The hit tunes composed by Ted Fio-Rito are featured. The first number, a medley of his songs, is followed by a "swing-symphonic" arragement of the "Volga Boatman." Lee Sullivan sings "Blue Orchids." The last number is a musical version of a horse race, "Photo-Finish." Shots of the orchestra are blended with race pictures, and the development of the music is traced from the parade before the race to the photo-finish at the end. This is a good musical subject.—Running time, 11 minutes.

Acres of Plenty

(RKO Pathe)

A Pathe Reelism

The production deals with the migratory workers of the west. It does not paint the doleful picture that John Steinbeck's "Grapes of Wrath" does. Most of the reel has been filmed on a large ranch near Modesto, Cal., a ranch that because of its diversified produce and management is said to be one of the few ranches in the west that operates on a year around schedule and at its most productive period of the year employs up to seventeen hundred workers. Also shown is one of the Government camps in which the migratory worker and his family set up their own governing system. Narrated by Harry von Zell. Produced by Frederic Ullman, Jr.—Running time, nine minutes.

Busy Little Bears

(Paramount)

A Bear's Life

One day's adventures of three little bears are shown against a natural background. Frank Crumit, the narrator, christens them Horace, Herbert and Herman. On a continual search for food and fun, the bears romp and investigate every possible source of honey. They meet some strange animals: a badger, a porcupine, a skunk, an eagle that steals their fish. Their great discovery is a ranch house. They break in and have a feast. The rancher's daughter makes the busy little bears her pets. This short subject has some excellent shots of the bears hunting and playing in their natural state. It is good entertainment and the children, especially, should be delighted.—Running time, 10 minutes.

A Failure at Fifty

(MGM)

Lincoln Miniature

A man of 50 can not find a job. As he is about to commit suicide, a friendly hand stops him and he is told a story. Back in the 19th century another American was a failure in retail business twice before he was 22. Later, as a small town lawyer, he failed again, and after his friends forced him into politics, he was defeated twice for the office of senator. But finally he became a success. President Lincoln's story is well told, and the audience does not realize until near the end the identity of the "failure at fifty." This is an unusually good patriotic short subject. — Running time, ten minutes.

Merry Wives of Windsor

(Paramount)

Philharmonic Orchestra

This Symphonic Short is played by the National Philharmonic Orchestra of the U.S.A. under the direction of Frederick Feher. It is another treat for the music lovers. This is not as well known to the average patron as "The Blue Danube," but those who like fine music can be expected to be even more appreciative. The overture to the opera, "The Merry Wives of Windsor" is pleasing music as played by the Philharmonic Orchestra. The regular black and white print is not nearly so much in harmony with the subject matter as the blue tint which helped to provide some outstanding photographic effects in "The Blue Danube."—Running time, 9 minutes.

Homes of Today

(Pathe Commercial)

Federal Housing Subject

This is the second of the color subjects made by the Commercial Department of Pathe News for the Federal Housing Administration and is available to theatres through William Waldholz, chief of motion picture distribution for the FHA. The film presents a tangible demonstration of the availability of homes costing from $2,500 to $5,000. Besides the message it contains the film is pictorially pleasing. Produced by Frederic Ullman, Jr. Supervised by Frank Donovan. Running time, 11 minutes.

LA GUARDIA SAYS EAST WILL HAVE PRODUCTION, INDUSTRY SAYS NO

Labor Leader Says Mayor Will Help Launch New Company If Majors Don't Respond, but Nothing Happens

Even while film directors in California were explaining why New York City was anything but ideal for motion picture production, while major company executives professed ignorance of Eastern production plans and a study revealed no swing in production, film labor unions, backed by Mayor Fiorello H. La Guardia, this week renewed their campaign to found a "new Hollywood" on the Hudson. On Tuesday, Borough President Richard Palma of Richmond asked that production be centered on Staten Island.

Mayor Would Form Company

The Mayor, who on October 16th, in addressing the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, "invited" the motion picture industry to settle in New York because, as he put it, the first motion pictures were made in the East, and because New York "had everything," told the newspapers Friday afternoon at City Hall, "We're going to make pictures in New York." He did not explain how.

However, Charles Downs, business agent of Local 644, Cameramen, followed with an assertion, according to the Herald Tribune, that the Mayor would help form a "new picture company" and that this was "the Mayor's pet idea."

"He intends to take the bull by the horns and see to it that the studios are reopened," Mr. Downs added. "He was irritated by the Warner Brothers closing their studios here."

Began with "Black Maria" Shack

Thus Mr. LaGuardia and the unions would bring motion picture production back to the east where it was cradled in the "Black Maria" shack, first movie studio in America, built in 1893 by Thomas Alva Edison in West Orange, N. J., a move which brought in subsequent years scores of silent-film studios and outdoor locations dotted through northern New Jersey, New York, Long Island and Westchester.

The migration of steady feature production to Hollywood was virtually completed a dozen years ago when the last holdout, Famous Players-Lasky, transported its eastern wing of production to the coast, overriding such Famous Players stars as Thomas Meighan, Bebe Daniels and Gloria Swanson. After that the only major regular filming in the east was at Warner Brothers', making Vitaphone shorts in Brooklyn, and even this was abandoned a year ago. Feature production in the east in the past dozen years has been sporadic, confined almost entirely to Eastern Service Studio on Long Island and Biograph in the Bronx.

Mr. Downs' statement on the LaGuardia move was accompanied by one from New York labor leaders George Meany, secretary of the state unit of the American Federation of Labor, and Thomas J. Lyons, president of the Central Trades and Labor Council.

Labor Speaks

"The motion picture producers each day take a tremendous amount of cash out of the pockets of the New York City's millions of moviegoers," said the labor men. "Surely, it is fair to ask them to spend here at least 10 per cent of the $250,000,000 annually expended in producing pictures."

The Mayor's statement on motion pictures in New York was uttered last Friday to the press at New York's City Hall, after a conference with a committee of representatives of labor unions associated with motion pictures or the the theatre.

On the special committee were Mr. Lyons, who acted as chairman; Jacob Rosenberg, Musicians Union, Local 802; Sol Scoppa and George Ackerson, Jr., Motion Picture Studio Mechanics Union, Local 52; Florence Marston and Michael Connolly, Screen Actors Guild; Saul Harrison, Association of Assistant Directors, Local 18168; Thomas Murtha, Stagehands Union, Local 4; William Burns, Operators Union, Local 306; Martin T. Lacey, Teamsters Union, Local 817; Louis Hollander, Theatrical Costume Workers Union; Fred Marshall, United Scenic Artists Union, Local 829; John Rugge, Laboratory Technicians Union, Local 702; Charles Downs, Cameramen's Union, Local 644, and James C. Quinn, secretary of the Central Trades and Labor Council.

The Mayor's statement said:

"We have had a series of conferences. Representatives of all unions of artists and stage hands concerned with the making of motion pictures have been present. We have decided that we are going to make motion pictures in New York City. More details will be forthcoming from time to time, and we shall keep you informed from week to week."

Immediately afterward, one of the Mayor's secretaries is said to have told the newspaper men that the Mayor's declaration did not mean that the City of New York would enter the motion picture industry.

Conferring with Executives

But Mr. LaGuardia was to confer with executives of the majors this week and if they refuse to be persuaded the new group will go into action, according to Mr. Downs, who said that the Mayor has conferred with banking interests and that "established" motion picture talent has been lined up. The Mayor would have no connection with the new company.

The Mayor met again at the City Hall Monday with labor leaders, a smaller group, and said:

"Everything in our preliminary work is completed, and we have made far more progress than I anticipated. I am not only amused but very much interested by some of the startling information I have received concerning the Far West, in the last few days."

Scoppa A Leader

Of the New York labor leaders, who predicted 10,000 jobs would be created by a New York film industry, the prime proponent of the plan appears to be Sol J. Scoppa, who favors a "Cinema City" on the World's Fair grounds. Mr. Scoppa is reported to have said this plan four years ago was greeted with interest by film officials but was "killed" by the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce.

He did not say whether the city was to have built the "Cinema City," but remarked that the picture companies easily could lease the grounds or parts, on long term agreements.

Mr. Scoppa on Friday remarked that a drawing of his plan, which called for a transfer of 10 per cent production to New York, reposed in the New York offices of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America.

An MPPDA official said this week that it was possible the industry as a whole might be interested but that obviously the trend in film production had been towards the West since 1927 and the introduction of sound. It was pointed out that there are 160 sound stages,

ERPI Reverses Policy; No More Spending To Get Eastern Films

After spending over $100,000 in making its Eastern Service Studios, Long Island City, New York, "attractive" to West Coast entertainment film producers, only to find, in the words of an ERPI spokesman, that they were not interested, Electrical Research Products, Inc., will concentrate on inducing commercial film producers to use the studios. This decision was made as Mayor LaGuardia pressed his move to bring some filming eastward.

ERPI will cease "trying to swim upstream" on this matter; it will stop spending money to induce the making of entertainment features at the modernized plant; it will stop financing dubiously profitable deals; it will now take all the orders it can get from the advertising-film producers, who, it is said, have appeared interested in using the plant. Its new policy was confirmed Monday by T. Kennedy Stevenson, president of the company.

No feature was made at Eastern Service in 1939. The plant and its new Technicolor camera have been used by commercials, notably Audio Productions. "The Middleton Family at the World's Fair" was made there for Westinghouse, in color and in five reels.

The plant will continue to be used for newsreel recording and shorts production or scoring, and for classroom shorts by Erpi Classroom Films, Inc., non-theatrical venture.

Several deals for feature production had been rumored for the plant. Among the producers mentioned were Lee Garmes, Jack Skirball, Al Christie, Jack Wildberg. Mr. Garmes, in association with Ben Hecht, is understood to be ready to start in the east with a new feature company, New York Pictures, Inc., with George Jessel reported to be starring in the first, "Before I Die."

EXECUTIVES DOUBT RETURN EAST

approximately, in Hollywood, and "only four good ones in New York."

Film Executives' Comment

J. Robert Rubin, vice-president of Loew's, Inc., said the statement was a surprise but that the company's officials would readily discuss plans for Eastern production.

William Le Baron, production manager for Paramount on the coast, said production in New York could not compare with that in Southern California, because "we can shoot within a close radius of Hollywood a very good semblance of anything from the Sahara Desert to the mountains of Tibet."

Harry Sherman, director and producer of the "Hopalong Cassidy" westerns, said 75 per cent of the scenes he made were on location, necessarily apart from the inseparable noises of the city.

Frank Lloyd, Paramount director of "Rulers of the Sea," pointed out that scenes such as were in that picture could not have been filmed along the New York coast.

Mayor Fletcher Bowron of Los Angeles said in a telephoned statement to the New York Herald Tribune:

"We have no evidence of the motion picture industry packing up and leaving California, especially after Tuesday, when the 'Ham 'n' Eggs' pension plan was defeated. If that had carried we couldn't have told."

Unemployment Factor

The background for the move appears to have provided by the comparatively large unemployment among the Eastern motion picture unions. Eastern Service Studios, in Long Island City, New York, and the Warner Brothers Vitaphone shorts studios, in Brooklyn, are the two large studios in the New York area. The Warners shorts production has been transferred to the coast, and the Eastern Service studios are being used only for commercial shorts and a few major shorts, the independent feature producers no longer making their Paramount-release features there.

Robert H. Cochrane, who resigned last year as president of Universal Pictures, called Mayor LaGuardia's call to New York film production "ridiculous," and said:

"No large studio would make grade A pictures in New York. It would bankrupt the motion picture companies to transfer enough equipment to New York to make first class pictures there."

Others pointed out that Florida, with offers of state-built studios and tax-free properties, had not been able to lure the motion picture industry from California.

It was said by the union representatives at the Friday meeting that the newsreels declined to film the Mayor reading his statement, because of the opposition of producers to an Eastern production move.

Mr. Scoppa termed this an exhibition of "the lengths to which the Hollywood producers will go."

The labor leaders are reported to have pledged the Mayor that, if production were brought to the East, they would bar jurisdictional disputes and frequent wage and hour demands.

Jay David Blaufox, exploiteer, writer and authority on aviation, is in Hollywood to complete writing assignments for eastern publishers. Mr. Blaufox has formerly been connected with motion picture publicity, both for theatres and distributors.

PARAMOUNT THEATRE FETES 13TH YEAR

The New York Paramount theatre celebrated last week its thirteenth anniversary. "Rulers of the Seas", the 540th film to play at the theatre, was chosen for the special show.

The theatre opened in 1926 with the picture, "God Gave Me 20 Cents." The following are the champion pictures by years: 1926, "Cheerful Fraud"; 1927, "Underworld"; 1928, "Docks of New York"; 1929, "Pointed Heels"; 1930, "Road House Nights"; 1931, "Finnan Haddie"; 1932, "Ladies of the Big House"; 1933, "I'm No Angel"; 1934, Cleopatra"; 1935, "Lives of a Bengal Lancer"; 1936, "Big Broadcast of 1937"; 1937, "Double or Nothing"; 1938, "Wells Fargo", and 1939, "If I Were King".

"Pointed Heels", starring William Powell back in 1929, grossed over $100,000, it was recorded, and holds the all-time theatre record. However, "Wells Fargo" last year played to a greater number of patrons. The admission scale was considerably higher in the theatre's first years.

O'Donohue Appointed

Bob O'Donohue, publicity manager at the Worth theatre in Fort Worth for two years has been appointed director of advertising and publicity for the nine Interstate theatres in Fort Worth and Arlington by Frank Weatherford, new city manager in Fort Worth. Formerly each theatre had its own publicist. Harold Eppes, treasurer of the Worth theatre will assist O'Donohue and Howard Yarbrough takes his position at the Worth.

March of Time Campaign

An extensive campaign has been arranged in connection with the current March of Time being released by RKO, "Uncle Sam—The Farmer." Material has been placed in the nine chief farm magazines and in 600 newspapers in the larger county seats. A feature story is being sent by the NEA service to its 900 member newspapers; the U. S. Department of Agriculture is cooperating.

UA Spanish Film

Arthur W. Kelly, vice-president in charge of foreign distribution, announced that United Artists would release "La Justicia de Pancho Villa," Spanish-language film produced by Guz Aguila Films, Mexican producing company. The picture tells the story of an Argentine Gaucho who served in Villa's army. United Artists rights cover all Latin-America.

Seven Advisors Are Picked For Canadian Film Board

Appointment of seven members of a new inter-departmental committee to aid the National Film Board has been disclosed in Ottawa by Trade Minister Euler.

The committee which will assist John Grierson, new Government Film Commissioner, and Capt. Frank C. Badgley, director of the Canadian Government Motion Picture Bureau, includes:

F. C. Nunnick, publicity director of the Department of Agriculture; R. J. C. Stead, superintendent of publicity, Mines and Resources Department; Ray A. Brown, public relations representative of the Labor Department; Badden F. Farrell, Post Office Department; H. F. S. Paisley, Fisheries Department; Major R. J. Whitelaw, National Defense Department and D. Leon Dolan, head of the Canadian Travel Bureau Transport Department.

Critics Pick Hollywood

Hollywood has been designated as the site for the first annual convention of the Newspaper Film Critics of America. Jimmy Starr, Los Angeles Herald-Express, is chairman of the committee on arrangements. Hollywood was chosen in order that stars may be present to receive the awards voted by the group and also because some of the newspapermen have never been to the motion picture's homeland.

Lake Placid Production

Arthur Leonard and George Walbridge, of Lenwal Productions, Inc. will make their next production in and around Lake Placid late in December. The company's most recent production, "Pocomania," was made in Jamaica, British West Indies.

New Chicago Circuit

The Wabash Theatre Corporation with headquarters at 105 West Monroe Street, Chicago, elected H. A. Nichols, president; B. Burk, vice-president, and E. H. Allen, secretary. The Wabash theatre is the first in the contemplated chain.

J. Walter Thompson Named

J. Walter Thompson has been named to grant licenses for the manufacture of commercial products inspired by Max Fleisher's feature cartoon, "Gulliver's Travels," in Great Britain and Ireland.

Goldwyn Awarded Medal

In recognition of his "outstanding American citizenship and kindness to former service men" the Hollywood American Legion post awarded its 1939 citizenship medal to Samuel Goldwyn on November 6th.

Johannesburg Manager Named

Owen T. Welch has been appointed Twentieth Century-Fox manager for Johannesburg, South Africa. The company managing director for the territory is Otto B. Bolle, who reports that gold was discovered while excavating for a new first run theatre.

PARIS INDUSTRY GOES BACK TO WORK; AMERICAN MAJORS WILL CONTINUE

But Exhibitors Protest Limitation of Audience to 300 as Air Raid Precaution; Pictures To Be Completed

by SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT
in Paris

The outbreak of war, on September 3rd, suddenly interrupted all activities of the French film industry. Called to the colors, most of the French actors, directors, technicians and studio staffs left their work. Likewise most of the Paris and provincial motion picture theatres had to close, due to a shortage of house managers and projectionists.

After two months of wartime, it is now possible to make a survey of the status of the industry in France.

Attendances Limited

In Paris a few theatres quickly reopened, using projectionists not yet mobilized or too old or physically unfit. But exhibition during wartime is subject to very special conditions.

A first condition is that no theatre will receive at one time more than 300 persons, due to the danger of air raids. Shelters will have to be organized on the theatre's premises or in the neighborhood.

Secondly, the shows will have to close at 8:30 P. M. Special exceptions have been granted to 83 theatres.

To remedy the lack of operators the French branch of MGM organized, in the first week of hostilities, special and free courses of study for projectionists. These courses were given at the Paris MGM offices and were open to everyone not subject to call to the colors, as well as to women, provided they were younger than 45 years.

The "Intersyndicale Representation" of the French industry also organized free courses and a school for projectionists.

There are 83 motion picture theatres open in Paris which are allowed to operate up to 11 p. m.

The bigger theatres such as the Rex, Gaumont-Palace, Marignan and Normandie, have closed due to the limitation to 300 patrons.

The 83 cinemas opened include: 16 newsreel theatres, 10 first run houses and 59 district cinemas.

These 83 cinemas represent about one-third of the 300 theatres in Paris.

Chiefly Revival Films

Up to now, except for three American films in their original speaking versions, all the programs have been made up with revivals of American and French films.

Thus the programs of the five specialized cinemas of the Champs Elysee in American speaking films have included these last weeks "Danger, Love at Work," "The Thin Man," "She Married Her Boss" and "Peter Ibbetson." On the other hand, "Confessions of a Nazi Spy" and "Wuthering Heights" continue in their original versions.

New pictures shown in Paris since the war have been "Five Came Back," "Return of the Cisco Kid," "Valley Without Law," and the British "St. Martin's Lane," all in original versions with French sub-titles.

No new French film has been shown since the war broke.

In the provinces most of the cinemas are still open but for many with a reduced number of weekly performances.

The newsreel cinemas are the most successful ones. Besides the English and French reels of the war, they include documents of the German newsreels. Thus the French public has seen through Paramount News the occupation of the Danzig by the German troops and the operations in Poland.

In the "Zone des Armes" special performances for the troops have been organized by the Cinema Sections of the French Army.

Distributors Reduce Activities

Nearly all the distributing companies in Paris have remained open but of course with reduced activities. All the branches of the American companies are carrying on their work with small staffs, including many women and the oldest men not called to the colors.

For instance, all the young men of RKO Radio have been mobilized and this company in France has presented to the Republic over 40 men for military services.

In the branch companies, many managers have been called.

Under these conditions, and due to the number of persons who have left Paris, mobilized or gone to the Western and Southern provinces, business continues very quietly in Paris. Box office receipts are scarcely enough to pay the operating expenses.

French Production Resuming

At the time the war broke, there were about 25 films in production. A few of them which were near their finish have been concluded in haste. But there are about 15 important films which have been interrupted, among them "Remorques," co-starring Jean Gabin and Michel Morgan; "Le Corsaire," starring Charles Boyer; "Paris-New York."

About 25 films are in the cutting rooms, unfinished.

Despite this situation, the majority of the French studios have formed new technical staffs with non-mobilized technicians and are ready to operate anew.

In Government circles there is a tendency and even a wish that the industry return to greater activity. War must not kill the French film industry as it did in 1914-1918.

Since the war, all cinema matters are under a branch of the propaganda section of the Information Department, whose chief is Jean Giraudoux.

The chief of the film and photographic branch is Yves Chataigneau, who deals with matters of production and exportation as well as the censorship.

U.S. Majors Set to Hold Branches and Business in France, Says Smith

Harold Smith, European representative of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, said in Paris this week that the American majors have no intention of closing their offices in France. He informed the French industry that the American companies would keep doing business in France as long as possible. "Each company," said Mr. Smith, "will hold on as long as it can . . . as long as personnel can be controlled and expenses met." It must be remembered, however, that certain companies had received subsidies from the parent company in the United States, and since the declaration of war, the French branches have not recieved the subsidy, that the parent companies can not now send them to their affiliates in France.

"It also must be specified that the American economic situation has been strained by the war," he said. "What the French motion picture industry is experiencing at this time, the American industry in Hollywood is experiencing in a large proportion.

"Economically, the American distributors in France are more affected than it would appear," he continued. "Their general expenses are enormous; their offices are large and the personnel numerous. In spite of all this, the French affiliates of Paramount, Columbia, United Artists, Universal, RKO, Warner Bros., MGM and Twentieth Century-Fox have all decided to maintain business near normal in France."

At the beginning of the war most of the American companies in France were operating branches in Marseilles, Lyons, Lille, Bordeaux and Strasbourg. Presumably all the offices are open except those in Strasbourg where normal business is disrupted because of firing near the German border.

Mr. Smith cited the difficulties and impossibilities of obtaining permits for traveling in France and for transportation for film. The statement ended with an appeal to ease the limit set on the number of persons who can be admitted to any one showing.

FRENCH PLAN PROPAGANDA FILMS

reels can be shown in France, or exported, without the visa of this film branch.

A great desire of the Government would be to resume the production of French films.

This presents many difficulties of which the first is the matter of money investment and amortization.

In the present conditions French films will net little receipts in French territory. But foreign countries would likely buy French films of quality, it is believed.

The production of French films would be made under Government auspices, as every film would be a matter of propaganda. But France does not intend to make violent propaganda films in the Russian or German manner.

The French idea would be to make artistic pictures of the highest quality, showing French life.

The first work will be to group all authors, screenplay writers, studio and laboratories workers, directors, players, not mobilized.

It is already agreed that the French stars would abandon the hope of big salaries.

In a fan publication, "Pour Voos," O. P. Gilbert, a French author, gives the suggestion of a "Control Committee," including such directors as Rene Clair, Jacques Feyder, Jean Renoir, Julien Duvivier, such authors as Marcel Achard, Sacha Guitry, Marcel Pagnol, such players as Charles Boyer, Pierre Fresnay, Louis Jouvet.

The first work of the cinema branch of the Information Department will be to finish all films stopped by the war.

This is an important problem when one considers the known amount of the financial investment.

Foreign buyers are expecting prints of those films for which they have paid guarantees.

New Impetus to Industry

The second task will be to give new impetus and organization to the French cinema.

It is clear that the French public wants something besides revivals of French and foreign films.

Budgets will be studied to reduce them 50 per cent.

On the other hand, advantage will be taken of the present circumstances to make a full reorganization of the French industry.

The French technicians would have an automatic priority for employment, and it will be arranged that film studio workers would be employed all the year without interruption.

Such are the intentions of the Cinema Section of the French Government. The French film industry, now the second in the world, is ready to resume pre-war activities and on a more solid basis.

French Industry Demands Reopening of Theatres

The French motion picture industry, according to La Cinematographie Francaise, asks that all theatres be reopened.

To reopen, a theatre must get the Government's permission, and the maximum number of persons for any one performance is strictly limited. At present the maximum figure is 300 persons for Paris. The exhibitors protest that even a small theatre cannot live with an audience restricted to so small a number. In the early days of the war theatre managers would have been glad to have that many patrons—theatres of 1,800 seats have played to less than 30 patrons. The paper holds that the maximum number of people allowed at any one performance must be increased, especially for the matinees when 600 should be the figure, if the theatre has bomb-proof shelters or if shelters are available nearby.

The Commission of Defense alone has the power to fix the number of tickets that may be sold for a given show. The trade paper lists the following "astounding facts": a motion picture of 1,500 seats allowed 40 patrons a showing; a theatre of 1,300 is authorized to use 60 seats and one of 800 seats may have 157 persons each show.

Foreigners Require Permits

No foreigner, even if properly registered under article 64 of the second book of the Code du Travail, may be employed in France without another permit from the local Registery Office. According to a decree published in the Journal Officiel of September 20th, the employer must ask for this special working permit before he gives a job to any non-Frenchman.

The French Industry backed up its protests against the strict limitation of tickets that may be sold for any performance by citing the large number of persons that congregate at large department stores, restaurants, railroad stations, sports events and in the churches. The motion picture men insist that the public would be as safe in theatres as anywhere because theatres may be emptied in time of danger as quickly as any other building. Only 159 theatres out of 350 were running in Paris on October 1st.

La Cinematographie Francaise has also published an appeal to send French war films all over the world. The German war pictures are cited as examples of what the French should be doing in the way of using motion pictures for war propaganda purposes. One paragraph of the article reads:

"It is necessary that the neutral countries, Belgium, Switzerland, the Scandinavian countries, be literally flooded by both French films of a documentary and newsreel nature. And especially Spain and the United States..."

The purpose of this, it is stated, is to show the world the French side of the war, but at the same time the propaganda pictures were being made, regular production should be continued.

ITOA CITES LOW POWER RATES IN OTHER CITIES

Charges for Electricity in Newark 26 Per Cent Less Than in New York

The Independent Theatre Owners Association of New York, Harry Brandt president, is citing detailed comparisons of the electric rates charged exhibitors in New York with those charged in other cities, in its campaign for reductions in New York, started last week and reported then.

Six hundred and sixty-six theatres in New York City would benefit: 228 in Manhattan, 97 in the Bronx, 242 in Brooklyn, 16 in Staten Island and about half of the 166 Long Island houses which are within the city's boundaries.

Cooperation of Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia in obtaining lower electric rates in New York has been requested. David Weinstock, chairman of the ITOA's special light and power committee, in a letter to the Mayor, pointed out that the electric rates in nearly all neighboring cities and towns are cheaper than those in New York. In Stamford, Conn., Mr. Weinstock said the rate is 30.4 per cent less and in Newark it is 26 per cent less, with another reduction in rates scheduled in Newark after the first of the year.

The ITOA requests the Mayor to enlist the services of the Department of Water, Gas and Electricity or any other city engineering department to compile the necessary data that may be required for a formal hearing before the Public Service Commission.

"Because of depressed conditions in the theatre industry we feel it necessary to ask of you what may be done towards securing lower electric rates in this city," said the ITOA's petition.

"Our electric bill is a major item of expense," it continued. "We have made every effort to reduce the amount of current consumed on our premises, retaining only absolute necessities for the conduct of our business. Despite the major changes, our bills are still entirely too high. We feel that the fault lies with the rate structure of the Consolidated Edison systems and that their rates can and should undergo a considerable reduction.

Other Rates Compared

"We have made some comparative studies of neighboring and other large cities, and it may interest you to learn how much higher are the rates in New York City. As an example, we outline herewith a few instances. The following tables show in percentage how much cheaper rates are in cities listed.

5000 Kwh.	Stamford	Newark	Los Angeles	Chicago
25 Kw.	30.4%	26%	59.7%	35.5%

"You will note the considerable differences in rates; we are at a complete loss to understand why our rates should be so much higher. All of the cities listed are served by private utilities, not municipal plants and all are dependent on coal as the major fuel constituent. We fail to see where transmission and distribution costs should be materially different in this city as compared to the others above listed.

"Some of the cities are greater in area; some have both alternating current and direct current; most have about the same peak conditions; and are comparable in most respects.

Percentage of Decrease

"As a further indication that rates should be reduced, the following table shows the percentage of decrease in the rates of 1939 over 1934. Comparisons are made on the same basis of 5,000 kwh. with a demand of 25 Kw. The table also indicates the present cost at the lowest rate available.

5000	New York City	Stamford	Newark	Los Angeles	Chicago
Kwh.	$258.75	$177	$191.50	$104.33	$167
25 Kw.	6.21%	33.2%	14.47%	21.69%	0%

"From this table you will note that there has been practically no reduction by the Consolidated Edison Company, this despite the fact that New York City rates still produce the highest bill of all the cities listed. Furthermore, I noted an announcement of a reduction in rates in Newark by the Public Service Electric and Gas Company of New Jersey, effective January 1, 1940. This reduction amounts to $1,100,700, and is being extended to both commercial and domestic consumers.

Points to Savings

"Two years ago that same company announced a reduction in rates which amounted to $1,251,400, which resulted in a considerable saving to all theatre operators there. The rates of the Public Service Electric and Gas Company of New Jersey, under the Newark listing, are 26 percent lower than New York City rates. Now, with the reduction announced for Jan. 1, 1940, it will make for that much more of a difference between the rates.

Sales Drives Keep Executives Afield

Distribution and theatre sales executives were active in the field this week in the interests of film rental and booking drives, and new product.

Warner Brothers announced that the fourth annual Sears Drive will get under way December 24th and will run through April 13th. Meanwhile the Twentieth Century-Fox Sidney Kent Drive was experiencing a last minute push, with Herman Wobber, general sales manager, and M. A. Levy, drive leader, continuing their swing around exchanges. The drive will be concluded with a session at the New York branch Monday.

Warner Home Office Meetings

Plans for the Warner sales drive were completed at a series of home office meetings, attended by executives and district managers, and presided over by Gradwell L. Sears, general sales manager. Attending were Major Albert Warner, vice-president; Charles Einfeld, director of advertising and publicity; Carl Leserman, assistant general sales manager; Roy Haines, eastern and Canadian sales manager; Ben Kalmenson, western and southern sales manager; Mort Blumenstock, in charge of advertising and publicity in the east; Ed Schnitzer, eastern district manager; Bob Smeltzer, central district manager; Wolfe Cohen, Canadian district manager; Henry Herbel, midwest district manager; Fred Jack, southern district manager; Rud Lohrenz, prairie district manager, and W. E. Callaway, west coast district manager.

District managers will act as captains of their territories under the supervision of Mr. Haines and Mr. Kalmenson. Competition for the awards, which total $25,000 in cash, again will be set up according to districts.

Norman H. Moray, Vitaphone sales manager, arrived in Hollywood to confer with Jack L. Warner, Hal B. Wallis and Gordon Hollingshead on the company's short subject program for 1940-'41.

Republic Heads Return

Herbert J. Yates and James R. Grainger, president of Republic, returned to New York from a flying business trip to Chicago, Dallas, Atlanta and Washington.

Herman Gluckman, Republic's New York franchise holder, will give awards to salesmen and bookers in two drives currently underway. One dating drive ends January 27th. Percentage awards will be given to salesmen and bookers in a drive for new dates and rebookings on 1935-36 and 1936-37 product.

Skouras Back in New York

Spyros Skouras, operating head of National Theatres, has returned to New York from divisional meetings on the coast.

Leonard Goldenson and Leon Netter, Paramount home office theatre officials, are planning to leave New York this week for midwest and southern conferences.

G. Ralph Branton, Tri-States Theatre Corporation business manager, presided over a luncheon meeting, at the Kirkwood hotel in Des Moines, of 30 theatre managers and assistants.

A cent-a-person amusement tax was levied by the city council of Charleston, W. Va. All tickets, even passes, for motion pictures, circuses, carnivals, dances, athletic events and "all amusement for private gain" will be taxed one cent. The tax is expected to yield $30,000 a year.

NEW FILM BOOKS PASS IN REVIEW

Arthur Mayer, the managing director of the Rialto theatre, New York, does a review of Lewis Jacobs' work on motion pictures.

("The Rise of the American Film" by Lewis Jacobs. A critical history of films. 585 pages. Illustrated. Indexed. Cloth. Harcourt Brace & Co., New York. $4.50)

by ARTHUR MAYER

Terry Ramsaye's "A Million and One Nights," the outstanding history of American motion pictures, unfortunately terminates with the year 1925. There is a genuine need for a more up to date and comprehensive work. "The Rise of the American Film," by Mr. Lewis Jacobs is a laudable effort to satisfy this need. The author is obviously a man of great diligence and warm human sympathies. He has personally examined about a thousand pictures, has read some eight hundred books and articles, and is acquainted with the contributions to movies of over five hundred writers, directors and producers. He writes with none of the lusty vigor or intimate acquaintance with picture personalities that marked Mr. Ramsaye's book, and he lacks completely the critical genius of Harry Potamkin, or the poetical insight of Vachel Lindsay. Nonetheless, "The Rise of the American Film" covers the field so much more thoroughly than any of its predecessors that it constitutes a valuable addition to the literature available for students of American movies. It is, however, a disappointment for it could well have been the long required, authoritative guide and text book on the subject. Unfortunately, Mr. Jacobs does not approach his subject in the detached and scientific spirit necessary for the production of such a work. It is desirable for an author to have a thesis and vigorous convictions. But, to be persuasive and to be constructive, he must not be so ardent or eager a partisan that he fails to adequately present conflicting tendencies and points of view. Mr. Jacobs is prone to see everything in terms of black and white rather than in the infinite varieties of shades requisite for scholarly and critical analysis. He is given to arbitrary pronouncements on controversial matters and to sweeping generalizations where tentative speculations would be in order.

All of this makes for an interesting and stimulating book, but not for an entirely reliable one.

"The Rise of the American Film" studies American pictures as a new art, a social agency and a major industry. Mr. Jacobs cannot conceive that movies are merely a source of public entertainment and of escape from the worries of everyday life. He is certain, "that most people have become social minded," and insists, as he does, that the industry escape from its ivory tower. It must share with literature and drama, the responsibility of arousing, "an awareness of wide spread injustice and economic discrepancies as well as search for a new code of individual and social values. Evasion and dilatoriness in the movies in such times as these is vitally harmful because public attention is diverted from important problems when it is most necessary that they be known and aired in discussion."

ORDER DISPLAY OF AMERICAN FLAG

Associated Theatres of Detroit has directed all circuit houses to display an American flag of suitable size in the box office. Alex Schreiber is circuit head.

I would not, if I could, discourage the genuine zeal for human rights which animates all that Mr. Jacobs has to say about the motion picture as a force for social uplift. Nonetheless, he does his readers an injustice when he underestimates the difficulties of the course he advocates. The public is more entertainment minded and less social minded than he acknowledges. He is surely aware that neither "Juarez" nor "Confessions of a Nazi Spy," the outstanding recent examples of democratic propaganda pictures, met with an enthusiastic reception at the American box office. "Boy Slaves" which pictured child labor conditions in the South was a complete failure, as were "Are We Civilized?", "This Is America," and "Our Daily Bread" in their day. The record of social minded pictures, with a few encouraging exceptions such as, "Zola" and "Fury" is a depressing one. If they are to continue to be produced as I, for one, strongly hope, they will either have to receive much wider patronage or they will have to be liberally financed by progressive minded groups in the community.

Mr. Jacobs seems to me similarly unrealistic in his discussion of artistic pictures. "The acclaim that greeted 'The Informer,'" he says proves, "that there are always audiences for serious artistic efforts." Nothing of the sort is true, and it would be far more constructive to admit it. There have been only occasional and limited audiences for artistic pictures. On the whole, their box office record has been so disastrous that the best way to scare an exhibitor from playing a picture is to label it "artistic." The grosses of such foreign art productions as "Kermesse Heroique," "Carnet de Bal" or "Lower Depths" outside of New York City were catastrophic. The great American masterpieces like "Sunrise" and "Greed" proved disappointing when they were released just as a minor masterpiece like "A Man to Remember" proved disappointing this season. Occasional artistic pictures will continue to be produced because there will always be men and women who, by the very nature of their being, must create beauty. It is the public taste, spoiled by the saccharine and sentimental diet on which it has so long fed, which must be educated to demand and to patronize artistic pictures. Of the necessity for this long and painful process, there is no inkling in Mr. Jacobs' text.

That any artistic or social content pictures are produced in Hollywood would be amazing if Mr. Jacobs' conception of the industry's financial set-up were correct. He sees it today under the control of two financial groups: "The peak figures in American finance, Morgan and Rockefeller, either indirectly through sound-equipment control or directly by financial control or backing, now own the motion picture industry. Competition in the motion picture industry today has narrowed down to a fight between the two major financial interests of the country for the balance of power within the eight major studios."

Laboring under such an over-simplified picture of the present economic status of the industry, Mr. Jacobs arrives at some startling and, I think, superficial conclusions. "The financial investment entailed in their pictures is so huge that any experimentation is considered too speculative to be understood," is simply untrue.

Hollywood experiments whether judicious or otherwise, run into hundreds of thousands each year. "The profits to be made from expensive pictures were obviously limited once the peak of theatre expansion had been reached. . . . the really steady income was to be got from the comparatively inexpensive production pictures graded as 'program' or 'B' pictures," is only a partial and misleading truth. The big pictures are utilized to sell the "B's." Without the "A's" to bolster their sales, there would be little if any profit in the "program" pictures.

The author fails, I believe, to analyze as fully as he should, the present situation in distribution and exhibition. Block-booking, blind-buying and major circuit control may be responsible for some of the weaknesses in production which we all recognize.

Mr. Jacobs is apparently more of an aesthete than a businessman. He is on far firmer ground when he analyzes movies as an art and discussess the contributions of its outstanding directors and producers to its technical progress. One of the best chapters of his book is devoted to Walt Disney. He understands and writes appreciatively of Chaplin as a performer though he underestimates Chaplin's services to movie form and processes. He analyzes, with complete success if not originality, Griffith's contributions to cinema technique and the sentimentality and overdramatization which were his flagrant shortcomings. On the other hand, it is grossly unfair to say that when, "he became a member of United Artists, he became a part of that circle of producers whose only criterion for movie art was the box office." Mr. Griffith's associates at United Artists were Chaplin, Pickford and Fairbanks. As a group, they have never been accused of an exclusively commercial approach to picture production. Mr. Jacobs, however, is unreasonably prejudiced against anything bearing a commercial label.

Except for a few pictures like "The River" and "The City," business enterprise is accountable for all of America's movie triumphs as well as its movie failures. He describes Von Stroheim as "a martyr to the great god, Commerce: harassed by financiers, he fought persistently for the freedom to report and interpret and criticize life."

I was intimately associated with Metro executives when the bills were coming in for "Greed" and with Paramount executives when the bills were coming in for "Wedding March."

If anyone was harassed, it was the financiers and not Mr. Von Stroheim.

"Broken Lullaby" was not, he writes, "a financial success according to Paramount standards. Just what is meant by the cryptic clause I have italicized is not quite clear, but there can be no question that "Broken Lullaby" was a financial failure according to any standards, Paramount's, Price, Waterhouse's or Mr. Jacobs'. He says that the success of "It Happened One Night," "disconcerted Hollywood." This will be news to many of us who were excited by advance reports of its merits. "The Lost Patrol," he suggests, "surprised the producers when it turned out to be a success—a success created by word of mouth advertising."

I had the privilege of handling the opening of "The Lost Patrol" on Broadway, and can assure Mr. Jacobs that it opened to record breaking business prior to any word of mouth advertising.

"A barrage of publicity made DeMille renowned as a producer of the lavish, the provocative, the daring. . . . a name implanted in the public's consciousness, and for a while this alone was sufficient to carry his films to financial success." As an ex-publicist, I want every possible credit given to the advertising fraternity, but surely so simple and naive an explanation of DeMille's success is unworthy of Mr. Jacobs' critical capacities.

It is for the Russians that Mr. Jacobs reserves his highest praises. They, "consolidated the results of their research and experimentation into a unique body of concrete principles, which have become the basis of all modern film making."

The basis of all modern film production was laid by two good Americans, Porter and Griffith, from whom the Russians borrowed far more than we have from them.

This is not to say that some of our best directors have not been influenced by Russian technique, although possibly to a lesser degree than they have been affected by the German camera angles and visual composition. Indeed, Mr. Jacobs has a surprising tendency to underestimate the German contribution. He says that, "The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari," "was never significantly followed up in America." On the contrary, "Caligari" has been the granddaddy of every American horror film from "Frankenstein" and "Dracula" to this day.

I notice some other factual errors which can be corrected in later editions. Sam Goldwyn had no connection with Goldwyn Pictures at the time of the formation of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. The NRA did not, "prevent block-booking and blind-buying of films." The Music Hall is not, "a gigantic failure," nor "The March of Time" sensationally popular." Eisenstein was recalled by the Soviet Government to Russia, prior to the cutting of "Thunder Over Mexico." That is the reason why the picture was not cut by him, but by other and less expert hands. Herbert Kline was the producer of "Heart of Spain," and the Civil Liberties picture which Frontier Films was making is, unfortunately, still incomplete.

It is not a factual error, but a legitimate critical opinion to say of Frank Capra, "his success has obscured his weaknesses and made a virtue of superficiality." Nonetheless, such an appraisal seems to one reader an indication of the weaknesses and superficialities which mar the undeniable merits of "The Rise of the American Film."

LET'S GO TO THE MOVIES, by William Clayton Pryor and Helen Sloman Pryor. 183 pages. Harcourt, Brace & Co., New York. 1939. $2.50.

Here is a welcome contribution to the growing number of books about the fabulous film industry. It is an informal and informative treatise and will leave with any reader a better understanding and keen appreciation of how movies are made and what makes a good one.

The authors' aim is to assist audiences in standards of judgment so that intelligent criticism will be aroused and applied. In lucid, simple and coherent style, they prove that it takes more than the stars and even a good story to make a good movie.

In detailing the complex work of production, the Pryors analyze a complete program beginning with the newsreel.

The chapter on direction is especially illuminating, outlining the qualifications and duties of a competent director who creates mood and tempo and must know a thousand shadings of timing and tempo if his work is to be effective.

Those God-like creatures, the stars, come next in importance largely because their work is related so closely to that of the director—the players under the guidance of the directors recreate in visual form the characters the authors created in words and make those characters and the situations in which they find themselves live and breathe and move.

Of course, without cameras there could be no movies so the role of cameraman is mighty important. The authors reveal what he does and why, rather than how he does it. He must be a lighting expert in particular to create proper mood or atmosphere and light each important player in order to accentuate certain characteristics and subdue others.

In subsequent chapters, functions of the costume, make-up, sets, editing and wardrobe departments are disclosed and, through the eyes of the authors, we sense the skill and ingenuity of these unsung stars of the films.

With "Let's Go to the Movies," as a measuring stick, audiences with new understanding, appreciation and discrimination will find increased enjoyment from their movies and will get more than a mere quarter's or half dollar's worth from their trip to the theatre.

The book, finally, leaves the intimation that this most democratic of all art forms owes its growth and gradual improvement during a comparatively brief period, more to customers than any other factor. Films can advance aesthetically only as fast as the vast vast audiences will permit.—Mary Harden Looram.

Pittsburgh Newsreel Theatre

The Palace theatre of Pittsburgh has been converted into a Newsreel theatre. This theatre, operated by the Harris Amusement Company, will be the first newsreel house in Pittsburgh.

Four circuits including more than 100 houses have just signed for RKO-Radio's 1939-40 pictures. These are R. E. Griffith Circuit with headquarters in Dallas and Kansas City; Charles Morse Circuit of New England; the Mamos Circuit of Pittsburgh and the Gregory Circuit of Indianapolis.

IN COURTS

Plea to Reopen Radtke Patent Case Is Denied

Edward A. Conger, federal judge, in New York this week handed down an opinion in which he denied the application of Virgil C. Crites for a new trial in his patent infringement suit against Warner Brothers, Radtke Patents Corporation, Albert A. Radtke, Leonard Day and Thomas A. Martin. The suit was dismissed following a trial on July 6th by Judge Mortimer W. Byers. Mr. Crites claimed that Judge Byers had been disqualified because he held Radio Corporation of America stock.

Judge Conger ruled that the plaintiff had waived his right to object during the trial. The suit involved alleged infringement of a patent called "Methods Of and Means For Optically Reproducing Sound."

RCA Manufacturing Named Defendant in Patent Suit

The RCA Manufacturing Company, Inc., is named defendant in a suit filed in the United States district court at Wilmington, Del., charging infringement of a patent for an invention in an "electrical system." The action was filed by Edward H. Loftin of Boonton, N. J., trustee and administrator.

Mr. Loftin charges that on October 16, 1934, a patent was issued to Ernest A. Tubbs for an invention in an "Electrical system" and that later Mr. Tubbs sold and transferred the letters patent to him. He contends that RCA has been and still is "wilfully and extensively infringing" by manufacturing, selling and causing to be sold devices embodying the patent, which is used in home and auto radio receivers.

Two Omaha Theatres Opened in Suit Moves

Two theatres were opened in the main business section of Omaha this week as part of a legal battle between R. D. Goldberg, circuit owner, and Tri-States Theatres of Des Moines. Tri-States opened the Paramount on a stage-screen policy with a 55 cent top and Mr. Goldberg opened the State with double features, an hour of short subjects and newsreels and a canned food giveaway at a 25 cent admission for afternoons and 35 cents at night.

An anti-trust suit recently was filed by Mr. Goldberg and a previous suit by Tri-States asked the federal court to keep Mr. Goldberg from opening the State because of an agreement to keep the house dark.

Argue 20th-Fox Suit

A suit for $1,000,000 against Twentieth Century-Fox filed by Robert Sheets in which he claims plagiarism of his scenario in "The Road to Glory" was argued this week in federal district court in Washington. Mr. Sheets claims his scenario bore the same title as the film and that pages of dialogue in his scenario were almost identical with that of the picture. Counsel for the defendant admitted there was a similarity in the dialogue but charged that Mr. Sheets wrote his scenario after seeing the film, which was released in 1936.

MGM Wins Appeal

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in London this week won a high court appeal from the judgment of £3,400 (about $13,500) awarded last March to Elizabeth Allen. The actress had sued charging breach of a contract she claimed to have signed with MGM, calling for her appearance in a role in "The Citadel," made by the company in England.

Frederic Ullman, Sr., Nickelodeon Exhibitor

Frederic Ullman, Sr., 75, Buffalo motion picture theatre owner, died November 11th after a five days' illness. Funeral services were on November 12th. His son, Frederic Ullman, Jr., is vice-president, general manager and director of Pathe News, Inc.

Mr. Ullman, Sr., a graduate of New York University and Columbia Law School, first converted an old barn into a nickelodeon back in the Nineties. Later with Mitchell Mark he built the old Family theatre in Buffalo and became owner of theatres in Syracuse, New York and Youngstown, Ohio.

Buddy Doyle Dies

Buddy Doyle, 38, singer and comedian, died in New York on November 10th. He had been appearing at Billy Rose's Diamond Horseshoe, where he impersonated Eddie Cantor. Mr. Doyle's real name was Benjamin Taubenhaus. Mr. Doyle appeared in "At a Talkie Studio" (1929) and played Eddie Cantor in "The Great Ziegfeld."

Isa Bluette

Isa Bluette, 41, Italian motion picture and music hall actress, died November 10th at Turin, Italy, following her deathbed marriage to her stage partner, Nuto Navarrini. She had appeared in theatres in Paris, London and Berlin.

Marie L. Day

The funeral of Mrs. Wilson Day, known on the stage for fifty years as a character actress under the name Marie L. Day, was held in Cleveland on November 11th. Her most famous characterization was that of "Aunt Miranda" in "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm."

Anna Bates

Anna Bates on the American stage from 1890 to 1927, died in Philadelphia on November 8th after an illness of almost a year. She would have been 70 years old last Friday. Miss Bates' last appearance was as "Mammy Lou" in "My Maryland" in 1927.

Paul Sadyker

Paul Sadyker, 50, assistant to Ernest Wetterstein, manager of Monogram's Paris office, died at his home in Paris on November 5th, according to word received at the Monogram home office.

Sidney Spier

Sidney Spier, 28, press agent for Billy Rose, died at Mt. Sinai Hospital, New York, November 14th of heart disease. He handled publicity for all of Mr. Rose's enterprises, including the World's Fair Aquacade, the Diamond Horseshoe and the Casa Manana.

McCoy Wins Award

A jury verdict of $37,000, including interest, was awarded Tim McCoy, western star, against William M. Pizor, president of Imperial Pictures, Inc., after a trial in New York supreme court this week. Mr. Pizor was charged with breaching a contract made on February 4, 1936, in which he agreed to use McCoy for eight westerns at $4,000 for each. McCoy testified that none of the films was produced.

Ordered to Show Cause

Hedy Lamarr has been ordered to show cause in superior court in Los Angeles Monday on why she should not be enjoined from appearing in a stage play, "Salome." Nicholas Nayfact, Loew's, Inc., filed an affidavit that the actress had been under an exclusive contract to Loew's since September 30, 1937, and had been denied permission to take the "Salome" role. A temporary restraining order was granted.

OBITUARIES

George Nicholls, Director, Killed

George Nicholls, Jr., 42, motion picture director, was killed November 13th when his car plunged 700 feet into Coldwater Canyon near Hollywood. Mrs. Acta Barnett, his sister-in-law, crawled more than a mile for help.

Mr. Nicholls, whose father also was a director, acted with Mary Pickford and other stars under the direction of D. W. Griffith. At 17 he joined the Selig stock company with Jack Pickford, and later was a film editor.

Among the pictures directed by Mr. Nicholls are "Anne of Green Gables," "Chasing Yesterday," "The Return of Peter Grimm," "The Big Game," "The Soldier and the Lady," and "Army Girl." Mr. Nicholls was to have begun work the day of the accident on a picture starring Richard Dix and Chester Morris.

Surviving are his wife and two children, George 3rd, 16, and Sue, 9.

Lois Weber, Film Director, Dies

Lois Weber, one of the few women motion picture directors, died in Hollywood November 13th after several years' illness. Anita Stewart, Billie Dove and Claire Windsor were among those helped to stardom by Miss Weber. She made Mildred Harris, first wife of Charles Chaplin, a star in "Borrowed Clothes" and "Husbands Only."

Miss Weber wrote, directed and produced four pictures a year on an allowance of $50,000 a picture and half the net profits.

Miss Weber was born in Pennsylvania and educated in Pittsburgh. First a singer and concert pianist, she turned to writing. One of her plays, "The Drunkard," has been revived. She was married to Phillips Smalley, actor, in 1906 and they were divorced in 1922. Four years later she married Capt. Harry Gantz. This marriage also was annulled. Her last picture was "The Marriage Clause," 1927.

"Ranger Bill" Miller, 61, Early Film Cowboy, Dies

William Joseph ("Ranger Bill") Miller, 61, one of the first motion picture cowboys in Hollywood, died there November 12th of a stroke suffered Saturday at his ranch. He had retired many years ago. Mr. Miller identified himself as the adopted son of Buffalo Bill Cody, and rode Buffalo Bill's "King, the Wonder Horse" to his first motion picture fame.

Etienne Girardot Dies; Screen and Stage Actor

Etienne Girardot, 83, died in Hollywood on November 10th after a two day illness. Mr. Girardot had played character roles in many motion pictures and had been in scores of Broadway plays. He had just finished a film role in the "Hunchback of Notre Dame."

Mr. Girardot was born in England. He played for three years on Broadway in the title part in "Charley's Aunt."

His screen career began at the old Vitagraph company in Brooklyn. In 1930 he went to Hollywood. Among his numerous pictures were "Hearts Divided," "The Garden Murder Case," "Music Goes Round and Round," "Metropolitan," "Spring in Paris," "In Old Kentucky" and "The Road Back."

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

COAST GUARD: Randolph Scott, Ralph Bellamy, Frances Dee, Walter Connolly—Fine "B" product. Stand alone in small towns and do itself credit. Strong half in the big spots.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

GOLDEN BOY: Barbara Stanwyck, Adolphe Menjou, William Holden, Joseph Calleia—A fine picture. Will please. Played October 13-15.—Harry Hobolth, De Luxe Theatre, Imlay City, Mich. Small town patronage.

GOOD GIRLS GO TO PARIS: Melvyn Douglas, Joan Blondell, Walter Connolly—Did not draw like it should and believe it belongs on a midweek program; certainly not on Sunday. Was a good picture, however, and pleased all who saw it. Running time, 78 minutes. Played October 22-23.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

LET US LIVE: Henry Fonda, Maureen O'Sullivan, Ralph Bellamy—Very good but again business was unexpectedly low. The patrons simply have not got the money owing to extremely low prices for local products. Played October 18-19.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

MAN THEY COULDN'T HANG, THE: Boris Karloff, Robert Wilcox, Roger Pryor—They'll come to see it. Played October 25.—Harry Hobolth, De Luxe Theatre, Imlay City, Mich. Small town patronage.

MR. SMITH GOES TO WASHINGTON: Jean Arthur, James Stewart, Edward Arnold, Thomas Mitchell, Claude Rains, Guy Kibbee, Beulah Bondi, Eugene Pallette, Ruth Donnelly—Here's a business getter. Will click with the masses 100 per cent. Dust off the extra seats. You are going to need them in the smallest town or the biggest city. Running time, 130 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

First National

COWBOY QUARTERBACK, THE: Bert Wheeler, Marie Wilson, Gloria Dickson—Very, very ordinary. So short had to build it up with a lot of shorts making the program cost more than one of the better features would cost. And it was just a mess of hokum supposed to be funny. Running time, 56 minutes. Played October 13-14.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

EACH DAWN I DIE: James Cagney, George Raft, Jane Bryan, George Bancroft—Good. Combined with "On Borrowed Time." Don't know just which picture they came to see but they seemed to enjoy the combination. Running time, 90 minutes. Played October 22-23.—A. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

EACH DAWN I DIE: James Cagney, George Raft, Jane Bryan, George Bancroft—A prison picture that has too much sock in it. Too tough for the average theatre patron; as a result the box office suffers. Certainly not worth the allocation it is put to us at. The two stars are excellent in their parts and the criticism is the plot. Should never have been made for the public. Running time, 92 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Grand National

SIX-GUN RHYTHM: Tex Fletcher, Joan Barclay—A very good western. This was "Tex's" first offering and was exceptionally well received. With improvements in production values, Fletcher undoubtedly would become one of our top-flight western stars. Running time, 57 minutes. Played November 3-4.—James H. Tobin, Premier Theatre, Newburyport, Mass. General patronage.

SUNSET MURDER CASE: Sally Rand, Henry King and His Orchestra, Sugar Kane—Better little picture than expected. Henry King's music fine. Sugar Kane also good.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BLACKMAIL: Edward G. Robinson, Ruth Hussey, Bobs Watson, Gene Lockhart—Typical Robinson picture. It's OK. Played October 18-19.—Harry Hobolth, De Luxe Theatre, Imlay City, Mich. Small town patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box-office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

What the Picture Did for Me
MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

DANCING CO-ED: Lana Turner, Richard Carlson, Ann Rutherford, Leon Errol, Artie Shaw and His Orchestra—This one is in there. Strong "B" product. Hardly a leader in the big spots but a strong second half. Running time, 85 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

FAST AND FURIOUS: Ann Sothern, Franchot Tone—Entertaining programmer that gets by nicely. Running time, 70 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

GOODBYE MR. CHIPS: Robert Donat, Greer Garson—It may be a good picture in some places but like the other English pictures in the past, it is just plain boresome. Don't use the trailer as it will kill most of your patronage. Ninety per cent of patronage of the theatre today go to forget their troubles; they want to laugh with good clever comedy, sigh with fast moving romance and thrill to spectacles of air, land and sea. One star in this picture would have made a world of difference. The sooner they stop making these grand opera, English and Russian films and get down to earth, the better things will be all around. If Metro will just compare notes with the public with "Citadel," "Maytime," "Pygmalion," "Chips" and other grand flops and set them alongside of "Mutiny," "San Francisco," "Boy's Town," "Let Freedom Ring" and other real hits they would have no difficulty in making pictures to please. The people are still interested in the theatre but the titles are running them out. There are three other major companies who are making the right stuff; the others better start soon. Running time 114 minutes. Played October 29-31.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

GOODBYE MR. CHIPS: Robert Donat, Greer Garson—Grand picture which we believe enthralled the majority of those who saw it. Some of the young folks could not get interested but that is to be expected. Did very poor business on it. Running time, 114 minutes. Played October 29-30.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

LADY OF THE TROPICS: Hedy Lamarr, Robert Taylor—The only MGM picture played at a fair price that made money the past year.—Harry Hobolth, De Luxe Theatre, Imlay City, Mich. Small town patronage.

MAISIE: Robert Young, Ann Sothern—Now, there's a picture! It's one of those kind which pleases practically everybody. Has lots of laughs. Running time, 74 minutes. Played October 27-28.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

MIRACLES FOR SALE: Robert Young, Florence Rice—Disappointed in this one. Was considered just ordinary by the few who saw it. Running time, 71 minutes. Played November 1-2.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

ON BORROWED TIME: Lionel Barrymore, Bobs Watson, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Beulah Bondi, Una Merkel—Where could you find a better combination than Lionel Barrymore and Bobs Watson? Although very unusual and not too well liked by some of our patrons, we believe the majority liked it very much. Running time, 99 minutes. Played October 8-9.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

ON BORROWED TIME: Lionel Barrymore, Bobs Watson, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Beulah Bondi, Una Merkel—They seemed to have heard good comments on this before we played it. Business good. They mentioned they wanted to see "Mr. Brink" before he came to see them. Running time, 99 minutes. Played October 22-23.—A. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

6,000 ENEMIES: Walter Pidgeon, Rita Johnson—And here is still another made for duals. Action picture which pleased generally but had no draw. Running time, 62 minutes. Played October 6-7.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

STRONGER THAN DESIRE: Walter Pidgeon, Virginia Bruce—Here's another of those programmers hardly worthy of single billings but better than most of those made for the second half of duals. Did very poor business. Running time, 78 minutes. Played October 18-19.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

TARZAN FINDS A SON! Johnny Weissmuller, Maureen O'Sullivan—Ah, there's the picture for draw! Personally would not care if we never saw another Tarzan but our people eat it up. Have not heard such favorable comment in months. Running time, 82 minutes. Played October 20-21.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

THEY ALL COME OUT: Rita Johnson, Tom Neal—Strong programmer. OK for the small towns. Strong second for the higher towns. Running time, 70 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

THUNDER AFLOAT: Wallace Beery, Chester Morris, Virginia Grey—On par with the better Wallace Beery pictures. Plenty of action. Very little romance. Pleased average Sunday business. Running time, 92 minutes.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

WOMEN, THE: Norma Shearer, Joan Crawford, Rosalind Russell, Paulette Goddard, Mary Boland, Joan Fontaine, Virginia Weidler—No draw for small town. Advertised hard but no business. Played October 26-28.—Harry Hobolth, De Luxe Theatre, Imlay City, Mich. Small town patronage.

Monogram

DOWN THE WYOMING TRAIL: Tex Ritter, Mary Brodell, Charles King—Monogram, please, please, give Charles King a little rest and get a new "heavy" for Ritter. What about it?—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

Paramount

DISPUTED PASSAGE: Dorothy Lamour, John Howard, Akim Tamiroff—A dandy. Will please and draw.—Harry Hobolth, De Luxe Theatre, Imlay City, Mich. Small town patronage.

HONEYMOON IN BALI: Fred MacMurray, Madeleine Carroll, Allan Jones, Helen Broderick, Carolyn Lee—Not particularly big but seemed to please average attendance. The little Lee girl steals the show. Running time, 90 minutes. Played October 22-24.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Walland, Mich. Small town patronage.

NIGHT WORK: Mary Boland, Charles Ruggles—OK for the second half of a double bill. Just misses being the first half. Will remind the oldtimers of Harold Lloyd's "Safety First." Running time, 60 minutes. Played October 29-30.—A. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

RANGE WAR: William Boyd, Russell Hayden—Just a western.—Harry Hobolth, De Luxe Theatre, Imlay City, Mich. Small town patronage.

STAR MAKER, THE: Bing Crosby, Louise Campbell, Ned Sparks, Linda Ware—A fine picture. Will draw.—Harry Hobolth, De Luxe Theatre, Imlay City, Mich. Small town patronage.

TELEVISION SPY: Judith Barrett, William Collier, Sr., William Henry—Average "B" entertainment. Played October 25-27.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

UNION PACIFIC: Joel McCrea, Barbara Stanwyck, Robert Preston, Brian Donlevy, Akim Tamiroff, Lynne Overman—Here's one you can "step on," and will bring results. A really great production. One that will just about satisfy all types of patronage. Paramount's "Jesse James" for 1939. Let your countryside know you are playing "Union Pacific" and they will be there. Running time, 125 minutes. Played October 29-31.—J. K. Burgess, Iris Theatre, Velva, N. D. General and rural patronage.

WHAT A LIFE: Jackie Cooper, Betty Field, Lionel Stander, John Howard—Nice little program picture that will please the most of fans. You should have no trouble in selling this one. Most of the people will advertise it for you once they have seen it. Would be a sure bet in midweek. Running time, 78 minutes. Played November 1-2.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

Republic

ARIZONA KID, THE: Roy Rogers, George Hayes—Average western picture which pleased. Running time, 60 minutes. Played November 3-4.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

BACHELOR MOTHER: Ginger Rogers, David Niven, Charles Coburn—Here is an exceptional comedy. Everybody got a big laugh out of this unusual production. Business was only fair in spite of personal endorsement. Played November 1-2.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

BACHELOR MOTHER: Ginger Rogers, David Niven, Charles Coburn—A nice picture that should make money.—Harry Hobolth, De Luxe Theatre, Imlay City, Mich. Small town patronage.

CAREER: Anne Shirley, Edward Ellis—A very good production, although the ending was not too pleasing to Saturday night patrons. Played October 28.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

IN NAME ONLY: Carole Lombard, Cary Grant, Kay Francis—Fair picture but price too high to make money with a no draw title. Lombard fine.—Harry Hobolth, De Luxe Theatre, Imlay City, Mich. Small town patronage.

METROPOLIS-1939: March of Time No. 13.—Very fine two-reeler.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ESCAPE, THE: Kane Richmond, Amanda Duff, Edward Norris, June Gale—Just a waste of film; suitable maybe for lower half of a dual. No business, and no wonder. Running time, 60 minutes. Played October 31.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

FRONTIER MARSHAL: Randolph Scott, Nancy Kelly, Cesar Romero, Binnie Barnes—A better than average western to regular business. Played October 21.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

IT COULD HAPPEN TO YOU: Stuart Erwin, Gloria Stuart—Good programmer for double bill. Plenty of good comedy. Played October 25-26.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

JESSE JAMES: Tyrone Power, Henry Fonda, Nancy Kelly, Randolph Scott—If you haven't played this, you've missed some real money. Great draw and a great picture. Color helps this picture. Power surprised me in this picture. He did a good job. That boy can act. I played late; still did a very good business. Running time, 110 minutes. Played October 12-14.—J. K. Burgess, Iris Theatre, Velva, N. D. General and rural patronage.

JONES FAMILY IN HOLLYWOOD: Jed Prouty, Spring Byington—This was the annual Hallowe'en party sponsored by the Community Chest. We had a full house and everybody pleased. Played October 31.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

MR. MOTO'S LAST WARNING: Peter Lorre, Ricardo Cortez, John Carradine, Virginia Field—Clever and very interesting. Let's hope they continue to make this series in the future and keep them as good as they were in the past. Running time, 71 minutes. Played October 27-28.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. Small town patronage.

NEWS IS MADE AT NIGHT: Preston Foster, Lynn Bari—Just another of the long list of programmers made exclusively for the lower half of double bills. And it did just that kind of business, too. Running time, 73 minutes. Played October 25-26.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

RAINS CAME, THE: Myrna Loy, Tyrone Power, George Brent—While a fair picture, this one was a distinct disappointment at the box office. Running time, 102 minutes. Played November 1-2.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

SUSANNAH OF THE MOUNTIES: Shirley Temple, Randolph Scott, Margaret Lockwood—This little girl is still tops at the box office for us, although she does not draw as much as she used to. And this type of picture, admitting it was made rather cheaply, goes over big in our small town. Running time, 78 minutes. Played October 15-16.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

WIFE, HUSBAND AND FRIEND: Loretta Young, Warner Baxter, Binnie Barnes, Cesar Romero—We played this rather late which, coupled with rainy weather, held the attendance to a low point. Played October 25-26.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

United Artists

FOUR FEATHERS: John Clements, June Duprez, C. Aubrey Smith, Ralph Richardson—Fine picture. Will please thrill fans.—Harry Hobolth, De Luxe Theatre, Imlay City, Mich. Small town patronage.

INTERMEZZO, A LOVE STORY: Leslie Howard, Ingrid Bergman, Edna Best—Class picture. Not B. O. for small towns.—Harry Hobolth, De Luxe Theatre, Imlay City, Mich. Small town patronage.

MADE FOR EACH OTHER: Carole Lombard, James Stewart, Charles Coburn—We went back and picked up this sweetheart of a show. Tops in any house. If you have missed this sure fire hit, run it for complete satisfaction and entertainment. Excellent. Running time, 94 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

MAN IN THE IRON MASK, THE: Louis Hayward, Joan Bennett, Warren William, Joseph Schildkraut, Alan Hale—They turned out for this one. Well enjoyed by most of our patrons. Too long to mean much at the box office. Doubled with "Night Work." Running time, 111 minutes. Played October 29-30.—A. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

REAL GLORY, THE: Gary Cooper, Andrea Leeds, David Niven—A dandy action picture. Will draw.—Harry Hobolth, De Luxe Theatre, Imlay City, Mich. Small town patronage.

THEY SHALL HAVE MUSIC: Jascha Heifetz, Andrea Leeds, Joel McCrea, Gene Reynolds—A sweet picture. Will please but not draw in small towns.—Harry Hobolth, De Luxe Theatre, Imlay City, Mich. Small town patronage.

WINTER CARNIVAL: Anna Sheridan, Richard Carlson, Helen Parrish, Robert Armstrong—An absolute bust, so amateurish that it is pitiful. Running time, 90 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Universal

ALL QUIET ON THE WESTERN FRONT (reissue): Lew Ayres, Slim Summerville—Will make money anywhere at this time.—Harry Hobolth, De Luxe Theatre, Imlay City, Mich. Small town patronage.

HONOR OF THE WEST: Bob Baker—Usual western to usual business. Played October 14.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

HOUSE OF FEAR, THE: Irene Hervey, William Gargan—Played with "Spirit of Culver." Strong double bill with the honors going to "Spirit of Culver."—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

SPIRIT OF CULVER: Jackie Cooper, Freddie Bartholomew, Andy Devine, Henry Hull, Jackie Moran—Played with "The House of Fear." Strong double bill with the honors going to "Spirit of Culver."—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

WHEN TOMORROW COMES: Irene Dunne, Charles Boyer—Satisfactory but business was poor. Miss Dunne is a favorite here and the small business was a surprise. Played October 11-12.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

Warner Brothers

DODGE CITY: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Ann Sheridan, Bruce Cabot, Frank McHugh, Victor Jory—Perfect. Hurry, Warner, with "Virginia City." Perfect cast, including Victor Jory.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

HELL'S KITCHEN: "Dead End Kids," Margaret Lindsay, Ronald Reagan—These "Dead End Kids" really are a good draw and this pleased all who saw it. Wish we could have more of Margaret Lindsay. Running time, 81 minutes. Played October 11-12.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

ROARING TWENTIES, THE: James Cagney, Priscilla Lane, Humphrey Bogart, Jeffrey Lynn, Gladys George—Good picture and good business. This is a gangster picture and the men will like it; the women probably won't. Running time, 104 minutes. Played October 29-30.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

WATERFRONT: Dennis Morgan, Gloria Dickson, Marie Wilson—We played this on a double bill but it is good enough for single billing on midweek or weekend. Played October 13-14.—Gordon P. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

WINGS OF THE NAVY: George Brent, Olivia de Havilland, John Payne, Frank McHugh—A very fine picture based on our naval academy. Good story, good direction. One "that clicks." Should be good in any spot. Played September 3-5.—J. K. Burgess, Iris Theatre, Velva, N. D. General and rural patronage.

YES, MY DARLING DAUGHTER: Priscilla Lane, Jeffrey Lynn, Fay Bainter, Roland Young, May Robson—Here's one that will pay you to go out and get. Does business. Publicity this picture got, being banned in New York, didn't hurt it a bit. Lot of people curious to see what it was. Nothing wrong with the picture. Just a good, natural story and this Priscilla Lane is very good in this. Running time, 90 minutes. Played October 8-10.—J. K. Burgess, Iris Theatre, Velva, N. D. General and rural patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

CHARM BRACELET, THE: Phantasies Cartoons—Not so hot. Just a filler. Running time, six minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

MOOCHING THROUGH GEORGIA: Buster Keaton—OK for the children. A bit too silly for the adults. We received a big kick out of just this sort of a comedy fifteen years ago. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

DAD FOR A DAY: Our Gang—Very good Our Gang comedy.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

DAY ON TREASURE ISLAND, A: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—Another smash hit by Jimmy FitzPatrick. Absolutely no letdown from this producer. He is tops. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

HOME EARLY: Robert Benchley—Ran it one show and put it in the can. Running time, six minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

ONE AGAINST THE WORLD: Passing Parade, No. 9—Very good and a first rate cast minus stars. Running time, 11 minutes.—A. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

UNSEEN GUARDIANS: Passing Parade, No. 10—When you want something different and exceptional in shorts, use Metro, and here you really have one of the best of the past season. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

YANKEE DOODLE GOES TO TOWN: Passing Parade, No. 6—Good Americanism short.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Paramount

FISHERMAN'S PLUCK: Paragraphics—Very good one-reel subject with the late Zane Grey. Play it.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

PLAYFUL POLAR BEARS: Color Classics—A good color cartoon. Running time, eight minutes.—A. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

Conflicts Over "Hitler, Beast"

Producers Distributing Corporation, headed by Ben Judell, is finding many conflicting censorship and other official reactions to its "war" film, "Hitler, the Beast of Berlin." New actions this week placed the picture on the banned list in Chicago and Providence, but on the approved list in Virginia, Pennsylvania and in Detroit. In New York the state censors agreed to reverse a previous ban but required that the title be changed, eliminating Hitler's name.

The American Civil Liberties Union, which campaigns for the abolition of all forms of censorship, injected itself into the arguments, asserting there is no more reason for banning the film than there was for prohibiting the the showing of "Harvest." Quincy Howe, chairman of the National Council on Freedom from Censorship of the American Civil Liberties Union, said: "While our organization takes no stand on the artistic merits of any film, we feel that its censorship by your board, without any reason being originally given, was unjustified and contrary to the state education law. Only through fighting instances of censorship and publicizing the unwise decisions of censor boards, can we hope to defeat the censors."

The picture, "Hitler, Beast of Berlin," was denied a permit on November 8th by the Chicago censor board, which objected to it on its "strong flavor of propaganda." Appeals have been filed both in Chicago and on a previous ban in Ohio.

After attending a screening of the picture the Providence Bureau of Police and Fire, through Chairman Benjamin P. Moulton, refused to grant a license for the film.

The Virginia State Board of Censors has given its approval to the film.

Sergeant Charles W. Snyder, Detroit police censor, passed the picture.

The Pennsylvania board also approved the film. Mrs. Edna Carrol, chairman of the censor board, said that Pennsylvania law does not bar propaganda films. She denied that the picture was "sacrilegious," as alleged by the New York board. "The picture is almost documentary and stark in its simplicity," she said.

The New York censor board last Friday lifted its ban on "Hitler, Beast of Berlin" on the condition that the Producers Distributing Corporation change the title to "Beasts of Berlin." A few cuts were also ordered. The company was represented by Vincent G. Hart, formerly with the Production Code Administration in the East. The title had not been approved by the Code Administration.

The Wilmer and Vincent circuit has booked the picture in Altoona, Johnstown, Harrisburg, Easton, Reading and Allentown, also in Norfolk and Richmond, Va.

New Ohio Houses

Work has been started on two new theatres in the Columbus, Ohio, territory, and plans for two other houses in the same territory are under way. John Robertson is building a 600-seat theatre in Fairfield and Charlie Dixon is constructing a 300-seat house in Beverly. Ted Pekras is planning to build a 800-seat theatre on the Hilltop and Si James is preparing plans for a second house in Eaton.

Policy Changes

Two Hamrick-Evergreen theatres in Seattle have had a change of policy. The Blue Mouse, formerly an extended run house, is now a newsreel theatre on a "Trans-Lux" policy. The Music Box, former home of foreign films and "unusual" pictures, has taken over the Blue Mouse's extended run policy, playing attractions moved from the circuit's Fifth Avenue, Orpheum and Paramount theatres.

Bluebook School

Conducted by F. H. RICHARDSON

[Based on the Second Revision of the Sixth Edition, Bluebook of Projection]

ANSWER TO QUESTION NO. 4

Bluebook school question No. 4 was: "Explain the various effects of high- and low-speed intermittent movements. What approximate speed has been generally adopted for professional projectors? For what reason was it adopted?

From among several excellent answers that of L. Johnson, a Maine projectionist, has been selected as best covering all points. He says:

"As the term is here used, it refers to the ratio of time the intermittent sprocket, and therefore the film, is at rest, as compared with the time it is in movement. If the movement be fast, the visibility of flicker is reduced; if slow it is increased. As the speed of movement is increased, the strain upon all parts of the movement is increased and its speed of deterioration through frictional wear increased. As intermittent speed is increased, the strain and frictional wear upon edge of sprocket holes is increased, soon reaching the point where an unsteady screen image occurs, especially if aperture tension be excessive, as it all too often is. As intermittent speed is increased, the intermittent sprocket and film are in motion for a less space of time, hence the shutter master blade width may be reduced and a greater proportion of the available light made available to the screen.

"Summing these items up, higher speed means more rapid wear, hence added upkeep expense as compared with the lower speed.

"Lower speed relieves the strain on all moving parts involved, hence slower wear, other conditions (lubrication and correct adjustment) being equal, the limit of low speed being at the point shutter flicker becomes visible.

"Years of experience taught projector manufacturers the intermittent speed which fulfilled all the requirements at least acceptably under the wide range of conditions met with in theatre practice. It was found that what is known as a '90 degree' movement serves best, which movement means that the intermittent sprocket and films remains at rest three times as long as it is in movement, which answers, it would seem the last two sections of the question.

"May I add this remark? Provided the projector mechanism be kept in good condition and the aperture and take-up tension kept at lowest permissible level consistent with good screen results; further provided the intermittent mechanism be properly lubricated (which cannot be accomplished with poor oil), a print may be projected at least one hundred times without appreciable damage to its sprocket holes; also the intermittent movement deterioration through frictional wear will be very slow. In this theatre we have, by careful attention to the above enumerated points, had the intermittent movements (Simplex) run for a full six months without need for adjustment, producing a rock-steady screen image in a 12-hour-a-day house."

Question No. 8

(A) What three kinds of trouble are caused by overheating in amplifiers?

(B) Name three conditions that might cause hum in an amplifier.

(C) How may the makeup of amplifiers best be studied?

Wilby-Kincey Managers in Annual "Loyalty Drive"

Managers of the 75 Wilby-Kincey theatres operating in 25 towns in Alabama, Tennessee and the Carolinas, are conducting their 10th annual "Loyalty Drive" for increased business, in tribute to their employers, R. B. Wilby and H. F. Kincey, Paramount theatre partners.

In a broadside issued by the managers, expressions of tribute to Mr. Wilby and Mr. Kincey appear from many industry leaders: Ned E. Depinet, Y. Frank Freeman, John J. Friedl, Sidney Kent, Charles E. Kessnich, Ed Kuykendall, Martin J. Mullin, Leon D. Netter, R. J. O'Donnell, Martin Quigley, E. V. Richards, Jr., William F. Rodgers, E. J. Sparks, Walter Vincent and Adolph Zukor.

The "Loyalty Drive" is an expression of the circuit's employees for their executives, with special efforts in showmanship aimed to inform the public of the scope of the institution and the nature of the product it is exhibiting.

National Decency Legion Classifies Eight Films

Of eight pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week three were approved for general patronage, four were found unobjectionable for adults and one was cited as objectionable in part. The films and their classification follow.

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "The Mad Empress," "Main Street Lawyer," "Stranger from Texas." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "The Honeymoon's Over," "Man from Montreal," "Reno," "La Tia de las Muchachas" (Spanish). Class B, Objectionable in Part: "Port of Shadows" (Le Quai des Brumes), French.

National Screen Has Holiday Trailers

Special institutional trailers, conveying the holiday sentiments of theatre owners to their patrons, have been prepared by National Screen and are ready for distribution. Two sets, the de luxe and junior, each including one Christmas and one New Year trailer, are available. The de luxe trailers are each 160 feet, the junior 75 feet.

It Can Also Be Done In December

Let it be said, and immediately, there is no intent here to play down the effects of Christmas shopping upon theatre grosses. December has always been a tough time to swim against the holiday spending tide. But don't let's kid ourselves that December is any time to curl up and stop swimming. The fact remains, and the files prove it, that much more than a handful of theatremen refuse to "sit December out". These boys see no reason to lay off in the last month of the year than they do in any other. They have done business in other Decembers. They intend to do it again.

There is greater need this year for spirited showmanship than ever before. The reason is obvious. Retailers are moving in more and more with all kinds of fancy promotions that are strictly showbusiness. Merchants are going after the crowds with the very same methods that once were the exclusive property of the theatre. They are turning loose every trick in the bag to attract the buyers and getting results, while theatremen are inclined to sit back and shrug shoulders.

Go ahead, someone, and say, "Why not? It's Yuletide and the stores have what the people want to buy." Of course they have, and certainly folks are going to buy. But no one ever said that every last circulating dime was pegged for gifts. There is still a chunk of that holiday-dollar to be had for theatre attendance from folks accustomed to theatregoing. As strong as is his draw, even Santa Claus isn't powerful enough to break that habit, providing theatremen are willing to give the old gent a tussle for some of the loose change.

Another answer given by exhibitors, and a familiar one, is that lack of top-grade product in the pre-Christmas period prevents them from going to town on exploitation. That may be, for all we know. But it's still no reason. As long as the theatre keeps open during December, it has got to be sold. And from reports of previous years, it has been sold with one kind of device or another, at least to the extent of allowing the theatreman to hold his own without losing any boxoffice ground.

On following pages are set down highlights of what has been done with effect in other Decembers by Round Tablers who like to slap that slump around. These records are detailed for the information of theatremen who want to know more about what others have done and for knowing theatremen who would like to refresh their memories.

For those who study, the listings tell more of a story—a story of men who refuse to be licked by December. They have lined up a raft of boxoffice ammunition that has definitely scored in disproving any widely accepted belief that the toy and gift vendors have a crotch-hold on all the spending money.

No better buy, no greater bargain in merchandising, has ever topped what the average theatre offers for the average admission. December would be a far happier and more profitable month if every theatreman really felt so and worked accordingly.

This is still a 52-week business, this year and every year to come.

A SOURCE OF MANPOWER

To be hailed is the announcement from Miami Wometco Theatres of an eight-week course in theatre operation and maintenance for the direct benefit of assistant managers and ushers. Semi-weekly sessions are being held under the personal supervision of headman Sidney Meyer and conducted by the able Sonny Shepherd. The curriculum is extensive and more of it will be told in following issues. Included among the subjects to be covered in general are history of the industry, house operation, maintenance, finance, selling the show, bookings, use of the stage, motion picture production and active participation in community affairs.

The circuit course in showbusiness for members of the personnel eager to know more about it is an emphatic answer to the insistent call for executive manpower. The idea rates wider adoption.

Five Schools Vote for Campus Romeos On Quintuple Date

Although Ray Bell's campaigns are habitually comprehensive, to be singled out for extra attention is the recent Ann Rutherford personal appearance advance as executed by the Washington, D. C., Loewman who tags it as one of his most effective promotions.

With five large universities in and near the Capitol city, Ray arranged with the student bodies of each school to vote for a "Campus Romeo." Each Romeo was to join in a "quintuplet date" with Andy Hardy's screen sweetheart. Every college paper ran a page one ballot, sororities and fraternities enthusiastically pitched in, newspapers contributed feature stories. Results of the voting brought three and four column news shots, was covered by college papers, night club columns, mentioned as news items on radio stations and carried over the AP and INS wires.

Sorority Honors Star

Another item that secured good space, good will and business was the crowning ceremonies in which Miss Rutherford was made "The Sweetheart of Sigma Nu," a national fraternity with 90 branches. This means, says Bell, that showmen will have the backing of 40,000 past and present Sigma Nus whenever Ann Rutheford appears on the screen.

A variety of other slants included mass interview with reporters and photographers of all high schools. Appearance of the star at the local YMCA anniversary celebration was good for stories as was photo plant of her posing with new models at the auto show. Much was also made over the luncheon tendered the star by the South Carolina Congressional delegation in the Senate restaurant.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

"Iron Mask" Bally Attends Football Game for Nelson

With a football game scheduled for the night ahead of Glenn Nelson's opening of "Man in the Iron Mask" at the Harris, in Findlay, Ohio, the Round Tabler sent an usher out to the stadium dressed in mask with front and back signs and had him wend his way slowly through the assembled crowds before the game and during the half intermission. Opening day, same lad covered the heart of the business district and into five and tens where many of the rural patronage is inclined to gather.

For "Dust Be My Destiny," Nelson contacted the Federation of the Child's Conservation League and personally guaranteed that the picture was ideally suited for their purposes. Organization agreed to sell tickets for a special benefit to raise money for their shoe fund and proceeded to sell tickets for the performance, on which they received a percentage. Special tickets were printed for the occasion and papers ran stories ahead of show and after, detailing account of the affair and amount of money raised.

32 "APPOINTMENTS"

As the 1939 Awards advance to the middle of the Last Quarter, the number of entrants taking down Fortnighters on the way to the finish remains consistent, with 32 theatremen voted Appointments in the second preliminary period. Names listed here are for the most part those who have been prominent throughout.

With the selections concluded for the current period, there remain but three Fortnights in the Last Quarter which ends on December 30. As has been emphasized previously, entrants considered for the annual honors will be selected from among theatremen who have made the most consistent effort over the four Quarters.

"The Real Glory" Receives Abundant Newspaper Breaks

Planted in the Los Angeles Times by the advertising department of Lou Halper's Pacific Coast zone of Warner Theatres were the 12 tap ads on "The Real Glory" using especially posed stills featuring Andrea Leeds and David Niven. This representation was climaxed with a full page, half of which was devoted to editorial matter on the picture and the remainder to a three color ad on the film.

Inspired by "Angels Wash Their Faces," another stunt was arranged by the department which culminated in having the Dead End kids at the Mayor's office, taking over the city for a day. Stunt landed much publicity in local dailies.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Holland Plants Photo Of Himself with Withers

Additional publicity was garnered for "Pack Up Your Troubles" date at the Eckel, in Syracuse, when Sid Holland planted in papers photo of himself with Jane Withers taken on the Hollywood lot when Sid was out there as a Quigley Grand Awards winner.

For "Jamaica Inn," Holland tied up local restaurant on a lucky number program whereby folks holding programs with numbers corresponding with those printed on menus were guests of the restaurant. Front and inside spread carried theatre and picture copy, back devoted to store.

Kirsch Gets School Aid On "They Shall Have Music"

Contacting all the local schools, Manager Dick Kirsh at the Aldine, in Wilmington, Del., received the cooperation of superintendent who permitted the posting of announcements on all bulletin boards and urged the teachers to see the picture and recommend it to students. Arrangements were also made to bring the children to the show in groups. Junior high school classes marched to the theatre in a body with uniformed color guard bearing school banner and picture copy. On arrival at theatre, shots were taken for local dailies.

Special display was planted in the public libraries week ahead consisting of stills and card with theatre, playdate, title and cast. Tying in with Station WDEL on a music program, Heifetz recordings were played with special mention given to the date.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Ingenious Gags Used by Morton for "First Love"

With the Narragansett Race Track close by to the RKO Albee in Providence, Manager Bill Morton for his date on "First Love" distributed envelopes front of which carried line "Today's best bet." Inside was small card on which was printed, "Win, place, show. A sure winner, see" etc., etc.

Morton also tied up with a local shoe store on a Cinderella gag, giving away a free pair of shoes to the first four girls who could fit the sample display in window.

37 Days to Christmas, and There Is Much to Do

Highlights of Previous December Tieins Found Successful In the Field

SINCE every merchandising indication points to more elaborate showmanship this December on the part of department stores and other retailers to build Christmas sales, it is indicated that theatremen will have greater need for promotional suggestions to hold up December grosses in the face of this distinct opposition. With this in mind, your Round Table is pleased to set down, in brief, the highlights of successful December exploitations used in the past years that members will have at hand a complete roundup of what has done the job over an extended period and reported here previously by the men in the field.

Quiz Night Found Popular

For instance, goodwill and civic activities were stressed by Rex Williams, included in which was his annual Toy Mountain in the lobby, patrons bring old and new toys to the theatre for the needy. These, together with baskets of food, were distributed by civic leaders, Santa and Williams. Also staged was a free show for all youngsters, tickets being distributed throughout the town, with the Mayor giving candy to all. In addition, a pre-Christmas quiz night was held with door prizes donated by merchants. Questions pertained to popular stars and current attractions. Also staged was a brief Krazy auction and amateur talent show.

Arranged by Johnnie Barcroft was tie-in with leading department store which brought a giant Christmas tree and toy display for all RKO theatres, cooperating merchant also agreed to decorate the entire house, including front and marquee in exchange for credits. Newspaper coverage included a jingle contest on shopping guide page, with guest tickets to those submitting best "last lines."

To help boost boxoffice receipts during the "rush" period, Moon Corker concentrated on holly-bound books of theatre tickets as an ideal Christmas gift. In connection with this, a three-day vacation was given to the employee selling the greatest number of books.

Stressed School Carol Contest

Of great interest locally was Lew Chatham's public schools carol contest with pupils of the eight grade schools competing in singing on theatre stage. One group appeared each night up until three days ahead of Christmas with the city's music teachers acting as judges. Prizes were free shows to the winners. Also planted by Lew was a citywide contest tied in with local paper for the best letter on "What Christmas Means to Me." On this, cash and guest tickets were awarded, rules of the contest stressing the spiritual side of the holiday.

For his Christmas prevue put over with 20 cooperating merchants, a lucky number party was held with stores and theatre distributing numbered coupons with purchases and admissions. Merchandise promoted from stores was given to winners, stunt being plugged in theatre, screen, lobby and store ads.

DEPARTMENT STORE SPONSORS FAN CLUB

Something new in fan clubs has been created by Manager Charlie Kurtzman at Loew's Penn, Pittsburgh, in selling a leading department store on sponsoring a Mickey Rooney - Judy Garland Club in conjunction with the theatre. Store headquarters have been established, where memberships are received, and, to announce the project, the merchants took three-column ads with illustrations of membership cards and badges and detailed rulings. Large part of the display was given over to date on "Babes In Arms" at theatre.

A "Christmas Tree Hunt" proved effective for J. B. Harrison, for 24 days ahead with listeners over local station asked to search through their effects for two or three articles, equivalent to the price of a theatre ticket. These articles were either food, clothing or toys and each day the items asked for were brought to one of the designated Texas Consolidated theatres, donor being admitted on presentation of articles. All material collected was divided equally among the churches for distribution to the needy. During the course of the daily program, theatres and current attractions came in for plugs.

A search for "Miss Spirit of Christmas" was instigated by Russ Hardwick in which 40 merchants participated at a cost of five dollars each. Entrants appeared at theatre on a given night, and through votes distributed by merchants and at theatre week ahead "Miss Spirit of Christmas" was selected by audience applause and awarded $25. Other activities engaged in by Hardwick included stage wedding of two couples, theatre giving cash prize in addition to promoted gifts secured from merchants.

Town Crier Visited Hotels

Originated by George Limerick, was his "best decorated home" contest, put on in cooperation of local paper and divided into three classifications: two-story homes; apartment and duplexes, and one-story homes and cottages. Prizes were given in each division to those decorating the exteriors of their homes in the most attractive holiday attire. Coupons were run in paper and on receipt of entries, George followed through by personally visiting entrant's home and presented guest ticket. Judging by local leaders took place few days ahead of the holiday with announcements and awards made from stage on Christms Eve.

Used with great success by Milt Harris was the selection of eight singers from the nationally-known A Capella Choir with town crier to visit leading restaurants and hotel dining rooms. Groups of four boys and girls sang carols after which the crier opened a scroll and in Colonial fashion announced the current screen attraction. Newspaper cooperations included a "bury the tree" party, whereby readers were invited to bring toys, clothing and nonperishables to be placed around tree in lobby until it was practically covered.

Most Courteous Salesgirl Chosen

Suggested by Harry Botwick was the choosing of the most courteous local salesgirl with each merchant contributing a certain amount of cash and articles of merchandise to be divided between three winners. Folks were enlisted to vote by securing ballots only after they had made purchases at any of the cooperating stores. Voting was done in the theatre lobby and winner announced from stage Christmas Day. Tiein was publicized in theatre and throughout cooperating stores.

Turning his lobby into a bureau of information, Botwick stationed girl in lobby at phone. In exchange for publicity, telephone was promoted and girl instructed to get information on trains, bus schedules, accept messages for friends and encouraged to make the theatre a general meeting place.

"Cheer Club" Inaugurated

Worked out for his theatres through the cooperation of local daily and radio station was Ray Bell's "Christmas Cheer Club," whereby folks were asked for old and new toys to be distributed to underprivileged children. Huge boxes were available in lobbies and through trailers, patrons were invited to fill them. Station contributed daily plugs, and project was climaxed with a large matinee several days ahead at one of the theatres, with a toy serving as admission.

Held "Mile of Dimes" Show

For the purpose of raising funds to provide Christmas dinners to the needy, Frank La Due cooperated with local paper's promotion in connection with their drive for a "Mile of Dimes." Donated were the services of the entire theatre personnel, newspaper advertising, film, sound truck and printing of tickets for a special show, proceeds on which were to go to the fund. Tickets were on sale at the boxoffice and various downtown stores. Cooperation of police department was also enlisted to aid on advance sale of tickets. Florists presented roses which were for sale in the lobby by junior leaguers. Proceeds on sale of blooms also went to the Fund.

Another theatreman to tie into an annual charity campaign is Frank Harpster who aided the local paper on their "Three Muster Cheer" fund holding a canned goods matinee and midnight show with all proceeds going to the fund. Also promoted by the manager was a number of parties given by the various industrial plants. These are outright ticket sales to the plants which they distribute to the children of their employees. An ample supply of candy, oranges, nuts, etc., promoted from merchants was on hand for the kids.

Wayne Williams celebrates his theatre anniversary Christmas week thus enabling him to sell full page cooperative ads, heralds and birthday cake in lobby.

Harry Bodie works with the Women's Clubs for a big party for poor children on December 24th. Another feature is a matinee week ahead at which children are admitted for food stuffs which are used to fill baskets which are distributed by a group of organizations.

Played Santa Claus to Kids

Beginning with Thanksgiving, Louie Charninsky gives away 50 turkeys to each tenth person coming into his house. This is followed on December 10th with a special matinee at which each person bringing something wearable or some canned food is admitted free. On Christmas morning Charninsky himself plays Santa Claus and makes the rounds delivering the gifts. Entire theatre is decorated in festive attire, with silver tree dressed with blue lights featured in the lobby. Balance of lobby will be decorated with tinsel, holly and all the trimmings.

As part of his service policy, Bill Johnson establishes a special checking booth at which girl is stationed to take care of parcels, umbrellas, large packages, etc. Attention of women shoppers is also called to the fact that children can be kept conveniently and contentedly out of mischief for two hours any afternoon for the price of a 10-cent ticket.

Treasure Hunt Held at Store

Treasure Hunt promotion was arranged by Fred Reeths, Jr., with local stores tied in, whereby keys obtained at designated departments were given to customers to unlock the chest, prominently displayed in the lobby. Merchandise promoted from stores was locked in the chest and on a given day from afternoon until evening patrons with keys were invited to try their luck. Store publicized the tiein widely with generous theatre and picture mention in all their advertising.

Highly profitable to all concerned was the ticket selling slant instituted by Guy Martin with the Elks, Eagles, Woodmen and other fraternal organizations whereby two tickets were offered each member selling a punch board, proceeds of which went to local fund for needy. Theatre received full price for all tickets offered on the board as prizes, and Martin says over 1,000 boards were sold.

Guy went to town on a series of manufacturers' parties, with local factories taking over the theatre for special shows for employees and their children. Theatre received a flat rental, furnishing program, house staff, etc., sponsoring company defraying cost of toy and candy distribution.

SUBMARINE INVENTOR TIED TO "U-BOAT"

Recent newspaper interview with Simon Lake, submarine inventor and nearby resident, allowed Morris Rosenthal to tie in the publicity on "U-Boat 29" at Loew's Majestic, Bridgeport. Newspapers made much of Mr. Lake's prophecy of submarine freighters to come, Rosy stepping in by promoting lobby display of model "subs" from the inventor and having him at premiere of picture.

Securing the services of a popular local male singer, Ed McBride as an added attraction for his Christmas week prologue seated him at a small portable organ on stage with a church window scene and falling snow effect as a background. Surrounded by a group of altar boys, the aggregation sang carols. Theatre organist, concealed from audience, played the accompaniment so that it seemed the singer was playing the numbers.

Opened "Santa Claus Lane"

Charlie Taylor tied up local merchants to convert the main shopping district into a "Santa Claus Lane" with each store contributing a certain amount for the decorations aimed to draw folks to the shopping area. Lobbies and theatre ads publicized the Lane from Thanksgiving to Christmas as did all the merchants. Stores also agreed to have their Santas visit the lobbies of Taylor's houses during certain periods in the afternoon few weeks ahead of Christmas. Ballyhooing the stunt in advance, Santa led a parade from stores to theatres.

Dubbing it the "Baltimore Follies," Ted Routson produced an amateur revue under newspaper sponsorship. Tiein insures publicity, front page and all, for four weeks ahead, in course of which the theatre received consistent mention. In addition to name and address entrants filled in on blanks run in paper, whether they could sing or dance, ability to play musical instruments, do specialties, etc., with assurances given that all rehearsals would be attended. In addition, jitterbug contests were held and tied to a statewide contest, finals being decided at the theatre.

Started late in November and continuing for four consecutive Mondays, Bill Saxton secured a sponsor for a series of broadcasts from his theatre. Manufacturer supplied 15-piece orchestra and vocalists. In return for use of the stage, sponsor gave 1,000 half-sheet window cards weekly plugging current theatre attraction and spot announcements over air during the week, plugging both the broadcast and coming picture.

Contacting the studios in Hollywood, Matt Saunders secured wires of greetings from the stars appearing in his then current attractions. These were planted in local dailies and used for lobby setpieces.

Reported as an excellent pre-Christmas building was C. E. Carden's football night with tieups made with paper to handle publicity, merchants donating prizes. Local sports writer acted as master of ceremonies introducing players on the football team. As each player left stage he was presented with a gift. College swing band was on hand to supply music, local station broadcasting the event and plugging the special night.

Tagging his event "Merchants' Pre-Christmas Exhibit," Julius Lamm contacted some 35 stores for gift displays in his lobby. Each store paid a nominal sum according to space and location, the affair itself being sponsored by a recognized organization of business and professional men. All moneys taken in were used for publicity, window cards, handbills, full page ads in local papers. Cash prizes and other awards were given away during the exposition which lasted nine days.

Greeted Kris Kringle at Airport

Letter-writing contest on why they believe in Santa was arranged by Herb Grove for local youngsters with guest tickets for winners. Through tieup with local paper, plane and party flew north ostensibly to locate the home of Kris Kringle, with Grove shooting pictures of the party taking off at airport. Radio station contacted the plane in flight and finale of the stunt was for the plane to return with Santa and present him in the public square and at the theatre. Pictures of the take-off and landing shown on the screen with other subjects, paper and radio station getting behind the show to publicize it.

Most Popular Football Player Sought

Planned by Sid Holland was an award to the most popular football player on local football team. Coupons were run in the daily paper for two weeks of voting and then compilation made at theatre so that no one was aware of the winner's identity until the stage presentations. On designated night, winner was presented with gold football appropriately engraved. Coach, school principal, local sports editor and others joined in the ceremonies.

Also arranged by Holland was a week of morning Christmas factory parties. Owners of plants were sold on the idea that for about ten cents per head they could give to all employees and families a Christmas party. Plant executives appeared on stage to greet guests and distribute toys to youngsters.

Santa's Toy Cave was erected in lobby by Marlowe Conner, interior of which was filled with toys for giveaways at kid matinees. Cave was made of chicken wire covered with papier mache painted white and tinted with red, blue and green, flitter sprinkled over all. Crepe paper icicles ranging from white to dark blue and color ball tree decorations completed the display.

Flash!

This picture takes place in Paris in those wonderful days when a siren was a brunette and not an alarm—and if a Frenchman turned out the light it was not on account of an air raid.

PREVIEW ROOM —We just fell hard for an adorable Bolshevik. A Bolshevik who prefers champagne to vodka; a beautiful Moscow maid who likes the feel of silk lingerie rather than harsh homespun; a pouting pearl of the proletariat who learns that a kiss is not just a state-regulated biological urge! Wow! What a girl! She wants to form a new political party—Internationale of Lovers; salute with a kiss instead of a fist! And—horrible atrocity—her teacher is a Capitalist! But a handsome Capitalist she met in Paris in Spring.

M-G-M's "Ninotchka", just screened, is a surprise hit if there ever was one! It's cinematic champagne; sparkling satire; rollicking romance; bubbling burlesque!*

Garbo cuts a new notchka in her career! She's not only gay—she makes you feel gay, too! And when she gets delightfully tipsy—oo-la-la! Melvyn Douglas is grand. And the three Soviet delegates are a Russian version of the Marx Bros.

BUT—watch for those Ernst Lubitsch "touches"! You'll feel them in your funnybone and when you blush.

"Ninotchka" is one of the best adult entertainments of the year. We stand on that. It starts Friday at Loew's.

CHILLS AND CONTESTS WELCOME HALLOWE'EN

Animated Scare Lobby Features Grott Midnite Show; Binstock Party Attracts Record Crowd

Among the first Hallowe'en campaigns reported, importantly looms the work of Harold Grott, at the Met, Baltimore, who played a midnight show with "The Old Dark House." Patrons were informed some three weeks ahead via trailer, also shown at seven other Rome circuit houses, copy stressing the "beware" angle for all it was worth. Trailer also announced that tickets for the show were on sale in advance at all the houses. Lobby displays were also used in these units.

At the Met, Grott created an appropriate display in keeping with the picture, featuring a weird wind effect coming from a black seven by six frame, banded in metal. Animated horror scenes were depicted in the opening of the frame, such as a miniature black and grey house front, measuring two and a half by two feet showing a bat flying in and out the chimney and a jagged streak of lightning about to strike the roof. Three illustrated windows in green framed other horror scenes, a man striking with a club, a woman with a knife over her head, two men engaged in combat. Alongside the house were weeping willows moaning in the wind supplied by two fans, the moaning obtained with a wind-effects record on a concealed Victor. A white path across artificial grass led to a cemetery with tombstone and a black cat with tail erect and fur on end. Background was a painted landscape spotlighted to convey a scene of desolation. On the face of the frame, stills from the picture and theatre copy were carried, both outside and inside shots illustrated in column to right.

Uses Gag Lobby Display

Next to this display was a trick 40 by 60 with copy purporting to illustrate various things that happened at the Hollywood preview of the picture. Nailed to the board with explanatory captions were programs and handkerchiefs bitten and chewed by excited patrons, buttons twisted and torn off by the nervous, articles left behind by the thrill-shocked, part of a set of teeth swallowed by owner, arm of seat torn off by patron during thrill scenes.

To follow through, Harold planted spot announcements over WFBR, distributed special programs, colored heralds and bookmarks, used extra one-sheets and covered all available outlets with comprehensive publicity.

Over 500 in Binstock Contest

The Saturday matinee, of Oct. 28 at the second-run Warner Lyric, in Hartford, Conn., was occupied with a Hallowe'en Party and Masquerade together with an Old Fashioned Picnic, by Manager Paul Binstock, who detailed his contemplated program here some weeks back. The attraction drew a record children's attendance, according to Binstock, some with 552 children among those attending coming in costume to compete for the prizes promoted from among local merchants. Entrants were judged in groups of 100. In addition, other features of the afternoon included community singing, ghost stories, and appropriate contests, such as pie eating, balloon blowing, shoe-finding, baby milk bottle and apple dunking.

In advance, there was a special holiday lobby with all the trimmings and prizes for the various events. Trailers were run ahead, folders distributed in school and play grounds, poster displayed in schools and stage announcements made at every show. Proceedings were covered by the local press which carried stories and photos of the doings. Special colored pocket-size program selling the show was printed for the occasion, merchant ad on back covering cost.

Dallas Holds Pumpkin Show

David Dallas, manager of the Kansan Theatre, in Parsons, Kansas, staged a pumpkin show week ahead of his Hallowe'en prevue. An ad in the local daily announced that the farmer bringing the largest pumpkin would receive a prize. The pumpkins with credit cards were used in a lobby display to advertise the special show.

Golden Campaign On Goodman Date Nets 21,000 Lines

Inasmuch as the thirty-third anniversary of the RKO Orpheum, St. Paul, Minn., came about with the engagement of Benny Goodman, Manager Lou Golden, used one to celebrate the other with the cooperation of the newly formed Women's Institute of St. Paul, which sponsored the stage show to a resounding success. Together with "Thousand Dollars a Touchdown" on the screen, the Round Tabler was able to amass a total of over 21,000 lines of free space in advance and during the run, in a situation where there is only one paper with a combination morning and evening circulation.

The campaign was initiated five weeks ahead with lobby displays of giant setpieces, followed with 10-foot panels carrying life-size cutouts of the bandman and various featured acts in the unit. During the engagement, the advance art was moved out front and built over the regular frames, with 24-sheet panels on each end of the marquee. Goodman records were played in advance in the lobby and a leading baker promoted to create a special cake for the anniversary. Augmenting the regular trailer were single frame announcements on the screens of suburban and downtown Minnesota amusement houses and out-of-town units of the circuit.

School Cooperation Sought

Exploitation in the schools and colleges was spirited, with posters headed "Students—Major in Swing" placed on school bulletin boards, and student publications encouraged to seek interviews with the bandsmen. Goodman was also promoted to select the freshman queen at the university. Personal letters were addressed to clubs pointing out the civic importance of the date and that the bandsman would broadcast nationally during his engagement. This was emphasized by Golden in a meeting with leading business leaders. Other staff members personally contacted and phoned other organizations.

Radio Coverage Obtained

Over every possible outlet, a continuous radio barrage was maintained, starting with announcements of the playdate well ahead and leading to the theatre's regular Saturday morning program when the bandsman and others of the unit were interviewed. In advance of the regular Camel broadcast, the date was also plugged consistently, Golden making much of the fact that the program would be aired from the stage during the date. In advance and during the broadcast, KSTP brought to the theatre a short-wave and mobile television unit, a streamlined portable radio station mounted with loudspeakers which broadcast the program to the waiting crowds unable to gain admittance. In addition to the tieins with other stations, the Round Tabler was also able to obtain further publicity over the non-commercial university station. In each instance, the comprehensive radio publicity was promoted without cost.

On this and the following page appears an alphabetical index to the titles of all features listed in this week's Release Chart, with additional information for the exhibitor.

The number immediately following the title is the production number. Also given is information regarding the classification of the subject matter. A melodrama is denoted by the abbreviation Mel., Comedy by Com., Comedy-Melodrama by Com.-Mel., Musical by Mus., Musical Comedy by Mus.-Com., Western by West. If the production is made in color, the letter "C" appears in parenthesis after the classification. Thus: Com.-Mel. (C) denotes a Comedy-Melodrama in Color.

At the extreme right of the line containing the title of the production is the name of the distributor.

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1939-40 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

"WIND" FIGURES

A CERTAIN grandiosely experimental aspect attends the magnificences of "Gone with the Wind" and its presentations. Consideration of its content will await screen demonstration, but manifest now are indices of anticipations by Mr. David Oliver Selznick and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. First is the sheer daring in terms of screen time, a matter of three hours and forty minutes, or 220 minutes, a full hundred minutes beyond most "A" productions.

This means that as now edited the picture can not play more than three performances within what are commonly called show hours.

"Gone with the Wind's" 220 minutes are to be compared with the next longest, "The Great Ziegfeld," 184 minutes; "Goldwyn Follies," 180 minutes; "Marie Antoinette," 157 minutes; "Anthony Adverse," also "Romeo and Juliet," 150 minutes; "Mutiny on the Bounty" and "Green Pastures," 135 minutes. Among famously long silent pictures was Mr. Erich von Stroheim's "Foolish Wives" at 111 minutes.

With double openings, in New York at the Astor, two-a-day, and the Capitol, three-a-day; in Los Angeles, Carthay Circle and United Artists; and in Boston, State and Orpheum, it would appear that the distributor has had enough of delay and proposes to assault the metropolitan markets in a manner to realize upon the large investment rapidly.

IN an industry where dollar publicity has long been conspicuous, and from the same publicity auspices which not so long ago spoke of "The Wizard of Oz" as a "three million dollar production," we have yet to see figures on "Gone with the Wind." Reports, which Hollywood so abundantly supplies, have put the figures at from two to four and a half millions.

There has been, also esoterically, a report that about the time the cost sheets showed a total of about $2,000,000 the important Whitney component of Selznick International Corporation decided it had enough and suggested that Mr. Selznick do further financing elsewhere. Anyway financing seems to have been done, and extensively.

The three hours and forty minutes of screen time give occasion to consideration of some statistical aspects of the novel—of which at this date Macmillan, the publishers, find 1,788,000 copies have been printed. The book contains 475,000 words. On the basis of lowbrow Liberty magazine's opinion of reader capacity, 200 words a minute, this would occupy the reader 39.6 hours. Highbrow Macmillan's experts estimate that the book can be read in 17.1 hours. The average is probably nearer 25 hours. After the run is over the statisticians can have a lot of fun comparing the hours spent reading book with the hours spent looking at the picture.

RADIO SUGGESTS

THE most sharpcut exemplification of the employment problems of the machine age is afforded in the case of the orchestra musicians, swept out of their jobs by the sound picture.

For nearly ten years now the American Federation of Musicians has been campaigning to force picture house re-employment of its members. Some years ago the campaign erupted in trade press advertising, illustrated with brutal cartoons.

This week the issue flared again when the Federation, having put pressure on the Independent Radio Network Affiliates, got a reply asking the musician's organization "What has been done by you" in the direction of seeing "to it that the motion picture industry made a material contribution toward the re-employment of your members."

It is not enough that radio should be the screen's free and invasive competition—now it must be a fomentor of issues.

Radio showers upon the air the musician's pearls of performance, while it insists that the motion picture should both buy them and sell them.

IT is with no lack of sympathy with the unemployed musician that that observation may be made that it is precisely procedures of the sort, organization pressures toward "made work," that Mr. Thurman Arnold in Washington is finding ground for attack on certain union practices in the building trades.

The sound motion picture is a mechanism of certain efficiencies in purveying entertainment, at a price, to a wide public of limited buying power. If those efficiencies are invaded by the super-imposition of unnecessary manpower costs, both the screen and its patrons are handicapped, damaged.

Social progress has its inescapable casualties. Many jobs have vanished, many skills have been supplanted. Many specialists have at times outlived their specialties.

Every man who specializes takes the risk of his craft. The other day one of the motion picture's once topmost actor-directors came in to sell the editor some bonds. He's been selling securities for fifteen years.

A SINGER is suing Mr. Walt Disney et al for $200,000 on the charge that she was recorded singing the role of "Snow White" without her consent. The screen time is 82 minutes. Wonder what she thought was taking place.

"SALARY CEILING"

MAYOR Fiorello LaGuardia with his "bring the movies back home" to New York campaign continued to rejoice in the attention of the public prints this week, with a story that "the banks are interested." It seems, however, that the banks, according to the mayor's spokesman quoted in Motion Picture Daily, propose, among conditions, "a ceiling on producers' salaries, and those of executives and film stars . . . during the entire production period." The "banks" and also home office executives have been trying to get that for years.

FROM Youngstown, out in Ohio, come tidings of a new process of etching photographs on sheets of stainless steel. Any day now we may expect Hollywood sport-model roadsters with photomontages on their bonnets. Virile he-stars distributing fan photos in the new medium will have to forge their own signatures.

Labor Still Asks Production

THE STORM CENTER of the week was again Hollywood and again the issue was labor dollars—Labor still demanding another horizontal increase, while perturbed Production fumbled with budgets and faced its war-shrunken world market. Also William Bioff, and Chicago.

The end of a hectic session late Monday postponed the new strike threats with "a breathing spell" granted until Friday by Bioff, representing the IATSE, also the American Federation of Labor unions seeking the 10 per cent wage increase which the IATSE had won and refused to relinquish. There were, too, for publicity purposes optimistic announcements of "pleased with progress."

Meanwhile behind the masks the controversy raged. "They've done so much harm they might as well go on and strike," was the private judgment of some negotiators.

Also current was a whisper that for the last shot in the locker the IATSE bosses planned to announce a projectionists strike in producer owned theatres only, with the double threat of making much copy for the newspapers on evidences of producer domination of exhibition, the while mindful of significances to the proponents of the Neely bill, and with color of meaning in the Thurman Arnold anti-trust actions.

Complication was added to the ensemble by the inference in New York that while home office executives had given full responsibility to production officials in the west, the eastern state of mind was that a strike for a while might do no large harm, anyway, to serve perhaps as an undeclared shutdown—with a considerable inventory of completed product on hand.

It has been apparent for a considerable period that production has been quickened in anticipation of rising costs in a war-complexed world.

Lastly it is to be remembered that Production has always "settled." (See page 15)

It was obvious that there was some timing by somebody involved when, in Chicago, according to a United Press dispatch to the New York World-Telegram, the Cook County appellate court on Wednesday issued a mandate to states attorney Thomas J. Courtney to imprison William Bioff "in connection with a 17-year-old felony conviction in Chicago."

The mandate, according to the dispatch, "required that Bioff be taken into custody until final adjudication of a 1922 conviction. . . . He was sentenced to six months imprisonment and fined $300. The appellate court affirmed the sentence but Bioff never completed the term.

"Attaches of Mr. Courtney's office said certified copies of the original complaint, conviction and affirmation records would be mailed to the Los Angeles police by Friday with a request to hold Mr. Bioff. Appellate court records showed that Mr. Bioff served seven days of the sentence from February 24th to March 3rd, 1922, before he was released on an appeal bond. They fail to show completion of the remainder of the term after it was affirmed by the appellate court."

In Hollywood Bioff called the action an "obvious attempt by my enemies to discredit and embarrass me on the eve of the climax of negotiations," declared that for 15 years he was "readily available" in Chicago and that "if my enemies think they can intimidate me by dirty politics of this sort they have another guess coming." (A picture of Bioff appears on page 10.)

A skeptical few did not view the recrudescence of the Bioff matter of 17 years ago at this precise time as an accidental coincidence—nor beyond the influences of his familiars.

"Included In" Or?

THE SAM GOLDWYN-United Artists schism, as represented officially by his law suit, appeared this week to be widening and to be becoming a more complex matter.

Reports had it that there was a possibility that the Goldwyn studio would suspend operations for a spell, and that deals were pending. One had it that Paramount was considering approaches, another that RKO was dallying with notions—both timidly aware in interior conferences that the master-showman was a man of controversy—as so currently demonstrated.

Mr. Goldwyn's vice-president, James Roosevelt, continued in New York, smilingly full of "no comment," while he was being said to be "on a leave of absence" and while he was said to be considering a launching into "independent production." The reports got specific with the notion that Mr. Roosevelt had on the fire a one-picture deal with John Ford, director, "for release through Zanuck."

It was to be remembered, the while, that "through Zanuck" would be the Twentieth Century-Fox, and that it was Joseph M. Schenck who not so long ago had been suggesting that Mr. Roosevelt make a study of Hollywood relations, to expert upon the production machine as a whole. Eventually that assignment was laid aside because Mr. Roosevelt felt the task required "full time devotion . . . by a person thoroughly steeped in the knowledge and tradition of the industry."

It is perhaps more than obvious that should the President's son, having been invited into the motion picture industry, elect to be a producer he could probably reasonably expect both financing and a release outlet.

It is not probable, what with Thurman Arnold's anti-trust suit pending and kindred matters, that Mr. Roosevelt would find a closed door.

Incidentally the pending and rumored Goldwyn movements might produce, maybe have produced, some neat problems in the United Artists' interior councils. It is to be expected as improbable that they would consider permitting a stockholder to be producing for distribution elsewhere—and there'd be a deal in stock ownership to settle, by the complicated provisions in such case made and provided.

More Wish-Dollars

A NEW AND SPECIAL TAX on motion picture admissions in California is now proposed by Lt. Governor Ellis Patterson to finance his "$60 per month at 60" pension plan. So far as disclosed the plan would impose a one cent per admission tax on each first run ticket, and scale thence downward to fourth run at an unspecified minimum. The estimated yield is $33,000,000 a year, which sounds like a great many admissions and reminds one of the table cloth arithmetic of Times Square. The project is at the moment merely conversational—but in the fertile soil of the hungering hopefuls of mañana-land it might flourish, even as "Ham and Eggs," or better.

Otterson Moves

JOHN OTTERSON, former general commercial manager of Western Electric, president of Electrical Research Products, once president of Paramount Pictures, and still the president of Tri-National Films, importers of foreign pictures, resigned on last Friday, in New York, as president of the Radio Wire Television Corporation, an amalgamation of "wired music," radio wholesale and retail, and sound recording library companies. With him resigned J. R. West and C. W. Bunn, the latter at one time of the old World Film Corporation, Warners, Pathe, and Erpi.

Succeeding Mr. Otterson is A. W. Pletman.

Tax Revenues Up

FOR THE THIRD consecutive month admission tax collections amounted to more than the sum collected in the same period of 1938. The October, 1939, tax was $1,727,931 compared with $1,596,367 for October, 1938. However, collections fell off $125,000 from the year's high in September of $1,852,256. Last year the monthly decline was only $72,500.

For the first 10 months of the year the Internal Revenue Bureau collected $15,784,133 against $15,655,832 for the same period of 1938.

A special report for the third New York district showed October, 1939, collections of $277,256 against $285,506 last year.

Taxes on free or reduced rate admissions increased from $3,411 to $3,673; on tickets sold by brokers from $3,422 to $6,102; and from admissions to cabarets and roof gardens from $34,380 to $38,617. There was no collection in October on tickets sold by proprietors in excess of the established price.

Lion Gives 50-50

AMERICAN motion picture distributors will be permitted to export, in dollars, 50 per cent of their British revenues. This is estimated to amount to approximately $12,600,000 against the pre-war yearly average of $35,000,000. The total gross revenue of American film companies in England is usually about $51,000,000. After expenses, 20 per cent decrease in business and 20 per cent depreciation in the value of the pound have been deducted, the actual operating revenue this year will be below peace normal.

Oliver Stanley, head of the Board of Trade, announced in London the 50 per cent export regulation in a formal letter to Sir Frederick Whyte, Films Council chairman. At the same time it was stated that a control organization representing the seven American film companies, the Government and the Board of Trade will be established. This organization will have supervision over the remaining revenues. Under a special provision any foreign exchange obtained as a result of overseas distribution of pictures made in Britain is exempt from the restrictive provisions.

Mr. Stanley, in an address delivered Tuesday at a meeting of the Films Council, said that the Government had the intention of continuing the Quota Act in its present form until March when the current booking registration period ends. The only amendment is one extending the period of operation to one year instead of for the usual two six-months periods.

Warner Brothers has five pictures planned and intend to begin operation again next week.

GUARANTEEING "WIND" PROFIT TO EXHIBITOR

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is ready to guarantee a profit to exhibitors on "Gone With the Wind", according to authoritative sources, says Motion Picture Daily. MGM is getting 70 per cent of the theatre's gross on preliminary engagements already arranged. These are the highest terms ever obtained on any picture.

The same sources disclosed that MGM has assured buyers that if these terms do not result in at least a 10 per cent profit above average the company will make up whatever the difference.

MGM is looking for world gross of from 10 to 13 million dollars on the film. Walt Disney's "Snow White", which has the record to date, has grossed more than $8,000,000. MGM's "Mutiny on the Bounty" has grossed nearly $7,000,000 since it was first shown.

Mexico Looks South

SOUTH AMERICA was a land of magic promise only a few months ago in the words of foreign sales managers faced with the war-curtain overseas in Europe. There was talk that exploitation of that market could fill some of the gaps that the war barriers were to make. Not too much has developed in that direction yet, but now Mexico has the idea. Arrangements are being made there to set up a central exchange to pool Mexican productions that may be addressed at markets below the equator.

That is Latin competition for the Latin market. The issue, it would appear, will be decided by the nature of the product and the competency of the exploitation.

"Oh Lady be Good . . ."

EXECUTIVE concentration in Hollywood became manifest at the weekend with the scheduled departure from New York for Hollywood, via the Twentieth Century Limited, Friday, of an array of executives including Nate Blumberg, Barney Balaban, Stanton Griffis, John Hicks, Russell Holman, Maurice Silverstone and Jack Cohn.

It was to be assumed that they were not going out for a bridge tournament.

A fair guess by a certain sardonic observer was that they were to sing a song to Lady Hollywood: "Oh! Lady Be Good to Me!"

Bearing in mind that Joseph M. Schenck is again in Hollywood, and that H. M. Warner is resident there, it would appear there would be what some would call a quorum present.

And speaking of Mr. Schenck recalls that a few days ago he was talking in his organization about the indications for a necessity for concentration on fewer and better pictures with a notion that something like thirty-six productions would be enough for the Twentieth Century-Fox schedule next season.

The significance of that figure is to be had by comparison with the scheduled fifty-eight of the current season for the same concern. If the percentage were to be applied horizontally across major production—which it will be, or else, or, if any—it would be against such other current schedules as Metro's 44-to-52, Warners' 48 and Paramount's 58.

That same Friday of the executive exodus was the day that the employing majors were to hear from William Bioff and about the matters of the allegedly impending strike for 10 per cent for labor. The executives concerned were to be getting their reports by wire on the Century at Harmon, Albany, Cleveland, Chicago and way stations—unless they have had the answer before they start. It may have been in the bag before.

The University of Southern California plays the University of Notre Dame Saturday, November 25th, at South Bend, Ind.

IN RECOGNITION. Thirty years of service with the company brings election to the board of directors of Loew's, Inc., for Joseph R. Vogel, executive in charge of circuit operations outside New York. Mr. Vogel started ushering while a high school student. In 1921 he became the first manager of Loew's State on Broadway. Several years ago he succeeded to the post left vacant by the retirement of Col. E. A. Schiller, general operating executive. On the board he fills the place of late Judge Isidor Frey of Loew's legal staff. Mr. Vogel recently was made vice-president and a director of Loew's Realty & Theatre Company, a subsidiary. The action was taken by the directorate last Friday.

A FLYING VISIT. Ed Rowley and C. V. Jones of the Robb and Rowley circuit in Texas drop in upon the set of "The Marines Fly High" at the RKO Radio studios. Left to right: Mr. Goodman, Lyle Crowe, Richard Dix, Mr. Rowley, Mr. Jones.

NEW WORLDS TO CONQUER. Louella Parsons, Hearst film columnist, flanked by Arleen Whalen at left and Ronald Reagan and Jane Wyman, opening her personal appearance tour at the Golden Gate theatre in San Francisco. Friday brought them to the Philadelphia Earle. Also in the party are Joy Hodges, June Preisser and Susan Hayward.

HOLLYWOOD'S ENIGMA. William Bioff, who picks up and lays down strike deadlines at will, decrees a "breathing spell" in his American Federation of Labor unions' demands for a 10 per cent raise (Page 15).

HORSES, HORSES, HORSES

CRAZY OVER HORSES. "Florian," Winfield Sheehan's first picture for MGM, is from Felix Salten's novel of the romance of a horse trainer and a duchess and their mutual love of the Emperor's stallion. Above: Mr. Sheehan and Edwin L. Marin, whom he chose to direct. Right: Robert Young and Helen Gilbert, the leads, with Florian, of the breed of the Lippizans, the royal horses of old Austria and Franz Josef. Mr. Sheehan imported four of the animals and started breeding at his ranch in Hidden Valley. The first of the Lippizans (from the town of Lippiza) were a cross between Arabian stock and the sturdy Andalusian mountain horse of Spain. Thus from Austrian cavalry to Hollywood runs the course of the strain's 400-year history.

LABOR MAKES MORE DEMANDS ON FILMS, RADIO AND TELEVISION

And Federation of Musicians Promises to Demand More Jobs on Circuits and Deluxe Theatres

Theatrical unions this week turned to their employers with still more demands for more wages, fewer working hours or other work-a-day concessions.

Outstanding was the threat of a studio-wide strike in Hollywood arising from the demands of the International Alliance of Theatrical and Stage Employes for a 10 per cent wage increase, made in answer to the demands of producers for wage reductions to aid studios to meet the international situation. (See page 15.)

In exhibition, arguments continued over demands of either union or exhibitor interests for "new deals" in contracts, strikes resulting in some places, St. Louis, for one, where a "labor war" was waging between Fanchon and Marco and projectionists. (See page 16.)

Musicians Indicate Drive

Strong possibilities of still more labor trouble for the motion picture business loomed over the weekend when the American Federation of Musicians "promised" that demands would be made on exhibition, particularly on circuits and downtown "de luxe" houses, to alleviate the unemployment situation in the ranks of musicians by wholesale hirings for new theatre orchestras. The musicians' fight with theatres started after sound caused countrywide abandonment of orchestras, organists, etc. The AFM down through the years has sporadically brought its campaign before the public, even picketing theatres for depending almost solely upon what the AFM has termed "canned music" on the screen.

Radio entered into the AFM squabble when the musicians local in New York likewise demanded of broadcasters that they engage in the hiring of musicians to the extent of an annual additional wage payment of $1,500,000.

The broadcasters also are to be hit by labor through new demands for more wages and other concessions for television actors.

The intention of the American Federation of Musicians to renew its request that the motion picture industry employ more musicians was revealed in a reply to that organization made by the Independent Radio Network Affiliates, Inc. The IRNA is a branch of the National Association of Broadcasters and represents approximately 300 radio stations.

Demands $1,500,000 More Outlay

The Musicians' Federation had demanded that the independent radio group increase its annual expenditures for staff musicians by $1,500,000. The radio organization had been assured that the Federation planned a drive against the film industry also. The radio group answered the demand by saying that the AFM should proceed against the film industry alone.

The Independent Affiliates group now spends about $3,000,000 annually for staff orchestras and claims that its total music cost each year is between $10,000,000 and $15,000,000. The radio group held that broadcasting had increased employment for musicians and declared through its committee: "You (the AFM) assured us that we were not alone in the program of your federation for receiving demands for increased employment of live musicians and stated that at an early date it was the intention of your Federation to see to it that the motion picture industry made a material contribution towards the re-employment of your members. Many of our affiliates now ask what has been done by you in this direction."

WANTS $100,000 BILLBOARD TAXES

New Jersey billboard tax bills for 1940, totaling nearly $100,000, have been mailed to all advertising companies and private owners maintaining outdoor advertising signs, Robert B. Chapman, supervisor of the billboard division of the New Jersey Tax Department, announced this week. The motion picture industry through distributors and local exhibitors are among the biggest users of billboards.

The New Jersey law requires payment of outdoor advertising permit fees between December 1st and December 15th, Mr. Chapman said. "It has been common practice for many people to put off payment until the first of the year, which is contrary to the law," he added.

Says Employment Increased

The INRA in its answer went on to state that radio had actually increased employment among musicians by popularizing name bands, and that radio stations would be willing to drop remote pickups of such bands if they could pay musicians only for services actually rendered. But it was held that the stations could not increase their expenditure for music.

The reply of IRNA also held that that music supplied by local orchestras was inferior. It was charged that musicians supplied are frequently not unemployed but merely part-time workers; that music of studio bands is not of sufficiently high quality to attract sponsorship and that frequently stations are now paying for musicians that they do not use.

IRNA requested that any new plan be for at least five years and that no change in the Federation rules be made during the term of the agreement and that a provision for arbitration should be included. The radio group also asked for greater flexibility in the rules and that the supply of recordings should not be impeded. It also requested that obstacles to the commercial resale of staff orchestras be eliminated.

Although the IRNA represents approximately 300 stations, it is said that the organization has only 79 due-paying members.

Television Actors' Demands

Meanwhile actor unions are seeking an increase in wage scales for television performers. A preliminary report was to be presented and negotiations with NBC are expected to be started before December 1st. NBC is the principal telecaster of regular daily programs.

The unions will not attempt to set a permanent scale for they are taking "cognizance of the experimental phases" of television. However it is held that wage scales have continually declined and the unions want the wages raised substantially.

A joint committee with representatives of Actors Equity, American Federation of Radio Artists and Screen Actors Guild has been established to investigate the television situation. No action is planned on the question of final jurisdiction over television. The joint committee appointed two sub-committees; one to study the general expenditure of the networks, including program costs and the other to preparing preliminary wage standards.

The joint committee was to begin consideration of wage standards on Wednesday. When the report is completed it will be turned over to the parent body, the Associated Actors and Artists of America. That body will then appoint a committee to begin negotiations with NBC and also with CBS when the latter begins regular television programs, probably around the first of February. This administrative committee will have a representative from each of the three unions involved and also Frank Gillmore, 4A president and Paul N. Turner, counsel. The committee will seek a six months or a one-year agreement but no demand is planned for a written contract.

At present a member of any 4A union will be allowed to work in television. The performers who work solely for television are now so few in number that no problem has been created. These men probably will be required to join one of the 4A unions, it was said.

Denies Removal from Jurisdiction

Paul Dullzell, executive secretary of Equity, issued a formal statement denying reports that the committee had removed Equity from any jurisdiction in the television field. He pointed out that the committee was sanctioned by Equity as part of a general 4A reorganization and declared that its purpose was to profit by the knowledge of the other members.

Wilson and Reed Succeed Swope and Young at GE

Charles E. Wilson, formerly executive vice-president of the General Electric Company, was elected president at a meeting last Friday in New York City, of the company's board of directors.

Phillip G. Reed, formerly assistant to the president, was named chairman of the board.

The two men succeed, respectively, Gerard Swope and Owen D. Young, on January 1st. Mr. Swope and Mr. Young have asked for retirement.

Laemmle's Estate Set at $3,000,000

The executors of Carl Laemmle's estate set a net value of $3,000,000 over existing encumbrances and indebtedness, according to a petition filed in court asking permission to continue operations of the C. L. Import Corporation. The court gave the necessary permission and also the executors have been authorized to sell certain stocks of fluctuating value.

Actresses of the Past In Art Museum Film

The Museum of Modern Art is presenting a film, "Great Actresses of the Past," this week. The picture is made up from four motion pictures: "Mme. Sans Gene" (1911), starring Rejane; "Camille" (1912), Bernhardt; "Vanity Fair" (1915), Mrs. Fiske, and "Cenera" (1916), with Duse.

STUDIO-LABOR WAGE FIGHT BRINGS SHOWDOWN ON STRIKE THREAT

Committees of Producers and Employees Meet Again to Terminate Deadlock After Deadline Is Waived

Apparitions of closed coast studios, locked projection rooms and darkened theatres and laboratories stalked Hollywood executives on Monday, "deadline" for a scheduled strike by American Federation of Labor studio unions, and then rested until Friday, when a producers' committee and one from the unions again met, again striving to terminate a deadlock over the unions' demand for a 10 per cent wage increase.

The union demand was issued in the form of a strike ultimatum last Wednesday afternoon; the deadline was set for 2:30 P. M. Monday. The demand came after a meeting of the Conference of American Federation of Labor Studio Unions, led by William Bioff, West Coast representative of the 12,000 studio International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, with the committee of the Association of Motion Picture Producers, led by E. J. Mannix. The meeting had been called to discuss the producers' request that the Alliance relinquish the 10 per cent pay raise it had obtained on September 25th. The producers heard the IATSE officially reject this request, and then heard the other AFL conference unions ask for a similar increase, backed by Mr. Bioff and the Alliance, and by the strike threat. (See page 8)

Strike Held in Abeyance

On Monday, after a three and one-half hour debate, the producers and the unions agreed to carry the matter over to Friday, and hold the strike in abeyance.

Too, the hope was expressed that the "breathing spell" given to producers by the unions, in the adjournment to Friday, would result in a peaceful settlement. After the long conference both Joseph M. Schenck, president of the Association of Motion Picture Producers, and Meyer Lewis, western director of the AFL, declared themselves pleased with the results thus far.

Only 3,500 workers are involved in the 10 per cent wage increase demand, as shown by an approximation and estimation of the number of workers involved in 11 craft locals outside the Alliance's 10 units and four groups of unions in the studio basic labor agreement.

Should the producers grant a 10 per cent wage increase to the 3,500 workers the annual cost to them, based on an average of $1,000 annual salary, would be $350,000.

On Wednesday it was learned that the producers' negotiating committee would go into Friday's meeting with Mr. Bioff and other union representatives confident that neither the granting of union demands in unqualified form nor a strike will follow. On the contrary, it is the belief of producer-negotiators that discussions will be carried on for possibly a month, for the purpose of arriving at a finally and permanently tenable common meeting ground. This would carry negotiations well past December 6th, the date of the studio basic agreement meeting at Newark, N. J.

On the other hand, Mr. Bioff said on Wednesday: "I am confident that we will obtain a 10 per cent wage increase on Friday."

To strengthen a producers' firm stand, it was pointed out that the studios had completed a sizeable share of the season's product, so that a shutdown for several weeks, during which both sides would be forced to settle differences, would not be so inimical to the studios as some quarters predicted.

At the Monday conference were Messrs. Schenck and Lewis; Mr. Bioff, chairman of the AFL studio union conference; J. W. Buzzell, executive secretary of the Los Angeles Central Labor Council; Walter Redmond, international representative of the Plasterers Union; E. J. Mannix, Y. Frank Freeman, Mendel Silberberg, and Walter Wanger, for the producers.

Statement Non-committal

The official, non-committal joint statement following the meeting said:

"A committee of producers and a committee representing the unions met this afternoon, and discussed problems affecting the labor situation in the studios. The committee representing the producers have asked for further postponement in order to consider the problems affecting the industry. Some progress has been made in this negotiating and a date for further negotiations has been set for Friday."

Mr. Lewis said on Monday that no new strike deadline had been set.

Two weeks ago, at the time of the producers' request to Mr. Bioff that he, acting for the IATSE, relinquish the 10 per cent wage increase granted to his union, the West Coast Alliance leader had said the salaries in the motion picture industry were top-heavy, that there should be a readjustment, and that a "round-table conference" would be necessary.

He invited the creative guilds, the Screen Actors, Writers and Directors Guilds to participate in the conference last Wednesday. They refused. A letter from the Actors Guild, signed by Kenneth Thomson, its executive secretary, said:

"It is our opinion that it is good labor practice for unions to present their case for improved working conditions for their members and let the employers present the argument against improved working conditions. For unions to take the initiative in marshalling or circulating the employers' arguments is both bad labor union practice and entirely unnecessary; for the employers—particularly the producing employers—are well able to look out for their own interests."

Writers Aloof

Sheridan Gibney, recently elected president of the writers' group, said that the writers always had retained the privilege of dealing with the producers "independently," though they were "willing to discuss any mutual problem with fellow employees."

Alliance officials indicated no dismay at the Guilds' refusal, saying that their cooperation was not vital to the conduct of a successful fight against the producers.

At last Wednesday's "round-table" conference, Mr. Lewis told the assembled busi-

"Unreasonable Restraints" by Labor Held Punishable Under Trust Act

Invocation of the United States Anti-Trust Act faces labor unions employing illegal boycotts, strikes and coercion, the Department of Justice warned over the weekend, in a statement of Governmental labor policy, as written by Thurman Arnold, Assistant Attorney General, who, as head of the trust bureau, now is conducting the prosecution of the organized motion picture industry. It will also be remembered that Mr. Arnold's department also is leading a Federal Grand Jury investigation in Hollywood into studio labor matters, besides income tax affairs of film heads.

The anti-trust laws are violated if a union uses "unreasonable restraints", said Mr. Arnold, in a letter to the secretary of the Central Labor Union of Indianapolis, answering an inquiry concerning the application of the trust laws to labor unions.

Five types of "punishable acts" were set forth, some of which might apply to past motion picture labor situations, principally to Hollywood jurisdictional fights among studio unions.

Mr. Arnold listed as "unreasonable restraints": (1) Preventing the use of cheaper material, improved equipment or more efficient methods; (2) compelling the hiring of useless and unnecessary labor; (3) enforcing a system of graft and extortion as when a racketeer, masquerading as a labor leader, interferes with the commerce of those who will not pay him to leave them alone; (4) enforcing illegally fixed prices, and (5) destroying an established and legitimate system of collective bargaining as when one union makes war on another union by attacking employers who deal with that union—as in jurisdictional union disputes.

WRESTLE OVER PAY RAISE DEMAND

ness agents of the studio locals that the entire resources of the American Federation of Labor would back them, if a struggle took place.

The producers, confronted at the conference with the added union demands, and the strike threat, issued this statement, which is, in effect, an account of the meeting:

"The crafts unions demanded a flat ten per cent increase on present base rates of pay. The producers presented figures showing effects of the world war upon receipts of studios, and a statement that it was necessary for studios to make substantial retrenchment rather than to give any increase at the present time. The producers offered to show to the committee to be appointed by employee groups the accuracy of the figures presented.

"The employee groups stated they must have an agreement to increase wages, immediately, and told producers that unless this increase was granted by Monday at 2:30 P.M., they would take action. The producers stated that the time given was altogether out of reason and asked for a reasonable length of time both to consult their principals and to present the facts to the crafts groups. This, the craft groups refused to give. They first stated that the request of the producers for a surrender of the 10 per cent raise already granted was refused by the IATSE, and that they demanded in addition an increase of ten per cent for all other crafts."

Calls It Concerted Action

Mr. Lewis explained the demand for an increase to all non-IATSE union groups of the AFL, as a "concerted action" by the AFL unions "for the benefit of the smaller and less powerful unions in the studios, who had consistently been ignored in previous upward revisions of wages. Too few in the industry are getting too much, while too many are getting too little."

Mr. Buzzell is reported to have said at the meeting: "The time has come to correct a maladjustment of salaries, which made it impossible for the little fellow averaging $1,000 yearly to gain a livelihood, while the industry passed out the bulk of its gain to top executives and others."

Outside of the Alliance, the crafts unions are the plumbers, machinists, operating engineers, sheet metal workers, plasterers, building service employees, blacksmiths, molders, sign and picture painters, studio utility employees, studio drivers, electrical workers, and metal polishers.

Basic Agreement Session December 6th

The only union absent in representation, at the conference, was the Moving Picture Painters Local 644, which has been asking the producers for a 15 per cent wage increase, and which lately granted their request for deferment of negotiations until after December 6th. The painters have resolved that they "stand solidly behind the rank and file of the IATSE and other crafts in rejecting any wage cuts at this time."

On December 6th, the producers are scheduled to negotiate a new "basic" agreement with the four international unions, the teamsters, electrical workers, carpenters, and musicians; and, probably, with the IATSE.

OUST EIGHT OPERATORS IN ST. LOUIS TILT

On a widely scattered union front, theatre employees this week won several tilts and lost others. In New York, Local 306 projectionists won a 10 per cent wage boost from the Independent Theatre Owners Association, to that unit's recorded "great dissatisfaction".

In St. Louis, eight operators in the local union were dismissed by the Fanchon & Marco Service Corporation, which, with the St. Louis Amusement Company, is in dispute with the labor unit. Paid newspaper ads by the two theatre companies said the men were sacked for joining the picketing of the Fox theatre and six neighborhood houses. In the same city, the MPTO, representing 60 neighborhood houses, last week offered to grant a 5 cents per hour increase to 300 members of Local B-2 of the I.A.T.S.E. (service employees), which is asking a 15 cents per hour raise.

In New York, the state mediation board settled a strike by the Empire State Operators Union at the Grand theatre, Brooklyn.

Last Friday, endeavoring to confute the producers' claims that the motion picture industry could not stand added union wages at this time, Mr. Lewis and Mr. Bioff said:

"Records of the United States Treasury Department reveal that, in 1937, the last year for which figures are still available at this source, 74 producers drew in salaries from five major producing and distributing corporations to a total of $13,926,511, an average of $188,195, or approximately $3,600 per week.

"One major studio paid 23 producers a total of $5,151,369, an average of $220,000 each, or approximately $4,000 a week. Of 63 salaries in United States industry of more than $200,000 annually, 40 are in the picture business.

"These are the men who would economize by taking $2.50 off the paycheck of a man making $25 per week."

33 Films Before Cameras

The production of films in the studios, during these negotiations, is reported the lowest since April, with 33 pictures before the cameras last week. Not counting the features already shipped to laboratories for release printing, 85 pictures were in cutting rooms.

Last week, George E. Browne, president of the Alliance, reinstated approximately 200 members who had been expelled from Hollywood locals for siding with the United Studio Technicians Guild, a CIO sponsored organization, in the fight before the National Labor Relations Board, for certification as the bargaining agency for studio workers. Said Mr. Browne, according to report:

"We recognize that these men who have worked in the studios for so many years had been misled by a few zealots, and were misguided in their efforts. The union does not wish to deprive them of their right to make a living. There is no spirit of vindictiveness in the Alliance."

Publicity Men Act

The Screen Publicists' Guild, in Hollywood, last week, after the expiration of its "deadline" for signatures of the producers to a contract already ratified by them, adopted a resolution empowering its executive committee "to take such steps as it deems necessary to secure immediate execution of the agreement already concluded with the producers, including legal reports, affiliation, or such economic action as may be necessary."

The affiliation referred to was reported as a possible tie up with the CIO Newspaper Guild or the AFL Alliance, both reported anxious to include the screen publicity men.

The Guild adopted its resolution after learning that the producers had agreed to effect a minimum wage scale, severance pay, and a 90 per cent Guild shop, but had also asked for delay to talk over details. The Guild saw no reason for delay.

This week the Motion Picture Laboratory Technicians Local 702 began a campaign to organize independent technicians of all classes, in the New York area. The Local now is negotiating with Malcolm Film Laboratory and Pathe Film Laboratory.

After the arrival of Kenneth Thomson, executive secretary of the Screen Actors Guild, in New York last Wednesday, from the Coast, a meeting of the international board of the Associated Actors and Artistes of America was held, on the "one big union" plan and on television jurisdiction.

This week, an accountant was ordered to work full time on the drawing up of a plan.

The Los Angeles Building Trades Council last week placed the pictures of Leon Errol on its boycott list, saying the star refused to employ union men on the construction of his own buildings.

Eureka Loses Again In "Ecstasy" Ruling

Eureka Productions, Inc., has lost another round in its long drawn out efforts in New York to reverse the Motion Picture Division and Board of Regents of the state in the matter of refusing a license to "Ecstasy" when the appellate division of the New York supreme court in Albany this week refused to hear reargument.

"Ecstasy," the first picture to be viewed in an appellate division courtroom back in 1937, had been resubmitted in a slightly revised edition earlier this year and the appellate division had unanimously rejected a motion by Henry Pearlman, Eureka attorney, seeking reversal of the ban against the film.

SHIPPING DIFFICULTIES INCREASE BUT NO FILMS HAVE BEEN SUNK YET

Companies Say Loss of Time Due to Regulations and Irregular Sailings Costs More Than Some Losses Would

As the torpedoing and mining of merchant ships spread to additional lanes this week, film distributors were experiencing increased difficulties with shipments abroad, but the American companies still had not lost a single reel, they reported.

Delays and handicaps to shipping were attributed by them to the passage of the Neutrality Act, which required the withdrawal of all American ships from the combat zones, to irregular and infrequent sailings of vessels still in service, and to the many wartime regulations already reported.

Time Loss Blamed

Much time has been lost, the home offices said, at a cost to the large companies much higher than the loss or destruction of some shipments would have entailed.

The majors reported that film shipments to Europe and other parts of the world directly affected by the war were proceedings as well as could be expected. Immediately after the war was declared, they said, shipping was very confused, and the Neutrality Act and new regulations by steamship lines and foreign governments at first added to the confusion, but now operation is again systematized.

The companies are using neutral ships so far as possible; shipment to England is the chief exception to this rule. Reshipment to Great Britain, it was pointed out, presents many difficulties: Permission must be obtained from the British consul in New York before the film is sent to a neutral country and even then there is no certainty that the shipment will ever arrive. English ships are running on very irregular sailings but are considered comparatively safe due to the convoy system. One of the problems cited is that no notice is given in advance about the sailing date, so in many cases the film has been loaded many days before the ship really sails and more valuable time has been lost.

Shipments Rerouted

The Neutrality Act makes it impossible for the film companies to keep their regular policy of using American ships as much as possible. No ships under the American flag are allowed to enter the areas designated as war zones by the President. So film shipments, as all other shipping to these countries from America, had to be rerouted. Bergen, Norway, lies just outside the war zone and American ships are running to that port. Some motion picture companies are considering reshipping through Norway.

It is even more difficult to get film into France than into England, it was noted. Neutral vessels have stopped calling at both countries and there are very few French lines running between the United States and France. Shipment is possible by way of England but this involves a second shipping, across the English channel, where it is difficult to move anything besides war material. Some of the companies said they are considering shipping film to France via Italy. The Italian Line boats still are running and Genoa is close to the French border. The chief difficulty cited here is the question of how long Italy will remain neutral and whether Italy would care to reship films for American companies, especially to France.

WAR NATIONS LEAD FOR 20TH-FOX OVERSEAS

War-stricken areas have made the best divisional showings in the Twentieth Century-Fox drive overseas. Great Britain leads the foreign territories on divisional revenue delivery. Japan has maintained first place in delivery during the first nine weeks of the drive. Peru heads the list of 14 countries that have gone over their quota.

Shipments into the Baltic area have been the most delayed, the offices said; in fact, for all practical purposes that region is quite cut off from a supply of American films. It takes many weeks to get film into the Dutch and Swedish markets.

The war has made a number of readjustments in servicing Europe necessary. The Paris office of Paramount, for example, now makes prints only for France and her colonies instead of for most of Continental Europe, which was the case before the war. The London office now handles film for Holland and also for the Balkans. In the case of the Balkans a great delay results because shipments from England to the Balkans is very irregular and uncertain, distributors said.

India for a number of reasons was considered one of the hardest places to reach with film. An MGM shipment to India has been unreported for several weeks. All that the home office has been able to establish is that the ship has not been sunk, but no other details of its whereabouts can be learned.

Fear of German sea raiders operating in the South Atlantic and the Indian Ocean make shipments to India and South Africa also very slow, it was added.

The trans-Atlantic airplane service to Lisbon, Portugal, would solve a number of difficulties in getting film abroad, if it were not for the fact that the cost involved makes this out of the question, they said. The Clippers are not carrying express, only first class air mail. Companies would use the Clipper service, if the cost was within reason, it was indicated.

Says Rules Bar Express

Pan-American Airways said that express service was about to be inaugurated when the war broke out but present conditions make it impossible because of the various custom and contraband regulations. Even the air-mail, it was emphasized, is seriously delayed by the censorship. A letter sent by Clipper from New York reaches Lisbon in about three days but it takes three more to get to France and five more to reach England. Mail inspection eats up most of the time saved by airmail across the Atlantic and it is no longer possible for the film companies to keep in close touch with Europe through that medium, the distributors declared.

The motion picture companies said they have made no plans to work out a uniform shipping agreement. Each company feels that its own organization can handle film shipments in the usual way despite war difficulties. It often is the case that films of several companies happen to be on the same ship, they added, but if one company worked out a special way of shipping it would share with their competitors.

Twentieth Century-Fox handles its own forwarding but a number of the companies have Massce & Company for their agent. The Massce company reported that the method of preparing and handling export shipments had been made more difficult almost every day since September 15th. Before that date film, or any other shipment, could be delivered at times within one-half hour of sailing time; a single bill of lading could cover the entire shipment; export declarations could be prepared 72 hours after sailing and the freight charges could be paid 48 hours after the steamer sailed.

All this has been changed, the company said. Export declarations and permits from the steamship lines must all be prepared in advance. The shipment must be in possession of the steamship company at least 24 hours before sailing and no credit is allowed. A duplicate set of documents is sent on the next mail.

Games Attacked In Six Centers

Ruled a lottery in Ohio and Mississippi and attacked by civil and civic authorities in Chicago, New Jersey, Wisconsin and Alabama, chance games at theatres came through this week with but a single victory, in Buffalo.

In Buffalo the authorities are permitting exhibitors to run chance games without interference, despite threats by police officials recently that the practice would result in suspension of theatre license. Allied Theatre Owners of New York interceded for the exhibitors, pointing out that Bingo games in which large prizes were awarded were permitted in Buffalo.

Bank Night as operated by the Troy Amusement Company, Troy, Ohio, is a violation of the Ohio lottery law, it was ruled by Richard L. Cameron, common pleas judge, of Marysville, in dismissing an injunction suit filed by the company to prevent seizure of its equipment at the Mayflower theatre under a search warrant. "The presence of the three elements as required by law, a consideration given, a prize awarded and determination of winners by chance, make Bank Night a lottery," the decision read.

Bank Night also was ruled a lottery in an opinion handed down in Yazoo City, Miss., by Chancellor M. B. Montgomery in a suit brought against the Dixie Theatre, Inc., by John S. Holmes, a resident. An injunction halting its operation was issued. The ruling said that in the actual operation of the scheme, persons on the average are paying a valuable consideration for a chance to win and the Bank Night in question is therefore a lottery.

Barnett Hodes, Chicago corporation counsel, says all theatre cash giveaways are contrary to city ordinances and that the police will stop them if theatres use them again.

Paramount Dividend

The board of directors of Paramount, Inc., at a meeting Wednesday in New York declared a regular quarterly dividend of $1.50 per share on the first preferred stock and 15 cents a share on the second preferred. The dividends are payable December 26th to stockholders of record December 8th.

PARAMOUNT CALLS OUT INDIANS FOR "GERONIMO"; MGM PRE-DATES "WIND"

Canadian Officialdom Sees Korda's "The Lion Has Wings"; Macy's Department Store Aids "Gulliver's Travels"

The major merchandisers of motion pictures are invading virtually every mountain and valley, desert and plains for locations of ballyhoos for field premieres of new productions, away from the arc lights of Broadway and Hollywood Boulevard. On Saturday, Paramount will launch "Geronimo" to the shrills of all the wild whoopings that the few remaining store-clothed Apaches can command on their Arizona reservations.

At Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, the word is full steam ahead for the field opening of "Gone With the Wind," as coming both from Howard Dietz, of MGM, as the distributor, and Russell Birdwell, representing David Selznick, the producer, the combined interests this week setting nine pre-release dates to follow the big opening at Atlanta on December 15.

United Artists this week went to Canada to get official recognition for its new Korda-British production of "The Lion Has Wings," and Paramount won advance attention for its "Gulliver's Travels," feature cartoon, in Macy's department store annual Thanksgiving Day parade.

Arizona's "Geronimo" Celebration

Paramount's "Geronimo" will have its world's premiere on November 25th in three Arizona cities as the culmination of the three-day "The Valley of the Sun Celebration." Governor Robert T. Jones is in charge of the celebration. His committee includes Clarence Budington Kelland, author; Major-general A. M. Tuthill; Walter J. Thalheimer, mayor of Phoenix; Charles G. Stauffer, publisher of the Arizona Republic Gazette; Roy R. Hislop, City manager of Phoenix; Dr. Grady Gammage, president of Arizona State Teacher's College and E. W. Montgomery, superintendent of Phoenix high schools and junior college.

The picture will open in Phoenix at the Orpheum and Rialto theatres and at the State theatre in Tucson and also in the little town of Safford which is located on Arizona's Apache Indian reservation where many descendants of Geronimo's warriors will be in the audience. Chief Thunder Cloud, Indian actor who portrays the title role in the picture, will go from Hollywood to Safford to make a personal appearance at the opening at the Long Theatre.

The "Valley of the Sun Geronimo Celebration" at Phoenix will be attended by Robert Geronimo, 45 year old son of the Apache war chief. Young Geronimo will come from his home at Mescalero, New Mexico. He will be accompanied by Sam Chino, 74 years old and reputed to be one of Chief Geronimo's lieutenants and by H. L. Newmano, superintendent of the Mescalero Apache Indian Reservation.

Chino will chant Apache war cries over a national radio hook-up as part of the Celebration. Another high point will be the sacred ceremonial devil dance performed by Indians of Geronimo's own tribe. The dance will be performed during the parade before the premiere.

The following Hollywood personalities were expected for the celebration: Preston Foster, Kitty Kelly, Chief Thunder Cloud and Monte Blue from the cast of the picture; Patricia Morison, Robert Preston, J. Carrol Naish, William Frawley, Joseph Allen, Jr., and director Paul H. Sloane.

ARIZONA NAMES "GOLDWYN CITY"

On location for "The Westerner", some 20 miles outside of Tucson, Arizona, Samuel Goldwyn's company working in the picture Monday witnessed the site's dedication as "Goldwyn City" by Governor R. T. Jones.

The Governor's proclamation stated that the replica of a Texas frontier community was named Goldwyn, Arizona, in recognition of the services of Samuel Goldwyn to the industry which "ranks as one of civilization's finest artistic attainments", and as a further proof that Arizona welcomed the motion picture industry and wished "to afford every reasonable inducement to the industry to locate permanently within its borders".

The premiere of "Geronimo" will be followed by pre-release showings beginning December 1st at Albuquerque, Denver, and Salt Lake City, and on December 7th at Colorado Springs, Pueblo, Boise, Ogden, Spokane, Reno and Sacramento.

"Wind" Pre-release Openings

Between December 15th, the date of the world's premiere at Atlanta of "Gone with the Wind," and January 1st, the picture will have double openings in New York and Los Angeles and begin engagements in a number of other key cities throughout the nation. Nine of these special bookings have been announced by MGM.

In New York the Selznick-International production will play simultaneously at the Astor and Capitol theatres beginning on December 19th. The seats at the Astor will be reserved, with two performances daily. The price scale will range from $.75 to $2.20, including the tax. At the Capital, where the gala New York opening will be held, the film will be shown from mid-morning until midnight, with unreserved seats after the opening performance. The scale at the Capitol will be $.75 for daytime and $1.10 at night. The running time of the picture is three hours and forty minutes and there will be an interval of approximately a half-hour between each showing in order to make it unlikely that patrons will enter after the screening has started.

In Los Angeles and in Boston the same plan of a double engagement will be followed. "Gone with the Wind" will open at the Carthay Circle on the Coast December 28th where there will be two reserved seat showings each day. The next day a second Los Angeles engagement will begin at the United Artists Theatre where there will be three screenings a day with seats unreserved.

The Boston openings will be held on December 21st at the State and Orpheum theatres. The State will sell reserved seats exclusively for two performances a day; the Orpheum will have three showings a day with reserved seats only at the night screening.

The picture also opens in Cincinnati, Reading and Harrisburg on December 21st. In Cincinnati it will be shown at the Capitol on a three-a-day unreserved seat basis; at the Colonial theatre in Reading with two reserved seat showings and at Loew's Harrisburg theatre there will be three shows, the first starting at noon.

An announcement trailer, with no pictorial matter, is planned for the theatres to state the policy for the run of the picture. The studio is making a one-reel short giving background and describing the behind-the-scenes operations of the production which will be distributed as part of the MGM short subject schedule.

William F. Rodgers, MGM general sales manager, has called a mid-season conference in Chicago for November 25-26 to discuss the policy on "Gone with the Wind." Home office executives, district and branch managers will attend. Also representatives of Selznick International. Al Lichtman is scheduled to come from the studio.

Meanwhile plans for the Atlanta opening are taking form. The price scale for opening night has not yet been determined but the scale will be $.75 to $1.50 for the rest of the two-a-day run. The set in which Rhett dances with Scarlett will be moved to Atlanta and set up at the Junior League Ball, according to present plans. Dresses used in the picture will be exhibited. Kay Kyser is to bring his orchestra for the ball.

"Lion Has Wings" in Canada

Alexander Korda's "The Lion Has Wings" had its premiere in Canada last Wednesday night at the Uptown theatre, Toronto. The opening was attended by several hundred members of the Royal Air Force and its band. National and City Officials together with the Air Force and City Police marched in a military parade through the city to the theatre. All the ceremonies were covered by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation in a nation-wide network on which government men and others discussed the picture.

Monroe W. Greenthal, exploitation manager of United Artists handled the special drive in Toronto and Ottawa. The campaign aimed at securing the cooperation of government officials. In Ottawa, the nation's capital's special showing was held for Prime Minister Mackenzie King, all the members of his Cabinet, Lord Riverdale and the heads of the Canadian and the Australian air forces.

A special "official press" preview was held in Toronto which was attended by publishers of the dominion's newspapers, heads of all syndicates, executives of the Canadian Broadcasting Company and by officers of the Royal Air Force.

"Gulliver" in Macy Parade

A 30-foot figure of Gulliver, star of Paramount's Max Fleischer color feature-length cartoon, was one of the chief attractions in Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade in New York City. The huge figure was escorted through New York on a special float surrounded by men and women in military uniforms.

Special "Gulliver's Travel" booklets for children will be distributed free at the store's Christmas Village.

"Gulliver's Travels" will have 77 minute running time and has been produced at a reported cost of $1,500,000. 18,000 gallons of water colors in 600 variations of the primary colors were used by the 200 artists working on the color cartoon.

William S. Holman, former Columbia studio manager, will join the Frank Capra-Robert Riskin producing unit as general manager.

NEW DEAL HELD 'NO. 1' PRODUCER AND EXHIBITOR OF ALL ADMINISTRATIONS

Eighty - seven Films Depicting Activities of Its Bureaus and Agencies Put Out During Current Regime

by FRANCIS L. BURT
in Washington

The New Deal stands today the greatest motion picture producer, distributor and exhibitor of all Federal Administrations, turning its cameras, for the most part, on the progress and procedure of its multi-alphabetical agencies. Eighty-seven motion pictures depicting activities of the New Deal have been put out by its various divisions, departments, bureaus and agencies during the present Administration.

Apart from Regular Film Work

These pictures are entirely apart from what might be termed the regular film activities of the Government, such as the pictures on the proper care of children produced for the Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor, the films on control of insect pests, better farming methods, stock raising and the like put out by the Department of Agriculture, similar efforts in the field of visual education, and films of the Department of Mines, all of which run into the hundreds.

The costs of producing these New Deal films are not obtainable. Efforts to find out how much had been expended on such work were even made by Congress at various times without success. The National Emergency Council, split up this year under President Roosevelt's departmental reorganization program, also was unable to learn the costs. In fact, some of the New Deal producing agencies themselves are unable to estimate the cost of their films, largely because they frequently were produced by staffs engaged also in other activities or paid for out of "publicity" funds which were never broken down into definite figures for any particular operation.

Loaned to Theatres

With few exceptions, the New Deal's pictures are distributed by the department or agency for which they were made. As a general rule, films are loaned to theatres and others without charge, the borrower paying transportation both ways. They are given to understand that no admission or rental fees shall be charged for the programs in which the pictures are used unless they are shown in licensed theatres as parts of regular programs.

During the life of the National Emergency Council it was proposed that the NEC film division should take over the distribution of all Government films, but the project never was put into effect, largely because of the desire of some of the New Deal agencies to retain control over the showing of their pictures.

Interior Department Leads

In the field of New Deal films, the Interior Department leads with some 30 pictures, devoted mostly to the recreational possibilities of the national parks and other areas under its control. The Department of Agriculture follows with a score of films dealing with various phases of the Administration's agricultural program. The remainder of the pictures are the products of some eight New Deal agencies, and are devoted to their particular fields of activity.

DES MOINES RADIO FANS LIKE COMEDY

Good comedy is preferred as radio fare by listeners in the Des Moines area, according to a survey by Station WHO. The survey asked preferences for the Fall and Winter. Programs on job placement came second in public favor; musical, third. Detective stories were fourth.

In some respects the 87 motion pictures considered in this survey may not be a complete list. It is quite possible, for instance, that some of the films placed in this category may be considered by many to be pictures that would have been put out under any Administration, in the regular course of its work; on the other hand, the list may not include pictures which some might consider as New Deal projects. In the final analysis, inclusion or exclusion of any particular motion picture is a matter of definition, but in the list selected an effort was made to distinguish between films furthering the long-established educational work of the various departments and those devoted to activities initiated by the Administration since March 4, 1933.

Starting first with the New Deal agencies themselves, the investigation developed that they now have the following pictures:

Federal Housing Administration, now a branch of the Federal Loan Agency set up under the President's reorganization plan:

"Design and Construction of Three Small Homes," a two-reel technical showing of the construction of small homes. A 16-mm. sound picture revised this year.

In addition, the FHA has "Better Housing News Flashes," for loans in 35mm. sound and for sale in 16mm. sound, which were produced in connection with its publicity.

National Youth Administration, now a branch of the Federal Security Agency:

"NYA Builds a Sea Base," a one-reel silent color picture of the dedication of a sea plane base at Glen Cove, Long Island, built by five NYA youths in eight days. 16mm.

"NYA Builds a Ski Jump," a two-reel silent color picture of the Olympic finals on the largest structural steel ski jump in the world, built by the New Hampshire NYA. 16mm.

"NYA Student Aid," a one-reel silent picture showing the work activities performed by NYA students in schools, colleges, etc. 16mm.

"Royalty Visits the White House," a two-reel silent color picture of the visit to Washington of King George and Queen Elizabeth of the United Kingdom. 16mm.

"Youth Also Serves," a two-reel silent color picture showing the emergency activities of the NYA and other public agencies after the New England and New York hurricane in September, 1938. 16mm.

"Youth Visits Our Nation's Capitol," a two-reel silent color tour of Washington. 16mm.

"Youth-Building at Wilberforce University," a one-reel silent color picture of activities at the oldest college for Negroes in the United States. 16mm.

Social Security Board, also a branch of the Federal Security Agency:

"Social Security for the Nation," a one-reel sound picture of what Social Security means, released in October, 1939. 16mm.

"Social Security for the People," a four-minute condensation of "Social Security for the Nation." 16mm. sound.

The SSB films are being distributed by the board's regional offices in Birmingham, Ala.; San Francisco, Denver, Washington, D. C.; Chicago, Kansas City, Boston, Minneapolis, New York, Cleveland, Philadelphia and San Antonio.

U. S. Film Service, formerly part of the National Emergency Council and now a branch of the Federal Security Agency:

"Plow That Broke the Plains," the three-reel sound saga of the Great Plains and the Nation's dust-bowl, produced in 1936. 16 and 35mm.

"The River," a three-reel sound picture dramatizing flood and erosion along the Mississippi. 16 and 35mm.

"The Plow" and "The River" were produced under the direction of Pare Lorentz, who now has in the making two new epics, one on unemployment and another on health, which are expected to be completed within a few months.

United States Public Health Service, formerly a branch of the Treasury Department and now part of the Federal Security Agency:

"Three Counties Against Syphilis," a two-reel sound picture of what is being done to stamp out the disease in Georgia. Has a narration by Alois Havrilla and music by the Hampton Institute Choir. 16 and 35mm. Distributed through the Department of Agriculture.

United States Housing Authority, now part of the Federal Works Agency:

"Housing in Our Time," a two-reel sound picture of the activities under the housing program. 16 and 35mm.

"World War Against Slums," a three-reel silent picture of housing in England, France, Germany, Italy and Russia. 16mm.

Works Projects Administration, formerly the Works Progress Administration, now a branch of the Federal Works Agency:

"Hands," a one-reel sound picture tracing the passage of money from its production by the Government, through the WPA and into circulation, solely through pictures of hands. 16 and 35mm.

"Man Against the River," a one-reel sound picture of the Ohio Valley flood of 1937. 16 and 35mm.

"Rain for the Earth," a two-reel sound picture of drought in the Great Plains, showing the start of reclamation and conservation work. 16 and 35mm.

"Shock Troops of Disaster," a one-reel sound picture of the 1938 hurricane. 16 and 35mm.

"We Work Again," a two-reel sound picture of WPA work among the Negroes, with an all-Negro cast. 16 and 35mm.

"Work Pays America," a five-reel sound picture of representative projects of the WPA. 16 and 35mm.

Tennessee Valley Authority: "Electricity

TITLES OF FILMS MADE BY NEW DEAL

on the Farm," a two-reel silent picture of rural electrification. 16 and 35mm.

"Motion Study Applied to Letter Indexing," a one-reel sound picture of interest to large business firms and governmental agencies. Voice by Milton Cross. 16 and 35mm.

"Norris Dam Construction," a three-reel silent picture of the building of the TVA dam on the Clinch River. 16 and 35mm.

"Scenic Resources of the Tennessee Valley," a one-reel silent picture of the Valley and the Great Smoky Mountains. 16 and 35mm.

"Shell Mounds in the Tennessee Valley," a one-reel silent picture of pre-historic shell mounds in the Pickwick Landing Dam area. 16 and 35mm.

"Wasted Waters," formerly "TVA at Work," a two-reel sound picture of the unified river control program. 16 and 35mm.

"Wheeler Reservoir Clearance," a two-reel silent picture showing how land is cleared for impounded water. 35mm.

The TVA pictures are all distributed from the Authority's headquarters at Knoxville, Tenn.

United States Maritime Commission: "Good Neighbors," a two-reel sound picture of the inaugural cruise of the S. S. "Brazil," first of the "Good Neighbor Fleet" to South America. Distributed through the U. S. Film Service. 16 and 35mm.

Since a considerable part of the New Deal program was carried out through the established departments, several of them are represented in the list of New Deal films.

The War Department, which operates the Civilian Conservation Camps, made one picture in 1935, a 35mm silent three-reel picture entitled "The Civilian Conservation Corps," showing camp activities and the life of the CCC enrollees. War Department films are distributed through the Chief Signal Officer in Washington or the Signal Officers of the various Corps Area Headquarters at Boston, Governors Island, N. Y.; Baltimore, Atlanta, Columbus, Ohio; Chicago, Omaha, Fort Sam Houston, Tex., and San Francisco.

Other departmental contributions to the screen included the following:

Post Office Department: "Travels of a Postage Stamp," a one-reel sound picture of what happens to a stamp from the time it leaves the Bureau of Engraving and Printing until it delivers a letter to the addressee, with comment by Postmaster General Farley. 16mm.

Veterans Administration: "Cancer Among the Veterans," a two-reel sound color scientific picture, distributed only to medical organizations. 16mm.

"Service to Those Who Served," a two-reel sound picture showing hospital facilities. 16 and 35mm. Distributed through the Interior Department.

Department of Agriculture: "Grassland," a one-reel sound picture on soil conservation in the Southwest. 16 and 35mm.

"Muddy Waters," a one-reel sound picture on land use and abuse in the Southwest. 16 and 35mm.

"Rain on the Plains," a one-reel sound picture on erosion in the Southern Great Plains. 16 and 35mm.

"Wise Land Use Pays," a two-reel sound picture of soil conservation. 16 and 35mm.

"Balanced Plenty," a one-reel silent picture on the AAA program. 16 and 35mm.

"Our Daily Bread," a one-reel silent picture on the AAA program in the Wheat Belt. 16 and 35mm. Animated cartoon.

"Plenty Without Waste," a one-reel silent picture on the AAA program in the Corn Belt. 16 and 35mm. Animated cartoon.

CHICAGO STORE GIVES STAGE MIDGET SHOW

A stage show featuring 56 midgets has been inaugurated at Goldblatt's department store in Chicago. The large store has a 400-seat theatre and admission for the 25-minute show is set at 10 cents. The show is part of the store's Christmas merchandising plan. The midgets live in their own "Tiny Town" on the same floor as the toy department.

The merchants hold that if theatres can use free merchandising giveaways such as dishes, cutlery and beautifying articles to attract customers, stores may just as well offer shows.

"Re-Creation," a three-reel sound picture on outdoor recreation. 16 and 35mm.

Mexicans Forming Central Exchange

by JAMES LOCKHART
in Mexico City

Mexico has both eyes on the South American motion picture market. That is demonstrated by arrangements being completed by leading Mexican producers to establish in Mexico City a central exchange that will be a pool for their picked productions and the placing of specially selected agents of the exchange in key South American cities. The plan is set to get underway before the end of the year.

Just how picture distributors stand with regard to the income tax and old films that they have to destroy has been defined by a ruling of the national supreme court in rejecting a petition by Panas y Azcona y Cia, Mexico City importers and distributors of independent American pictures, to set aside a demand of the ministry of finance that they pay taxes on profits of some $50,000 they made in 1935. The distributors explained that they had not obtained that much profit as it had been necessary for them to destroy old film worth $9,000.

The court ruled that whenever distributors have to destroy film they must deduct its value from their capital instead of their profits and that in all such cases they must prove to the ministry that they actually destroyed the film. In this case, the court held, there was no proof that the film had been destroyed.

Supreme Court Voids Bans on Handbills

The United States supreme court on Wednesday held unconstitutional ordinances of four cities which citizens had challenged on grounds that they violated civil liberties. Three of the cities, Los Angeles, Milwaukee, and Worcester, Mass., were prohibiting the distribution of leaflets in public streets. The other city, Irvington, N. J., required a police permit for house-to-house canvassing.

Republic Signs Basil Circuit

Republic Pictures has closed a deal for its 1939-40 product with the Basil circuit of 18 theatres in the Buffalo territory.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Uncertainty Prevails

Hollywood, production-wise, remained in the doldrums this week, after a hesitant peek out of its shell last week at the cold, cold world. What it saw, locally as well as internationally, was not calculated to start a boom in hope and cheer.

Two members of the State Board of Equalization, which controls the state sales tax and liquor licenses, and exercises budgetary control of municipalities and counties, had just been indicted in a graft investigation. The earthquake specialists were filled with foreboding after the recent vibrations in Seattle, and the labor situation remained what might be described as "delicate."

The number of films actually shooting dropped to 33 from last week's 37, and while nine were finished as against last week's seven, only five were started, compared to the 12 of the preceding week.

However, 21 were being prepared and 85 edited, which compares with the 13 and 83, respectively, of the last seven days.

Republic led with four finished: "Money to Burn," "The Narrow Path," "South of the Border" and "The Days of Jesse James." Twentieth Century-Fox completed "Little Old New York" and "Grapes of Wrath"; and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Selznick-International and Universal each wound up one, respectively "The Earl of Chicago," "Rebecca" and "The Invisible Man Returns."

The five started were accounted for by as many companies. Columbia began "The Lone Wolf Strikes"; Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, "Arouse and Beware"; Paramount, "The Man from Bar 20"; Producers Pictures, "Mercy Plane," and Warner Brothers, "We Shall Meet Again."

LOUDER, PLEASE!

Radio, these days, is ever ready to talk about the mastery of its sound departments, which use the most intricate of gadgets to produce practically any sound called for in a script, and which reached a high point of some sort in realism in the Orson Welles "Mars" broadcast which is now history.

Poles apart, and just as ingenious, are those sounds called for under the head of imagination. At the Disney studio, for instance, routine assignments call for such creations as the sound of a wave freezing, of a motor car sweating, of a cobweb shimmering. Don't ask how—just listen.

The sound of Snow White's voice as it reverberated from the wishing well was created, incidentally, in the retiring room for women at the studio. It's faced with brick.

Under RKO Aegis

Charles Laughton and Erich Pommer, in view of war conditions abroad, have suspended all activity of Mayflower Pictures Corporation, and have individually signed major contracts with RKO Radio Pictures. Laughton's first assignment under the new contract will be the lead in a story to be produced and directed by Leo McCarey. The actor recently completed "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" for RKO.

Mr. Pommer will make his debut as an RKO producer with a film starring Maureen O'Hara, also in the "Hunchback." The production will go before the cameras following completion of her starring role in RKO's "A Bill of Divorcement." Mr. Pommer will also produce a film starring Laughton for RKO.

Reissues

Warner Brothers are reissuing six westerns featuring John Wayne and "Duke, The Miracle Horse," in the United States and Canada. They were produced by Leon Schlesinger and will be available for re-release starting December 24th. They are "The Telegraph Trail," "Somewhere in Sonora," "The Big Stampede," "The Man from Monterey," "Ride Him Cowboy" and "Haunted Gold."

Stock Note

Darryl F. Zanuck, Twentieth Century-Fox officer, added 1,000 shares of common to his holdings of that company's securities in September, according to reports filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission at Washington.

At the close of September, the report showed, Mr. Zanuck held 123,130 shares of Twentieth Century-Fox common and 21,946 shares of preferred.

Accessories

Warner Brothers have completed a deal with the National Poster Association under which Republic Display Corporation and Associated Display Corporation, members of the National group, will handle Warner picture accessories for one year. Negotiations grew out of a suit that Warner Brothers had against a member of the National Poster Association.

William Jaffe, of the law firm of Rosenblatt and Jaffe, representing the Association reached an agreement with Carl Leserman, acting for Warner Brothers.

BRITISH USE STAGE FOR CANADA PROPAGANDA

Government Sponsors Trans-Canadian Tour; Stars Were in the First Shaw Film

by ALISTER GROSART
in Toronto

Britain's motion pictures for war propaganda purposes apparently are not sufficiently well along to carry military and patriotic messages of the moment to its Dominions, and so the King's Government will resort to road show units of stage productions, dispatching the first company next week to Canada to "plant the seed," in a ship sailing in a cloak of secrecy, with special Admiralty battleship convoy and all the trimmings of a nation at war acting to protect its shipping on the high seas from submarines and mines.

Sponsors Canadian Tour

Stealing a march on films, so far as propaganda planting is concerned, the British Government is officially sponsoring a trans-Canada tour of the Colbourne-Jones company, largest troupe of actors that have ever made the trans-Atlantic crossing in peace or war with this Dominion as their destination.

The Colbourne-Jones group held the premiere of George Bernard Shaw's revised version of "Geneva" at the Royal Alexandra theatre, Toronto, last week.

Shaw's "Geneva," a study of the inefficiency of the League of Nations' activities, had its first performance at the Sayville theatre, London, on December 9, 1938. It dealt with the depredations of Hitler, Mussolini and Franco, their identities disguised as far as nomenclature was concerned, but this off-set by costume and make-up. This 50th play of Shaw's was well received by the critics but it was pointed out that its theme was entirely too topical and that, in order to remain up-to-date, it would have to be re-written from time to time.

The revised script, which Maurice Colbourne brought over to Canada, includes the declaration of war on Hitlerism and the intervention into the political picture of Soviet Russia. According to cabled advices received by Ernest M. Rawley, manager of the Canadian tour, "Geneva" will be revised as events warrant and the play will be kept as an up-to-date commentary on the European scene, with the Irish playwright air-mailing his revisions from time to time.

Co-starred in "Arms and the Man"

Maurice Colbourne and Barry Jones have long been close friends of Shaw. An outcome of this was the introduction to Canadian audiences in 1929 of Shaw's plays. While the Theatre Guild presented these south of the boundary, the Colbourne-Jones duo had the Canadian rights and made several trans-Canada tours that were eminently successful from the financial angle. Meanwhile, the Theatre Guild has the American rights to "Geneva."

Incidentally, Maurice Colbourne and Barry Jones co-starred in the picture version of the first play Shaw allowed to be filmed. This was "Arms and the Man," produced bv British International Pictures.

From the standpoint of propaganda in the theatre, "Geneva" will be presented across Canada under the auspices of the British Council of which His Majesty the King is Patron. Other members of this Government body, whose aim is the closer interchange of British ideas and ideals as embodied in the British drama, are Lady Chamberlain; John Masefield, the poet-laureate; Philip Guedella, the novelist-historian; and the Earl of Bessborough, former Governor-General of Canada. The latter was the moving spirit behind the founding of the Dominion Drama Festival and is credited with being the moving spirit behind the propagandic invasion of the large dramatic company, which numbers 46.

In addition to "Geneva," the Colbourne-Jones troupe will present "Charles the King" by Maurice Colbourne. This deals with the swift events leading up to the temporary overthrow of the Monarchy by Cromwell, England's first and last Dictator. Both plays are arguments in favor of the democratic system of rule by and for the people.

War Caused Delay

The outbreak of hostilities created considerble havoc for a time just prior to the originally-scheduled sailing, when it was discovered that certain members of the cast were either on the reserve list or came within the conscription age-bracket. This eventuality saw several male members turning in their parts. Try-outs were followed by fresh rehearsals, these punctuated by air-raid sirens which sent the actors scurrying to the nearest underground shelter with their gas-masks and the stipulated ration for 24 hours. Rehearsals were later resumed when the "all-clear" signal was given.

The male members of the company are now all over military age or have been exempted from military service for the time being on the premise that all normal activities must be carried out in the British tradition of "business as usual" wherever this is possible. Braving the U-boat peril of the high seas, which has already taken its toll of shipping, the company of men and women, first troupers to ever cross the Atlantic in this Great War or the previous one, are assured of a rousing welcome from audiences during their trans-Canada tour.

The Chicago police commissioner has ruled that "Beasts of Berlin" will be banned in Chicago. He upheld the report of Lieutenant Harry Costello, city censor, that the film is propaganda against the German Government.

The Maryland State Board of Motion Picture Censors, George Mitchell, chairman, has ordered the name Hitler deleted in the film "Hitler, Beast of Berlin," as well as several scenes before it can be shown in Baltimore and the state.

Theatre Tax Returns Show Record Increase

Collections of taxes on amusement admissions in Mississippi in October aggregated $49,448 against $44,260 in the same month last year, setting a new mark for any month since the levy was instituted about three years ago. In Missouri, October sales tax collections were $1,818,508, a new high. The amount was up $116,812 over September and $203,579 over October, 1938. The total gain for the year to date is $1,552,427 over a year ago.

The city council at Morrilton, Ark., has increased the tax on licenses of theatres by 40 cents a chair a year on all chairs in excess of 300 in an ordinance.

Momand Drops Injunction Plea

Oklahoma Theatres, Inc., operator of the Odeon Theatre, Shawnee, same state, this week asked and obtained dismissal of its injunction suit against the majors, in Oklahoma City Federal District Court. Judge Edgar Vaught ordered dismissal of the case, without prejudice and at the petitioners' cost.

President of the suing company is A. B. Momand, who also has a $4,500,000 anti-trust action pending against the Griffith Amusement Company and the majors in the same court.

Meantime, in Mr. Momand's anti-trust case, Judge Vaught set trial December 11th.

In Chicago, defense attorneys for Balaban and Katz and the majors have been granted a continuance in the suit filed against them by the Government for violation of a 1932 consent decree, until December 2nd, to file answers to the Government's charges.

$75,000 Anti-Trust Suit in Brooklyn

Mobeel Enterprises, operator of the Glenwood Theatre, Brooklyn, filed an anti-trust action for $75,000 triple damage, in United States District Court, New York, on Tuesday, against the Century circuit, Monogram, Republic, and the eight majors. The suit alleges restraint of trade by collusion between the circuit and other circuits, and the distributors.

The restraint took these forms, the suit says: inability of the plaintiff to secure pictures in profitable time; favoritism in product and clearance by distributors to plaintiff's competitors.

Sue Majors and Warner Theatres for $10,000

Operators of the Lansdowne Theatre, in the town of the same name, Pennsylvania, filed suit on Tuesday in United States District Court, Philadelphia, against the majors and three Warner theatre companies, charging discrimination and asking an injunction and $10,000 in damages.

Harry Friedman Replies In Anti-Trust Action

Harry Friedman, theatre operator of Newburgh, N. Y., this week pointed out that the recent court dismissal, with costs, of the $250,000 anti-trust suit by Orange County Theatres, Inc., against five majors and Paramount Theatres, in that city, had been preceded by two actions, brought by him in county supreme court, against the independent unit, and were now pending.

Mr. Friedman denied any statements made against him by Isaac Miller, counsel for the independent Orange County Theatres, during the anti-trust suit, and added:

"I have been informed that Isaac Miller took up considerable of the court's time when the anti-trust action was dismissed, and that Louis Phillips, who appeared as counsel for Paramount Pictures, Inc., and other of the defendants, made a complete answer to all that Isaac Miller said to the court at that time when, as I am advised, Mr. Phillips stated the following, to the court: 'Now, whatever you have heard (referring to what Mr. Miller had said) is 95 or 97 per cent fiction.'"

CANADA CUTS ENGLISH FILM DUTY; INDUSTRY IMPROVEMENTS REPORTED

Total of Theatres Rises to 1,113, with Slight Employment Gain; One-half of Houses Independently Owned

Canada's Dominion Bureau of Statistics this week issued its formal, annual statistical picture of the motion picture business in that country, reporting increases in theatres operating, in employment, film and box office revenue, but a decline in independent theatres and a status quo in the matter of salaries and wages.

The total number of theatres in Canada in 1938 was 1,113, an increase of 86 new houses, according to the Dominion Bureau. The rise was most noticeable in Manitoba and Alberta.

Employment increased slightly with the number of new theatres while salaries and wages reported remained steady. Working proprietors and company members, including members of proprietors' families employed without a stated salary, were recorded for the first time. These, together with all other employees, made up a total of 6,229 males and 2,075 females engaged in Canadian theatres in 1938.

$6,058,400 Total Payroll

The total payroll, including employees' salaries and proprietors' salaries when reported, amounted to $6,058,400, or 18 per cent of the year's receipts. This is exclusive of the compensation of 769 persons including proprietors and members of their families to whom no stated salary was paid.

The percentage of independent theatres declined slightly in 1938 while the multiple-owned and circuit units advanced approximately 4 per cent. One-half of the theatres in Canada are now independently owned and these take in 26.6 per cent of the total receipts and account for 30 per cent of total admissions.

The seating capacity in Canadian theatres last year was reported at slightly more than 640,000, or one seat for every 18 persons. On the average, 28 per cent of these were occupied for each performance.

Exchanges' Revenue Rises

Total revenue of Canada's film exchanges during 1938 increased 7.8 per cent to $10,218,700, the Dominion Bureau reports. In the same period, motion picture theatre receipts increased 3.5 per cent on the average throughout Canada. The number of film exchange offices was unchanged at 62. During 1938 they employed 385 men and 263 women, who were paid a total of $1,081,900.

Box office receipts in film theatres of Canada showed only a modest increase, although the number of houses increased in every province, the Bureau reported. In Ontario receipts increased by 5.2 per cent, New Brunswick 4.9 per cent, Alberta 4.2 per cent, Manitoba 3.8 per cent, Novia Scotia 3.3 per cent, Quebec 2.2 per cent and British Columbia 0.8 per cent. On the other hand receipts in Saskatchewan declined 2.4 per cent and in Prince Edward Island they dropped 1.2 per cent.

Where provincial totals were above 1937 this was due mainly to increase in the number of theatres and patrons in rural districts. Theatres in Toronto, Ottawa, Saint John, Hamilton and London, Ont., increased their receipts while there was a falling off in Montreal, Quebec, Halifax, Windsor, Winnipeg, Regina, Saskatoon, Moose Jaw, Calgary and Vancouver.

The highest average price of admissions was recorded by Prince Edward Island with 27.5 cents. Next came Alberta, 25.6 cents; Ontario 25.5; Saskatchewan 24.7; Quebec 23.3; Nova Scotia 23.3; British Columbia 23.1; Manitoba 22.7 and New Brunswick 22.4.

EXHIBITION IN BRAZIL FEELS WAR EFFECTS

by L. S. MARINHO

in Rio de Janeiro

Strong partisanship in the present war is reflected by theatre audiences in first-run houses in Rio de Janeiro and Sao Paulo with violent demonstrations during newsreel screenings. After several such demonstrations of riot proportions, the managers adopted a screen announcement, appealing for order, which precedes all newsreels. In many cases scenes are cut by the managers even though they have been passed by the Government censors. Paramount, Universal, Metrotone and Movietone News are shown regularly in Brazilian houses.

First-run houses in both major cities have five or six shows daily, starting at noon. Police regulations do not permit any film theatres to operate after midnight except on special occasions.

German films, never very popular in Brazil, are almost unknown since the outbreak of the war but French productions achieve good audiences. American films retain their lead in popularity.

Vaudeville Returns in Some Cities; Drops in Canada

Vaudeville news this week includes the notation of a new theatre booking agency in Columbus, Ohio; a report that Canadian houses using vaudeville declined markedly 1938; an expected return of stage shows to the Orpheum, in Omaha; and a combination film and five-act vaudeville show at the Majestic, in Dallas.

The Columbus booking agency is called Mid-West Attractions, is managed by Don Volpe, James Leeper, and Morton Payne, and also will supply 16 mm. film.

The Canadian report is from the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, showing that houses using vaudeville dropped from 141 in 1937 to 99 in 1938.

The Mutual Booking Office, in New York, last week announced that it is now supplying talent to about 200 theatres throughout the country.

Revision of Import Regulations Will Reduce Charge on Imports from Great Britain into Canada by 10 Per Cent

From the office of the Department of National Revenue, at Toronto, Canada, this week came a revision of import regulations which will reduce the duty on film imports from Great Britain by Canadian film distributors as much as 10 per cent.

The order provides that the duty is to be computed on the selling rate of the pound sterling as declared by the Foreign Exchange Control Board. The current selling price of sterling in Canada is $4.47, as compared with the previous fixed rate of $4.86 which went into effect in 1931 as the arbitrary value of the pound for duty purposes on imports from the United Kingdom. This concession was not granted when the Canadian Government ruled, after the outbreak of war, that duty on imports from the United States would be figured on the premium rate on the American dollar at $1.11, which virtually means a tariff increase on imports from the U. S.

Announcement also has been made that Canadian companies are required to make payment for imports in the currency of the country from which the goods have been bought and not from funds in another country. This has the effect of preventing Canadian film exchanges from making payments through home offices in New York, where the pound sterling is quoted around $3.90 as against $4.47, the pegged price in Canada.

Film Budget Reduced

The provincial government of British Columbia has included $12,000 in the 1940 budget for motion pictures. Last year $20,000 was set aside for use of the government's tourist and trade development bureau for motion pictures, but most of this fund was used to finance the province's exhibit at the San Francisco World's Fair.

It had been planned to produce a scenic travelogue in colors for distribution through theatres of the United States and eastern Canada, showing British Columbia's tourist attractions.

To date, no regulations have been formulated in regard to possible wartime emergencies affecting theatres of British Columbia. While a civilian emergency defense committee has been set up, regulations so far framed do not contemplate blackouts or any need for protection against air raids or other enemy attack.

Plans thus far take into account only acts of sabotage. Measures drawn up are for the protection of public health, to cope with any attempt from within to disrupt civilian life. Emergency fire fighting, first aid and similar services have been organized.

Film Audiences Incorporated

Film Audiences for Democracy has been incorporated in Albany, N. Y., as a membership concern. The papers were filed by George Horowitz, 261 Broadway, New York City.

J. W. Dolphin has resigned as head of Western Electric's Barcelona subsidiary. D. L. Brown, former manager of the Paris branch and former director of the company's public relations department in London, has assumed the Barcelona post.

Exhibitor Will Pay Patrons Who Miss Radio Awards

Owner-Manager Goes Air Sponsor One Better to Save Attendance

by BARNEY OLDFIELD

One of the strangest forms of fighting fire with fire is being applied by Robert (Bob) Livingston, owner-manager of the Capitol theatre, Lincoln, Nebraska. He is offering $1,000 to the winning person who is in his theatre and as a result misses the $1,000 cash-giveaway call from the sponsored Tums stomach-pills "Pot of Gold" radio program running Tuesday nights.

Convinced that the $1,000 prize lure by Tums and radio to Lincoln patrons has had markedly adverse effects on his theatre receipts, Mr. Livingston is attacking both the program and its sponsors by advertising widely, in press and publicity, that it is not necessary for a person to stay away from the theatre and sit awaiting a call from the broadcaster announcing his $1,000 winning, as hundreds have apparently been doing.

Furthermore, Mr. Livingston offers also to match the $100 which is offered to the person selected as the winner and who is not at home when his telephone is called—thus giving the "Pot of Gold" winner attending his show both the $1,000 which they would ordinarily get from Tums if at home when called, plus the $100 given when the winner is called and is not at home, making it $100 more profitable for the winner to be in the theatre than at home. In addition there is that $100 given by Tums to the person who is called but is not at home.

Mr. Livingston intends to organize exhibitors, both independent and circuits, in his territory, to fight such radio cash giveaways, setting up a protective organization for the purpose, paying the winners of radio cash prizes who are in theatres of members when called by air programs.

He believes that most exhibitors have done little else but bewail the loss of business because of home-confining radio programs. He says he will fight radio inroads his own way.

Launches Plan in Ads

Mr. Livingston's plan of attack was sprung last week in a series of six-inch ads in local newspapers. The ads read:

"Attention, radio fans! Do you listen to the 'Pot of Gold' contest? Now, you no longer have to stay home beside your radio to win. Because, if you're in attendance at the Capitol theatre during this program, and no one is at home to receive the contest winning phone call, we will give you $1,000."

The test will be conducted over a two-month period, and the Tuesday night business will be averaged from the inception of the giveaway to the start of the anti-home-body action, and averaged thereafter to find whether there has been any appreciable box office recovery in Tuesday night business.

Believing radio is deaf to the plea of an exhibitor, and that even the film production end of the business is totally oblivous to the problems confronting the exhibitor in trying to sell screen entertainment when hefty stellar radio shows, in opposition to screen stars in pictures, Mr. Livingston plans to go further than his own single house if his giveaway plan succeeds.

Saw Radio Cut Attendance

"I came by this plan after I saw radio get the Sunday and Thursday nights that used to belong to pictures," said Mr. Livingston. "The producers keep yelping for extra playing time, then turn around and allow the stars, of the very same pictures they ask extra time for, to appear on radio free. If the exhibitor is to win anything in the battle, it'll have to be through his own efforts, which is my reason for initiating this scramble for business and backing it with my own money."

His idea is this: To interest the larger circuits in assessing each house $1 per week, and make up a defense fund. The joining of Paramount, Loew, and RKO houses alone in the venture would make a weekly "pot" big enough to offer twice as much money as the radio programs, if necessary, to guarantee the patron no loss, and even a profit, if he is selected for a cash prize, is called, found NOT at home, but present in the theatre.

Each theatre represented can protect itself by advertising that it's unnecessary to stay at home to win, he says. If after assessments are made for a month, and there is no call for the prize no further assessments will be made until the prize is awarded.

Theatre Resumes Air Show

The Fabian Grand in Albany has begun its third season of broadcasting a one half hour program from its stage every Tuesday night. The program is carried by station WABY and will be continued until June. The circuit buys the time and not only advertises the Grand theatre but its other local houses, the Palace, Leland and Harmanus Bleecker Hall. Larry Gowan, manager, has decided on amateur night programs, with the radio listeners and the theatre audience each selecting their winners. The plan was used by Mr. Gowan at Fox's in Brooklyn several years ago.

Short Wave Film Reviews

Two Schenectady short wave stations, WGEO and WGEA, will carry motion picture reviews starting November 20th. Myron Mills, son of Bernard Mills, former Republic branch manager and now with B & M Pictures, and Kurt Forckel will do the reviews. Young Mills and Forckel are students at Union College and members of the Radio Workshop group.

Patrons of Hamrick-Evergreen's Paramount Theatre in Seattle voted by a majority of more than two to one in favor of double-feature programs. The test vote was held for seven days and the choice offered was between a double-feature policy and a single-feature program with short subjects.

Discuss Film and Radio in Education

The use of motion pictures and the radio in educational work was discussed at the third annual Southern Conference on Audio-Visual Education, at the Biltmore Hotel, Atlanta, last week end. At the first session, on Thursday, educational motion pictures and transcription records were presented. In the evening Dr. Walter D. Cocking, dean of the College of Education of the University of Georgia, spoke on "Location and Use of Visual Materials in the Local Environment" and Miss Alma Kitchell, of the National Broadcasting Company, gave an address on "The Contribution of Radio to the American Home." New educational motion pictures were also shown.

Other addresses at the succeeding sessions included "Filmslides as an Educational Aid," Theo. R. Wright; "Successful Methods of Using Films," Dr. Chas. F. Haban, Jr., motion picture project, American Council on Education; "Planning Films for Public Welfare," Dr. Alice V. Keliher; "Textbooks vs. Movies, Radios and Records," Donald P. Bean, director of the University of Chicago Press; "Evaluation and Integration of Educational Motion Pictures," Floyde E. Brooker; "Teaching Speech by Radio," Lester L. Hale; "Recent Developments in Audio-Visual Aids to Instruction," Dr. Ellsworth C. Dent and "How to Use Radio," Kenneth G. Bartlett.

The final session featured a report and discussion on teacher-student motion picture production by Dr. Charles F. Hoban, Jr., and Floyde E. Brooker. Dr. Dent spoke on "Television and Its Possibilities."

Schedule 230 Releases in Italy

Italian distributors have scheduled the releases of 230 features in 1939-40. These include 70 to be made in Italy and 120 foreign films definitely committed, in addition to 30 others expected from other countries.

The Italian film studios are making a bid for world markets. South American directors have been approached with plans to make films for Latin America. The original version would be in Italian, with dubbing in Spanish. Arturo Mom, Argentine director, has entered into a tentative agreement with an Italian producer to direct an Italo-Argentine feature, to be made partly in the Argentine.

Miguel Ligero, Spanish director and producer, recently completed "Maria de la O" and "Los Hijos de la Noche," Spanish-language feature, at Cinecitta in Rome. Pastore Imperio, leading Spanish actress, is starred in the first film. The films are released in the Spanish markets.

German and French players are being featured in pictures made in Italy and Italian films are being dubbed in Greek for the first time for release in Greece, Egypt, Syria and Palestine, as well as other centers of Greek-speaking population.

Edward Gross, former associate producer for Sol Lesser and David Loew, has joined Republic in a similar capacity.

IN THE CUTTING ROOM

The Blue Bird

(Twentieth Century-Fox)

Fantasy

Shirley Temple, four times the leading box-office star in the annual HERALD-FAME compilation, is here cast as the leading character in Maurice Maeterlinck's play of a search for happiness by a little girl in the long ago. "The Blue Bird," symbolically, represents happiness;

Gene Markey served as associate producer and Walter Lang directed, as they did on the last Temple film, "The Little Princess." The screen play was by Ernest Pascal, who adapted "The Hound of the Baskervilles" and collaborated on "Kidnapped." Walter Bullock supplied additional dialogue.

The cast includes such marquee names as Spring Byington, Eddie Collins, Sybil Jason, Gale Sondergaard, Nancy Kelly, Laura Hope Crews and Nigel Bruce.

As pointed out in the HERALD of November 18th, the picture has been withdrawn from its scheduled Christmas week release for roadshowing.

Release date: To be determined.

He Married His Wife

(Twentieth Century-Fox)

Social Comedy

Raymond Griffith, associate producer, who has turned out such comedies as "Three Blind Mice" and "The Baroness and the Butler," handles this story of a young man who tries his best to marry off his ex-wife to save himself from alimony payment, and ends up by re-marrying her himself.

The original story was writen by Erna Lazarus and Scott Darling. The screen play was done by Sam Hellman, who wrote "Frontier Marshal;" Darrell Ware, who collaborated on "Hotel for Women;" Lynn Starling, who collaborated on "The Cat and the Canary," and John O'Hara.

In the cast are Joel McCrea, Nancy Kelly, Roland Young, Mary Boland, Cesar Romero, Mary Healy, Lyle Talbot, Elisha Cook, Jr., and Barnett Parker.

Release date: Jan. 19, 1940.

Brother Rat and a Baby

(Warner Brothers)

After Graduation

The principals of "Brother Rat," Eddie Albert, Wayne Morris, Priscilla Lane, Jane Wyman and Ronald Reagan, return again, this time a year after the boys' graduation from the Virginia Military Institute. Mainly concerned with complications ensuing in New York, caused in no small part by Peter B. Good as the baby, "Commencement," the screen play, was by Jerry Wald and Richard Macaulay, from an original by Fred F. Finkelhoffe and John Monks, Jr.

Wald and Macauley have collaborated before to advantage, as witness "The Roaring Twenties" and "On Your Toes." Ray Enright handles the directing.

Hal Wallis was executive producer, and Robert Lord associate producer.

Release date: To be determined.

Music in My Heart

(Columbia)

Romance, with Music

Tony Martin, of the Ethyl Gasoline Company's "Tune-Up Time" radio program, here on the screen is a stand-in in a stage musical comedy who finally gets a chance on the air, singing a half dozen songs by Bob Wright and Chet Forrest, who composed and adapted music for "Sweethearts," "Firefly" and many other films.

Irving Starr produced with Joseph Santley directing, as he did on "The Family Next Door" and "Spirit of Culver."

Seen with Martin, who recently appeared in "Thanks for Everything" and "Up the River," are Rita Hayworth, Andre Kostelanetz, Edith Fellows, Eric Blore and Alan Mowbray.

Release date: To be determined.

The Fighting 69th

(Warner Brothers)

Regimental Histrionics

The statue of Father Duffy, beloved chaplain of the 69th regiment during the World War, has been looking out over Broadway this many a month, only a few city blocks from the Warner home office in New York's West 44th Street. Now Father Duffy has returned in spirit to the Warner lot in Burbank, where Pat O'Brien is re-enacting a role the real Father Duffy would have found quite natural.

Primarily the story of the making of a man from a cocky kid who turns yellow in the trenches, "The Fighting 69th" has Mr. O'Brien as the chaplain responsible for the conversion. James Cagney, last seen in "The Roaring 20's," is the private, and George Brent portrays "Wild Bill" Donovan, currently representing the majors in the Government's New York anti-trust suit, and RKO in its reorganization proceedings. Mr. Donovan, after winning several pounds of Allied medals in the war, turned profitable attention to legal matters.

Jeffrey Lynn is seen as Joyce Kilmer, the young English poet, who was killed in the last war.

Alan Hale, Frank McHugh, Dennis Morgan, Henry O'Neill and William Lundigan are also seen. The cast is strictly masculine.

The associate producer was Louis F. Edelman, with Hal Wallis executive producer and William Keighley directing as he did for "Each Dawn I Die" and "Yes, My Darling Daughter."

The screen play, an original, was writen by Norman Reilly Raine, Fred Niblo, Jr., and Dean Franklin. Raine collaborated on "Elizabeth and Essex"; Niblo, Jr., on "No Place To Go," and Franklin on "Code of the Secret Service."

Release date: To be determined.

Charlie Chan in Panama

(Twentieth Century-Fox)

Oriental Sleuthing

Charlie Chan, sleuth supreme, bends his talents to the unraveling of a case in Panama, and, as interpreted by Sidney Toler, the oriental sage successfully solves the mystery.

Produced by Sol Wurtzel, the picture was directed by Norman Foster, whose last was "Charlie Chan at Treasure Island." The cast includes Lionel Atwill, Jean Rogers, Mary Nash and Sen Yung.

Release date: To be determined.

Bullets for Rustlers

(Columbia)

Western

Jack Fier produced this third of the Charles Starrett series for the new season. It is a tale of the complications which ensues when silver is discovered on a ranch.

The picture was directd by Sam Nelson, who had "Konga, the Wild Stallion" and "Overland with Kit Carson," which he co-directed with Norman Deming.

Also appearing are Lorna Gray, Bob Nolan, the Sons of the Pioneers, Jack Rockwell, Dick Curtis and Kenneth McDonald.

Release date: To be determined.

SAYS BANKS INDORSE EASTERN PRODUCTION

Irving Trust Officers Say LaGuardia Approached Them on His Studio Plan

New York's volatile little Mayor Fiorello H. La Guardia this week was still trying to "bring back" motion picture production to his city, the "city that has everything," and reporting some interest from outsiders despite the skepticism from Hollywood and some home office film executives, continuing since the Mayor first revealed his ambitions, on October 16th, in an address to the Society of Motion Picture Engineers.

On Monday, an unnamed "aide" to the Mayor at City Hall was reported in the press to have "disclosed" that his chief had wrung pledges of support from two New York banking houses: the Irving Trust Company, trustees for the reorganizing RKO; and the Chase National Bank of New York, which exercises control in the Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation.

Not Committed

Officers of the Irving Trust Company said on Tuesday that they had been approached by Mayor LaGuardia, but had not committed themselves to backing any specific producers; and that they had told him, in effect, that:

"Our attitude is, as it has always been, that we are entirely open to discussions of motion picture financing both in the East and in the West. We are not limiting ourselves to any one section; we are not backing Eastern production as against the West; nor are we 'backing' Mayor LaGuardia's drive, beyond being willing to cooperate. We are always looking for good banking propositions."

At the Chase National Bank, it was said that some officers of the company, in an unofficial capacity, may have talked over financing Eastern production, with the Mayor, but there was no official attitude. One official, after contacting several other officers of the company, and after hearing that the figures for bank advances might run as high as 70 per cent of production costs, remarked:

"Personally, I don't think there's much substance to the story."

Calls Others Interested

Other banking houses also, said the Mayor's "aide," are interested in financing Eastern production. The banks, he said, will finance 50 to 70 per cent of a picture's costs, requiring producers to put up a minimum of 30 per cent of the costs. This, it was noted, is a measure to prevent "irresponsible" producers from invading the new field. Such producers, he explained, have been "begging" the Mayor for interviews and support the past several weeks.

Further, the banks will only deal with producers able to make a minimum of three feature pictures in the "New Hollywood on the Hudson," the Mayor's helper explained.

There will be a "ceiling" on salaries of producers, executives, and stars, it was stated; this would be part of a preliminary understanding between bank and producer. During the entire production period, a producer's backers would retain veto power over salaries, according to the informant.

The Mayor's assistants have visited all of the city's financial institutions, to get support for his plans.

These plans, first enunciated in October, came to a head two weeks ago, when the Mayor conferred with New York City labor leaders, including those from unions in the picture field. After the conference, the Mayor announced "definitely" that New York would see feature production soon, and that, if present film companies did not see the wisdom of transferring their assets from the coast to New York, or of making at least 10 per cent of their pictures in his city, a new company would be formed, or several new companies. One, at least, it was said at the time, would have the Mayor's active support.

Almost immediately there came the announcement by Ben Hecht and George Jessel of a new company called "New York Pictures, Inc.," to make "Before I Die," presumably at the Eastern Service Studios, on Long Island.

The labor leaders put themselves squarely behind the Mayor, the chief proponent being Sal Scoppa, business agent for the local laboratory technicians' union. In a formal statement, they emphasized the fact that much of the motion picture industry's receipts are gleaned from the New York area; therefore, some of it should be returned as expenditures for production in the same area.

Labor "Truce" Pledged

Over the week-end, the New York Central Trades and Labor Council is reported to have pledged the Mayor a five-year "truce" from labor demands such as those which producers in Hollywood face. The pledge was contained in an informal resolution; and a formal one was expected this week, or shortly.

Thomas Murtha, business agent of Local 4, Brooklyn stagehands, was elected president of the Council, succeeding Thomas J. Lyons, who becomes president of the New York State Federation of Labor on January 1st.

The Mayor, over the week-end and last week, conferred with Mr. Jessel; John Butler, former manager of production for Paramount; Gil Boag, and others.

Even while New York authorities hopefully proceeded with the above plans, Paramount was projecting a new studio in West Los Angeles. Plans for such were submitted to department heads last week by T. Keith Glennan, studio operations manager.

Possibly indicative of "Wall Street" feeling about the Mayor's plans was an editorial in last Thursday's New York Journal-American, by Leslie Gould, financial editor. Mr. Gould pointed out that the Mayor would draw an estimated 25,000 more jobs to the city by bringing in the film industry; but that, if the Mayor wanted to "really" help the city, he might consider the claimed 63,000 persons of member firms of the New York Stock Exchange, thrown out of work in the past several years, the several hundred thousand more associated in some way with all financial houses, who have also been deprived of work; and the fact that other enterprises have moved away from the "city that has everything." Said Mr. Gould, in part:

"I do not have to tell you (addressing the Mayor) how important the financial district is to New York City, making this the world's money capital.

Mr. Gould told the Mayor: "Your efforts to bring back to New York City the motion picture producing industry are highly interesting and constructive—even if, initially, they seem to be meeting with little success.

"For a city—be it small or large—to grow and prosper, it must attract new enterprise, providing additional employment for new and old citizens.

"But it must also preserve its existing businesses."

BOOK REVIEW

AMERICA AT THE MOVIES, by Margaret Farrand Thorp. 313 pages. Illustrated. Indexed. New Haven, Yale University Press, 1939. $2.75.

Apparently, in conjunction with the household saying that "everybody's business is the motion picture business," we have here the latest addition to the expanding book shelf collection on "the movies."

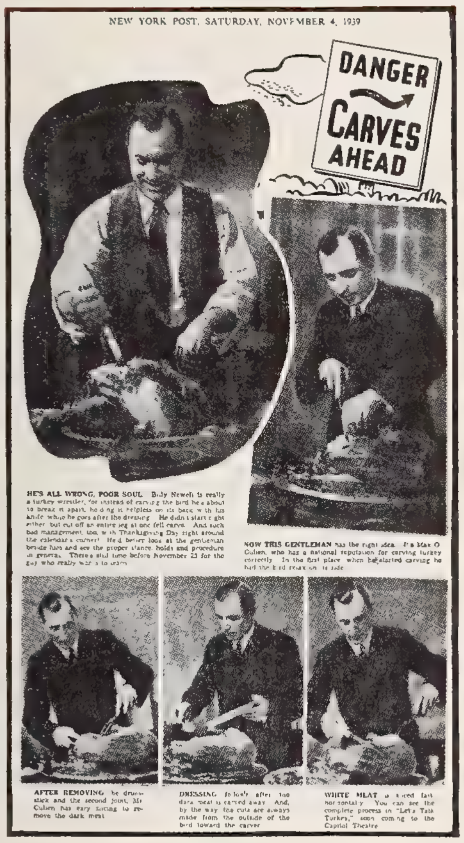
Whatever be the almost anonymous status of Miss Thorp, she has written a breezy, brief, if not altogether complete and accurate text on the topic of the motion picture and its hordes of followers. The real judgment on her research is that she affords the peruser of her work only an "outside, looking in" viewpoint on the business of the industry and Mr. and Mrs. John Q. Public and all their little Publics.

The path of discussion is signposted with such familiar directional headings as an evaluation of the number of motion picture patrons frequenting the country's cinema centers, publicity panegyrics on pictorial product, the effusions of fan magazines, the effect of the screen in dictating tastes in clothing, conduct and household furnishings, and a cursory and superficial inspection of the trinity business of production, distribution and exhibition, with short excursions into the complicated problems of block booking, blind buying and other trade practices. Additional investigation is done in the fields of better films organizations, lay, political and religious, the promotional work done by the screen in sponsoring advancements in the associated fields of art and music, the cultural education of picture patrons, and the ticklish Scylla-Charybdis contention: entertainment versus propaganda in motion picture fare.

An inspection of Miss Thorp's words is productive of no clear cut and bold statement of the author's personal viewpoint.

On some subjects Miss Thorp exposes herself as being a little too naive and gullible, especially when she pictures the Legion of Decency and its sponsor, the Roman Catholic Church, as attempting to pose as the "chief guardian of the American screen" and when she reveals what she believes to be the connivance of the industry with the Federal Government in issuing a cycle of sea pictures in order to promote a naval expansion program. For the reviewer of this publication, it may be an act of "looking a gift horse in the mouth" to point out several minor inaccuracies in her text, for Miss Thorp pays MOTION PICTURE HERALD a glowing compliment in writing that it "is to the industry what the London Times is to the British Cabinet," as well as by quoting from the editorial pages, the comments of the Managers' Round Table section and the "interesting" department of "What the Picture Did for Me." "Robin Hood" or to give the production its full name, "The Adventures of Robin Hood" was produced by Warner Brothers and not as stated by Paramount; Sonja Henie works for the Twentieth Century-Fox studios and not Metro-Goldwyn-Mayor; there was a film called "Four Men and a Prayer" and not "Three Men and a Prayer" and the picture display facing page 285 would lead the reader to believe that Francis Lederer and Edward G. Robinson were shown, whereas the two are Paul Lukas and Mr. Robinson.—JOSEPH F. COUGHLIN.

MR. SMITH MAKES IT OFFICIAL!



NEW YORK POST, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 4, 1939

DANGER
CARVES AHEAD

HE'S ALL WRONG, POOR SOUL. Billy Newell is really a turkey wrestler, for instead of carving the bird he's about to break it apart, holding it helpless on its back with his knife while he goes after the dressing. He didn't start right either, but cut off an entire leg at one fell carve. And such bad management, too, with Thanksgiving Day right around the calendar's corner! He'd better look at the gentleman beside him and see the proper stance, holds and procedure in general. There's still time before November 23 for the guy who really wants to learn.

NOW THIS GENTLEMAN has the right idea. It's Max O. Cullen, who has a national reputation for carving turkey correctly. In the first place, when he started carving he had the bird resting on its side.

AFTER REMOVING the drumstick and the second joint, Mr. Cullen has easy sailing to remove the dark meat.

DRESSING follows after the dark meat is carved away. And, by the way, the cuts are always made from the outside of the bird toward the carver.

WHITE MEAT is sliced last horizontally. You can see the complete process in "Let's Talk Turkey," soon coming to the Capitol Theatre.

(from nationwide King Features Syndicate)

Turkey carving technique is so important that M. G. M. has produced a short about it, "Let's Talk Turkey", featuring Pete Smith, who says, 'Me! I just tear 'em limb from limb'.

Pete's 'blitzkrieg' attack on the bird gets immediate results, though it may be a bit offside on etiquette.

Smith's way may be effective, but here's the right way. First remove leg and wing, turn bird on its side, shift the knife to the breast, and then carve in horizontal motion towards you.

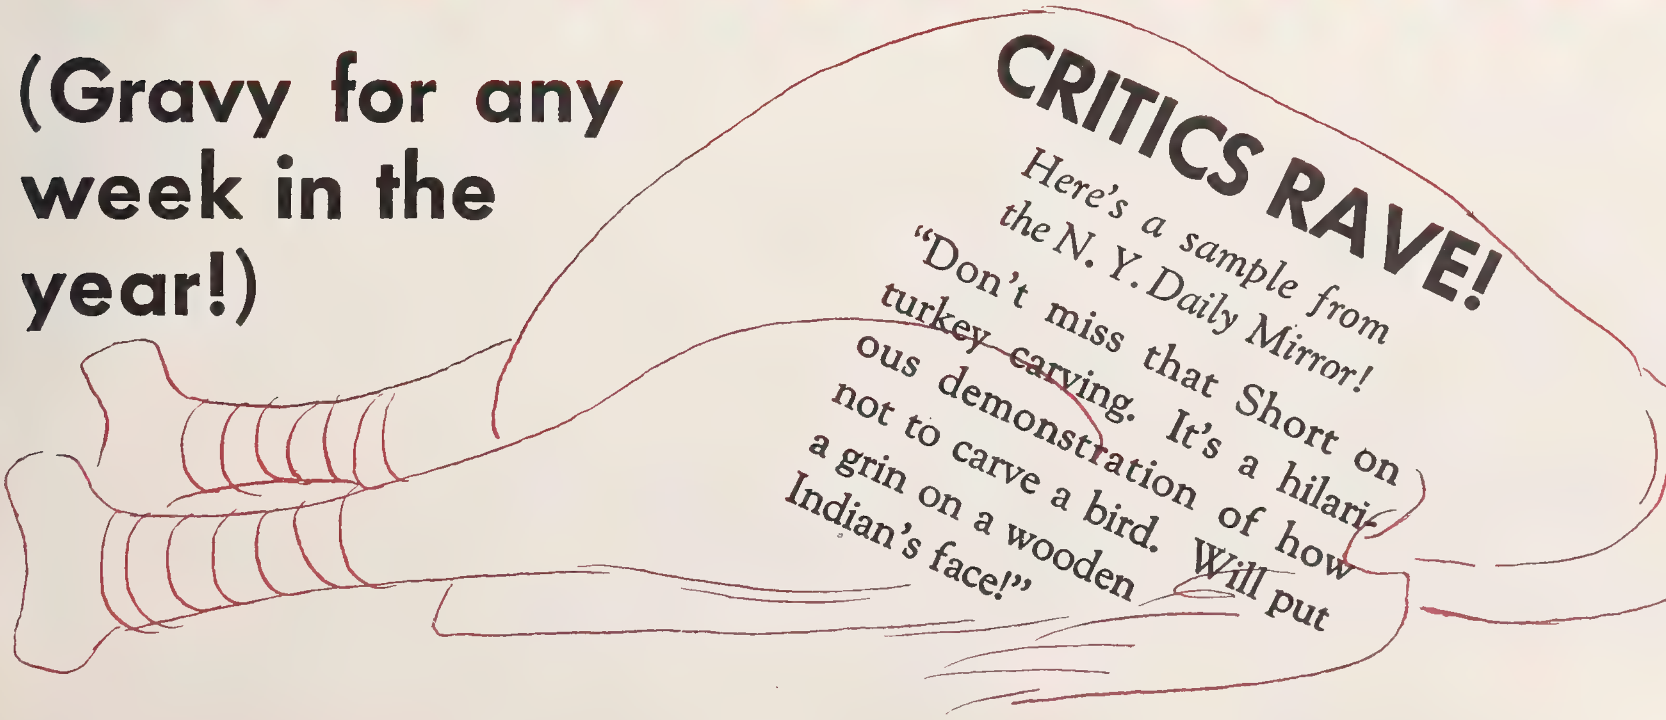
FREE PUBLICITY MATS at M-G-M Branch! Above is typical of current nationwide newspaper publicity. Human, amusing press tie-ups that bring the folks to the theatre. Easy to plant!

No matter when you play it, it's THANKSGIVING at the box-office!

PETE SMITH'S HILARIOUS M-G-M SHORT—

"LET'S TALK TURKEY"

(Gravy for any week in the year!)



CRITICS RAVE!

Here's a sample from the N. Y. Daily Mirror!

"Don't miss that Short on turkey carving. It's a hilarious demonstration of how not to carve a bird. Will put a grin on a wooden Indian's face!"

BLACKOUT PARTLY NULLIFIES EXTRA HOUR OF SHOW TIME, SAY BRITONS

More Buses and Less Darkness Would Solve Patronage Problem, Declare Exhibitors; Deutsch Calls Business Better

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

British exhibitors, notably those in the provinces, have found the 11 p. m. closing at its best a mixed blessing. The gesture of the Home Office in extending closing time everywhere save in Central London from 10 to 11 o'clock was greatly appreciated by the British picture house operator. It was appreciated but hardly acted upon by the patron.

Blackout's the Problem

As already recorded in these columns, it was not anticipated that 60 minutes more of opening would bring the millenium. Its probable effect was expected to be noteworthy. Now it transpires that the blackout itself, with the difficulties of transport, has prevented taking full advantage of the change. Not all audiences who want to can get to the picture house if it is more distant than an easy walk.

Despite this and the exhibitors' expressed wish that the blackout itself be alleviated and that more reasonable transport facilities be restored, optimists like Oscar Deutsch, impresario of the considerable Odeon circuit, are loud in their protestations that business is not so bad after all, indeed could not be better than it is some places.

The general adjustment is very definitely underway. There are naturally limits beyond which it cannot go without outside stimulus. The provision of an extra hour is something more than an expression of goodwill. It has proved, however, little more than a framework into which, in many areas, the details of transport and communications have yet to be filled in.

Peacetime Records Broken

Wearing his rosiest spectacles and regarding the trade scene, Mr. Deutsch, soliloquizing before his assembled Odeon shareholders, happily reviewed conditions.

"I can tell you . . . with absolute conviction, based upon a careful analysis of our business since the outbreak of war, that there is a widespread national demand for the type of entertainment which we provide, and, while the company lost money during the period when the theatres were compulsorily closed we are back to normal in most areas, and instead of there being any lessening of the normal demand, there is, in fact, every indication of an increase. . . .

"The business we are doing in some areas is truly remarkable, and, strange as it may seem, peacetime weekly record figures have been broken in the case of quite a number of theatres. . . . It is further gratifying to note that although in reception areas our turnover has naturally increased, there is, as yet, no evidence of any material drop in the evacuation areas."

(Evacuation areas are mostly the residential and populous districts in London and the provinces, manufacturing towns, military and naval centers, and dock regions. Reception areas are for the most part rural, or small towns, the remoter parts of the Home Counties, and the West and Northwest of England and Wales.)

Other picture theatre owners operating in the near Central London area, or owning houses normally graced by a bus and tram clientele, have a different tale to tell. It is for the most part their conviction that normalcy is not likely to be restored until near normal lighting and normal transport are restored. Local houses with a nearby clientele—"the fleapit around the corner" as it is known in the vernacular—are in most cases doing extremely well. Reception areas, their population swollen by hundreds, in some cases thousands of evacuees, with much leisure on their hands and not much to do with it, are, on their own statements, coining money. Some smaller country cinemas, in districts which never have known any other than blackout conditions, find wartime little different from peace. Moonlight nights bring a boom all round.

Not for Liverpool

It should then come as no surprise that there are areas which meanwhile have no wish to avail themselves of the extra hour's grace. Liverpool, one of Britain's biggest cities and major ports, for instance, is not likely to avail itself of the 11 o'clock rule. Liverpool's blackout is very black. Liverpool's inhabitants prefer to stay home or in the warm cosiness of the local saloon. Liverpool buses and trams stop running at 10 and do not run on Sundays at all. And the traffic commissioners at nearby Southport say that "not an ounce of petrol must be used in the conveyance of people for pleasure purposes."

The Late Bus Problem

Plymouth, naval base in Devonshire, has a meager bus service which does not operate after 10:30. Newcastle, shipping center, has trams, but they make their last journey to the suburbs at 10 p.m. Bradford has a transport chief who will oppose longer working hours until better lighting is officially permitted in his vehicles.

In most of these areas the patron is a factory worker who gets home at 6:30 or 7 and could not conveniently reach the cinema before 8 o'clock. By that time the program has started.

A similar problem is affecting the new movement towards Sunday opening of cinemas, in Portsmouth, for instance. It is declared by local exhibitors that the earlier Sunday opening hours, nowadays 2.30, have proved futile because the closing hours have been set back accordingly.

It is the aim of the military authorities, who made the initial move, to provide Sunday cinemas all over the country where troops are quartered. The Lords Day Observance Society naturally have opposed the intended move. The National Association of Theatrical and Kine Employees have declared opposition. Certain exhibitor areas will certainly make no change in their present policy of closing.

What would be more greatly appreciated by exhibitors would be less blackout and more buses.

MOTHERS LEAD DRIVE FOR BETTER FILMS

Serial episodes with alarming endings, crime pictures and inferior films were attacked last week in Brooklyn at a meeting of 100 mothers sponsored by the Motion Picture Council of Brooklyn. The mothers wished to force neighborhood theatres to show fewer crime pictures and more wholesome films.

The group said they would campaign especially for wholesome, educational and entertaining pictures for the weekends when most of the children attend the theatre. The mothers held that certain types of pictures, especially horror and crime films, were detrimental to their children's welfare.

One mother suggested the museum as an alternative for the children instead of the motion picture theatre. Another advocated a short "boycott". A plan to give a stamp of approval from the Motion Picture Council to pictures considered satisfactory for juvenile audiences was discussed.

Circuit Nets $385,000

A profit of £96,123 (about $385,000) for the year has been reported by Associated Provincial Picture Houses. A dividend of 2 per cent has been paid.

Three thousand film theatre employes in the Leeds and surrounding districts of Yorkshire are now covered in a wages and hours agreement reached by the local branch of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association and the trades unions.

Close Peru Deal

Morris Goodman, vice-president in charge of foreign distribution for Republic, has signed a contract with J. Calero Paz for distribution of the current program in Peru and Bolivia. Formerly the RKO franchise in Peru, Mr. Paz will now concentrate on Republic pictures in addition to a few Spanish language films.

"Le Schpountz" Rights Acquired

The French Cinema Center, distributors of "Harvest," has acquired the American rights to Marcel Pagnel's satiric comedy, "Le Schpountz." Fernandel and Crane Demazis who played in "Harvest" appear in the film which is a statire on motion pictures. "Le Schpountz" will be released later this season.

Transatlantic Imports Two

Transatlantic Distributors, Inc., has imported two new French films, "Derniere Jeunesse" and "L'Emigrante," produced by Lumen Films and Vega Films, respectively.

Luli Deste, Austrian actress, signed by Universal Pictures, is now in Hollywood, where two years ago she made two pictures for Columbia.

Standard Pictures Distributing Company, Inc., New York City, has been chartered in Albany, N. Y., with capital stock amounting to $75,000 in $100 shares. Incorporators are George E. Trainer, Marilyn Kaplan and Sylvia Dauber, all of New York City. Ludwig M. Wilson is counsel.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

LEONARD GAYNOR, up to recently a film press agent—Twentieth Century-Fox, Columbia, et al.—has made the jump from publicizing turkeys on the screen to turkeys on the farm.

This Thanksgiving turkey time brings from Turkeyman Gaynor a high-powered sales letter in behalf of the Booth-Bred Turkeys of Rocky Run Farm, Glen Gardner, New Jersey.

Leonard talks tall turkey—60 cents the pound for "a succulent, broad-breasted crossing of wild toms with Mammoth Bronze hens that produces a memorial meal." Sixty cents the pound IS tall turkey.

Gaynor has even transplanted the practice of using impressive sounding, hi-falutin' titles to his new turkey-land, calling himself the Vice-President in Charge of Production.

John Watson, while investigating the turkey situation as a reporter for the New York Journal-American, returned to New York from the Shagroy Farm at Lakeville, Connecticut, with word that they now give turks the hot-seat. Well, not exactly the hot-seat. The hot neck. They electrocute them now, putting their feet in a rack and their heads between steel plates. They turn on 40 volts, and then . . . out of the electrocution temple and on to the table.

There are five Thursdays in this November and three will be Thanksgiving in Hollywood.

Besides the traditional one on November 30, known as the Republican Thanksgiving, and that adopted by Franklin D. Roosevelt for November 23, there was a third in the film colony of Hollywood and Beverly Hills. It was the Domestic Workers Thanksgiving, held November 16th.

The third holiday resulted when the maids, cooks, chauffeurs and other workers in the employ of film people realized that this year's double observance would deprive them of their traditional day off in two successive weeks.

Reasoning that one more Thanksgiving proclamation would hurt no one, they decided that for Southern California's domestic help, Thursday, November 16, would be Thanksgiving Day.

The California Chauffeurs Association approved the holiday and a similar endorsement was received from New York's famous Staff Club.

The newsreels sent cameramen down to Dahlonga, Georgia, to shoot pictures of Major Graham C. Dugas digging away at his newly-discovered gold mine in the Georgia mountains—after geologists reported that the stuff was assaying at $60,000 the ton. Major Dugas had a dynamite blast set off in his Calhoun mine for the benefit of the newsreels units. When the smoke cleared away a brand new gold vein stood exposed, the stuff from that assaying at $160,000 the ton.

William Reilly, whose courtesies as a New York Roxy usher won him a $500,000 legacy from an old Roxy patron, interrupted a world tour the other weekend just to hurry back from the West Indies to see the Army play football. Immediately afterward he went back to the tour.

Excerpts from letter of Stan Lambert, Rialto theatre, Racine, Wis., has been sending in write-ups to our "What the Picture Did for Me" columns. In his write-up about "The Old Maid," he had a line: "Betty Davis makes some of those so-called actresses look like the Cherry Sisters." A few days later he received a letter from a Herald reader who signed herself "Lorna Doone," from Indianapolis, Ind. The full contents were as follows: "Who and what the hell are the Cherry Sisters?"

Let her go ask Jim Cron.

Gracie Fields, England's best bet in the musical comedy business, also appears in weekly broadcasts. In the middle of heated debate in the House of Commons one recent Fields broadcast day, Sir S. Hoare arose to remind that "Gracie is on the air tonight, and it is obvious that the debate must end at an early hour."

Spy scares are thrilling England almost daily, with the British Intelligence Service going to the queerest places for clues. Typical are the following two advertisements found in London's World's Fair, theatrical trade journal:

> "WHITBY EMPIRE—Harry Evans, Ivy Luck, Horace & Ida, Tom Lewis, Eddie Roberts."
> "WHITEHAVEN EMPIRE—Grace Evans, Roy Mills, Artemus, New Yorkers, Will Wynn."

Ostensibly they were calls to employment, but there is no Empire theatre either in Whitby or in Whitehaven. And the initials of the names in the first ad spell "Heil Hitler." The second can be read, "Germany will win."

Tip to Hollywood talent scouts: Carmen Miranda, described as "the Brazilian Bamballoola," late of Brazil, is all ready for a Hollywood contract. Arriving at NBC's New York studios, the other broadcast time, she removed a "hat" built up from a bouquet of bananas, strawberries and vegetables, unloaded seven pounds and 14 ounces of glass, gold, jade, herringbone and sharktooth jewelry, and pip-squeaked: "New York, she is merveilleuse! But most I like Hollywood."

The omission of quotes from titles sometimes brings unlooked for results, as witness this caption on the obituary of Lois Weber, the author, in the Dallas News: DRUNKARD AUTHOR DEAD, referring, of course, to Miss Weber's story of "The Drunkard."

Dan Eisenberg, the private sleuth whose Skip Tracers Company in New York has tracked down some 162,000 "missing persons"—"skippers"—in the past 15 years, was offered his biggest fee the other week on a visit to California.

Dan went the rounds of the movie studios just like any other movie fan, until one enthusiastic producer found out his identity.

The producer wined and dined Dan with a colossal banquet at the Trocadero and Dan consumed it all before his host came to the point. He offered Skip Tracer Eisenberg $100,000 to find him a star who would combine the best features of Shirley Temple, Hedy LaMarr, Marlene Dietrich and Bette Davis. Dan explained that he finds only folks who disappear, not those who never existed.

THIS was a mighty momentous week for movie and theatrical unions. There was that matter of wage cuts fought over between producers and guilds in Hollywood (for which see the news columns). Also, and requiring a Solomon to decide, there was the case faced by the American Guild of Variety Actors in which Thomas Senna, Guild business agent, was perplexed with this problem:

Should the Siamese twins, Violet and Daisy Hilton, be classified as one person, or separate individuals? Should they be required to apply separately for Guild membership and pay individual dues?

Mr. Senna, taking the position that the girls were separate persons, argued the matter with them for hours, unsuccessfully.

The twins asserted that they had been denied marriage licenses in 20 states on the ground that they, jointly, were one.

The sisters are now playing in Singer's Congress of Human Freaks at Boston Garden. The show manager, Herman Singer, had argued that since he paid the girls a single salary of $150 a week, they should be permitted to join the union as an individual.

Mr. Senna refused to issue them a joint membership card.

The girls refused to sign separate applications.

The girls won the bout, Mr. Senna agreeing that they are one.

Visiting New York's Fifth Avenue Restaurant, the other evening, with a group of 40 newspaper and trade paper friends of Oscar Doob, to observe, with feast and fun, Mr. Doob's 10th anniversary as advertising manager of Loew Theatres, our nomination was proposed for membership in The Screwball Club conducted at the place by Chief Screwballs Olsen and Johnson. The following are eligible to join: Salesmen, frustrated lovers, sob sisters, bartenders, sweepstakes suckers, horse players, run-down jitterbugs, hen-pecked husbands, bald-headed Romeos. We were elected on the first ballot—for various reasons.

From the plains of Kansas comes the story that is percolating through the midwest about Von Ribbentrop's recent visit to Moscow to "clinch" the Russian-German "friendship" pact with Molotov. Seems that the Reds couldn't find any Nazi swastika banners to decorate the flying field at which the latter-day Bismarck was to arrive. The problem was soon solved, however, when one of the Soviet leaders dispatched some underlings to the nearest movie studio and to borrow Nazi flags from the property department. They had been used in the settings of "Professor Mamlock" during the Soviets' filming of that keenly anti-Hitler film which was made at a time when Russian-German friendship pacts were not even thought of.

If David Selznick expects any support from Mrs. Eleanor Sawyer, of Birmingham, Alabama, for his "Gone With the Wind," he's mistaken. Mr. Sawyer hit Mrs. Sawyer with a copy of the two-ton book, the other coffee time, and the lady went right out and sued for divorce.

Four Wives

(Warner Brothers)

Domestic Comedy Drama

In this expertly compounded fiction, executive producer Hal B. Wallis and his extremely talented staff present the four daughters of "Four Daughters," as of a few months after the close of that successful film, variously engaged in the wifely business of having babies. The story is as thoroughly domestic as its forbear, as competently played, written and directed, and it is the same masterly job of narration in that it keeps the several component stories running steadily and simultaneously. It is a good deal more mature as to story material and treatment, incident and dialogue combining to inform observers quite fully on practically all a young man or woman needs to know about practical obstetrics. Indeed, there is more information of this sort in the film than most grandparents know, indubitably more than the very young are accustomed to learning from the screen.

Specifically, the picture opens with one of the wives going to the doctor to verify her suspicion of pregnancy and being told that she not only isn't but never can be. Later on one of her sisters, assuming herself to be similarly constituted, adopts a baby and then learns to her surprise that she is to have one or her own, which turns out to be twins. (So she gives the adopted baby to her sister.) The central problem, however, is that of still another sister. Her husband died in the first picture and she is about to marry his friend when she discovers that she is to bear her dead husband a child. This creates a complex mental problem which her doctor believes can be cured by her proceeding to marry, which she does, but the problem persists, her child is prematurely born, her husband saves its life by giving the infant his blood, but it is not until he completes a symphony which the first husband started and conducts a concert performance of it that the wife finds herself mentally free of the deceased.

While all this childbearing and nonbearing does make up the solid meat of the story, there is much of humour and homey philosophy in it as well. The large and distinguished cast give superbly balanced and uniformly effective portrayals. The film has the unity and quality it has become habitual to expect in a Henry Klanke production. It moves with the steady, sure pace and positiveness characteristic of Michael Curtiz' direction. The screen play by Julius J. and Philip G. Epstein from Maurice Hanline's original story, is so artfully contrived that its intricate development of parallel plots appears straightaway story telling.

The Night of Nights

(Paramount)

A Play About Players

Plays about plays and players have fared well as a group a-down the years, and this is such a play, handled differently than most, refreshingly written and free of the flappancy commonly considered essential in works of the kind. There is humor in the start of it, turning to tragedy. There is solid drama to follow this, and there is a new variety of "Laugh, Clown, Laugh" tragedy at the end. Excellent performances by Roland Young, Olympe Bradna, Pat O'Brien and Reginald Gardiner give the story, which takes on an almost poetic quality in spots, strong appeal.

Donald Ogden Stewart's original screen play, a thoughtful composition, opens 20 years ago with two popular actors going on a spree on the first night of a play by one of them, necessitating a box office refund. The third star, wife of one, disappears that night and he spends the next 20 years in heartbroken regret. The other actor marries for money and supports his friend on loans. When a daughter, born to the defeated actor-playwright and convent-reared in ignorance of him, comes to New York, he is reinspired and his 20-year-old play is produced successfully, revised to include a happy ending at her insistence. She is hailed as a star and her father dies offstage at the finish.

The picture is admirably produced by George Arthur and directed with deep understanding by Lewis Milestone. It is at its best in the artfully gauged sequences wherein the daughter learns to know and understand her father. It is most diverting in the roistering opening passages, least convincing in the nevertheless adequate melodramatic finale.

Geronimo

(Paramount)

Super-Western

This is the picture, muchly talked about, that started production life as a modest effort and so thrilled its sponsors, in the rushes stage, as to take on length and depth and budgetary importance far beyond original plannings. It comes to the screen a super-western, historical in story setting and incident, heroic in proportion and treatment, and containing more Indians on the warpath than any picture in ready memory.

The principal Indian is the malevolent Geronimo, grimly played by Chief Thunder Cloud. His chief antagonist, peacefully intentioned but misunderstood, is a U. S. cavalry general, just as grimly played by Ralph Morgan. Billed hero of the film is a captain, ably portrayed by Preston Foster, who dies by the tomahawk after heroic service. Andy Devine has a rich assignment, humorous in the main but nicely weighted with seriousness, as an army scout. The feminine chores are slight.

The film is in every sense a western, yet more than a western by reason of the historical background and the magnitude of the production. Indians massacre settlers, wreck stage coaches, ambush cavalry detachments, torture prisoners, while the usual venal trader smuggles rifles to the tribes, and the government in Washington commands its troops to make peace with Geronimo. All these things are done on the grand scale, however, and all are done extremely well. The whole job resounds to the credit of Paul H. Sloane, writer of the story and director of the picture, who seems to have proceeded with wholesome singleness of purpose to achieve grandly the sought result.

"Geronimo" has a special technological interest for the trade as the first use of a new fine grain positive film stock developed by Du Pont to specifications supplied by Loren B. Ryder, C. Roy Hunter and James R. Wilkinson, Paramount sound, photographic and laboratory department heads. It is claimed for this stock, which is not to be confused with fine grain negative stock, that it furnishes greater clarity of screen image and sound reproduction, reduces background noise and requires less projection amperage. This admittedly unqualified reporter found the visible screen result readily discernible as a pleasant suggestion of ivory tinting, the audible result less apparent.

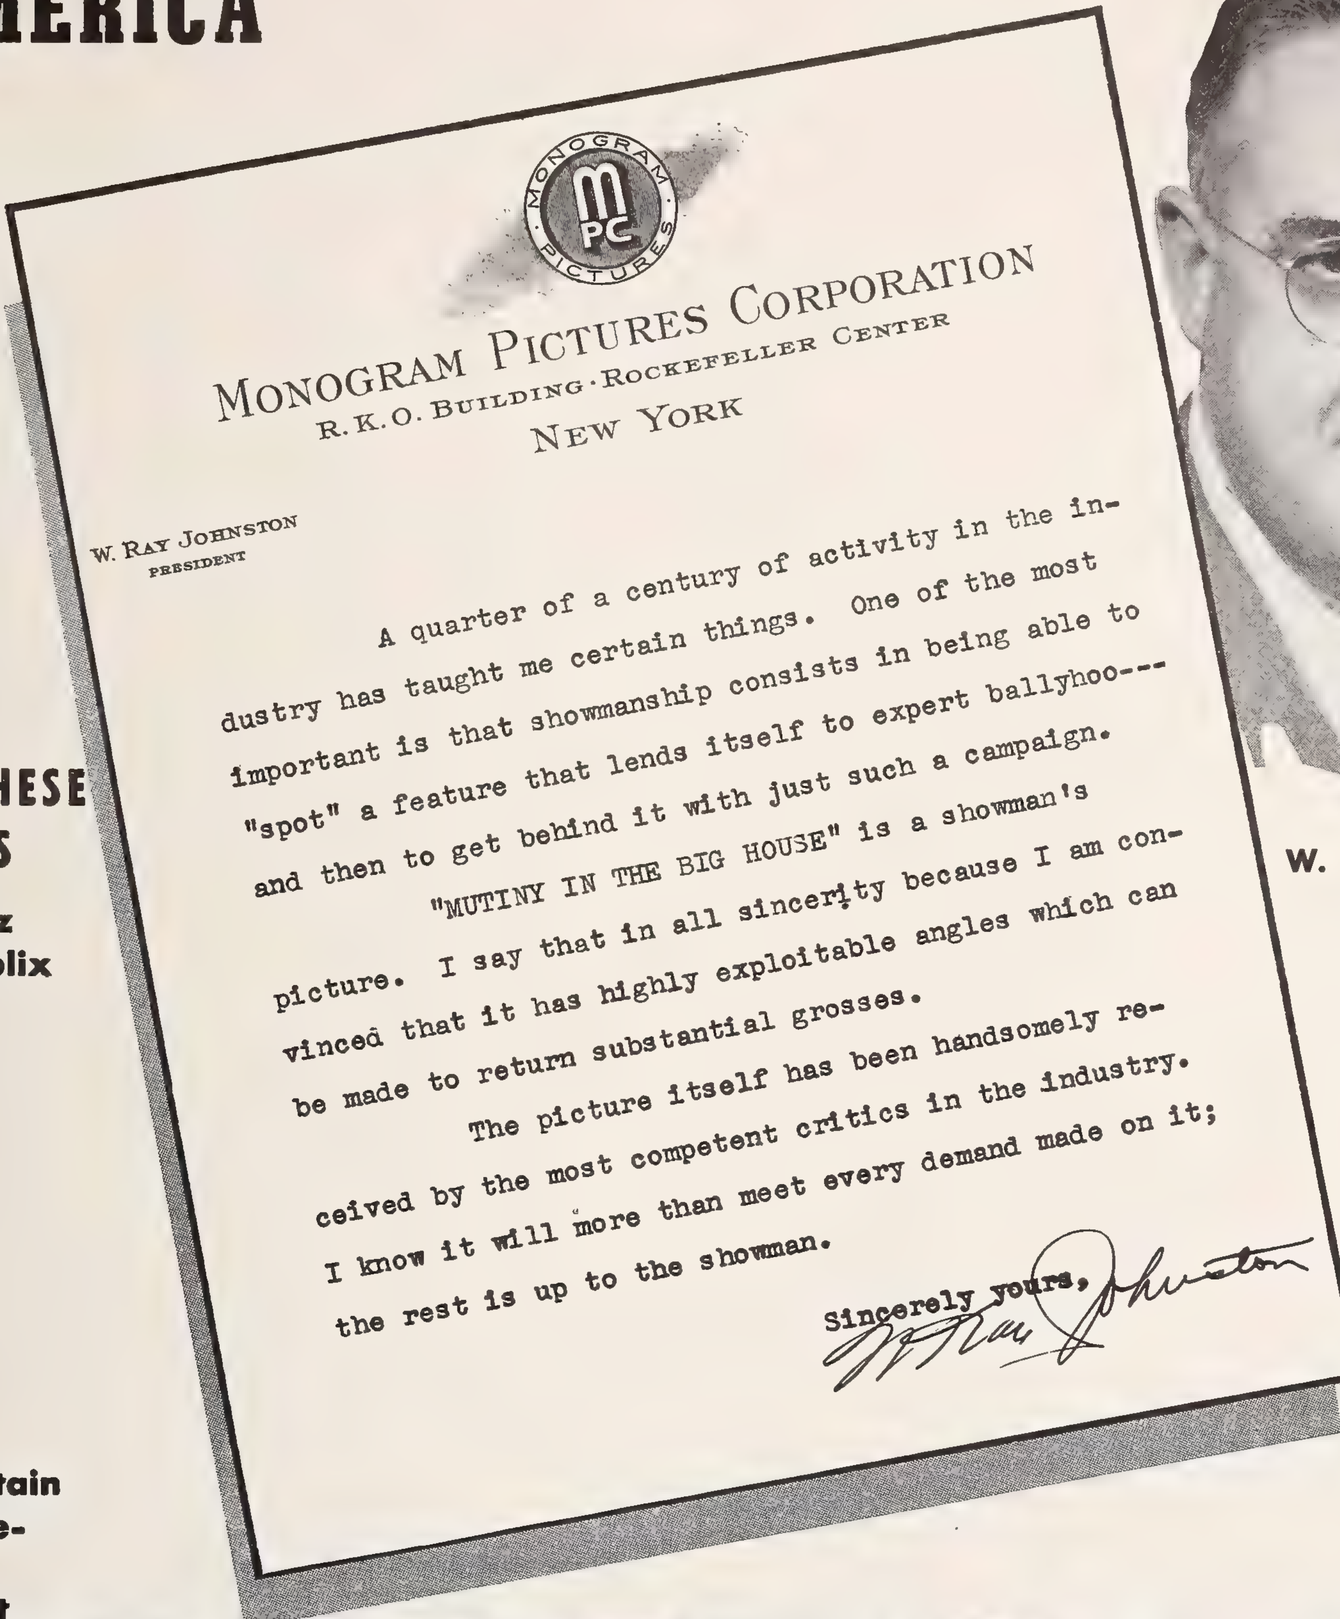
AN OPEN LETTER TO THE SHOWMEN OF AMERICA



MONOGRAM PICTURES CORPORATION

W. RAY JOHNSTON
PRESIDENT

A quarter of a century of activity in the industry has taught me certain things. One of the most important is that showmanship consists in being able to "spot" a feature that lends itself to expert ballyhoo--- and then to get behind it with just such a campaign.

"MUTINY IN THE BIG HOUSE" is a showman's picture. I say that in all sincerity because I am convinced that it has highly exploitable angles which can be made to return substantial grosses.

The picture itself has been handsomely received by the most competent critics in the industry. I know it will more than meet every demand made on it; the rest is up to the showman.

Sincerely yours,
W Ray Johnston

The Honeymoon's Over

(Twentieth Century-Fox)

Domestic Comedy

Stuart Erwin and Marjorie Weaver handle well the principal roles in "The Honeymoon's Over," a comedy of domestic difficulties of a married couple who live above their means. The picture, produced by Sol M. Wurtzel, is an unpretentious offering, the gist of its appeal being the assumption on the part of audiences that the characters resemble persons in their own communities.

Others in the cast include Patric Knowles, Russell Hicks, Jack Carson, Hobart Cavanaugh, June Gale, E. E. Clive. Hamilton MacFadden, Clay Adams and Leonard Hoffman adapted the play, "Six Cylinder Love," by William Anthony McGuire.

To pay his debts "Donald" steals money from the advertising firm for which he works. Discharged and given 60 days to return the money, he gives up his house and automobile, and his wife goes to work in a department store. She makes a deal with an impoverished discoverer of a bath salt for reducing, and enables them to rehabilitate themselves.

Beasts of Berlin

(Hitler, Beast of Berlin)

(Producers Pictures)

Topical Melodrama

Probably best described as a topical melodrama this Producers Pictures Corporation's film is distinctive in that it dispenses with the usual foreword that has to do with similarity, the living or dead, and the purely coincidental. Here names are named, or, to be exact, a name and a philosophy; Hitler and Naziism. The Fuehrer's participation in the film is confined to brief newsreel shots, but the picture constantly cries out against the man as a destroyer of freedom and a despot.

The arena of action is not large, as the story deals with a small band of men and women who meet furtively in a cellar to nourish their hatred of the Nazi creed, and in a concentration camp when they have been apprehended by the Gestapo, the secret police. The film moves swiftly, without the complications of too many details, and capably presents the story it has to tell.

It is out and out discussion of a form of government.

The basis of the story is Shepard Traube's novel, "Goose Step," and was directed by Sherman Scott. Ben Judell produced it and is the author of the statement that the film is "an eloquent and timely pictorial drama of courageous German humanity struggling with true patriotic zeal under the iron heel of Nazi despotism." In the cast are Roland Drew, Steffi Duna, Greta Granstedt, Allan Ladd and a host of others of Germanic origin.

"Hans" and a small band of friends meet in a cellar to discuss ways and means of overthrowing the German Government. They print handbills and distribute them throughout Berlin. "Hans" and some of the others are arrested and beaten. Sent to a concentration camp they are further harassed, and when the others are released the recalcitrant "Hans" is kept at the camp. He is rescued and flees to the Switzerland border where "Elsa," his wife, awaits him, but with the intention of returning to Germany to continue the fight against Hitlerism.

Reviewed at the Globe theatre, New York, under the title, "Beasts of Berlin," the original title having been banned by the New York State censors. An overflow audience intently followed the story as it unfolded on the screen. The most noticeable reaction came whenever the "Heil Hitler" salute was given. The reaction was general laughter. A scattering of hisses greeted the brief appearance of Hitler. Otherwise things were quiet.—P. C. M., Jr.

Distributed by Producers Distributing Corporation. Produced by Producers Pictures Corporation. Producer, Ben Judell. Director, Sherman Scott. Adapted from the novel "Goose Step" by Shepard Traube. Running time, 84 minutes. Release date, October 29, 1939. General audience classification.

She Goes to War

(Mitchell Leichter)

War Melodrama

Mitchell Leichter has taken the picture "She Goes to War," released by United Artists in 1929, reedited it, added sound and a musical score, and now is preparing to release it under the same title. In the original of 10 years ago the film was 9,100 feet in length. For its present release it has been cut to 5,200 feet, removing most of the romance and emphasizing the battle sequences and scenes that reveal the horrors of war.

The picture was based on the Red Book story by Rupert Hughes and produced and directed by Henry King. Tony Gaudio was behind the camera and Howard Estabrook handled the scenario. Eleanor Boardman and John Holland were the romantic leads with Al St. John and Alma Rubens in supporting roles. These names still have exploitation value among adults, but many of them will be strange to the younger audiences. The names King, Hughes, Gaudio and Estabrook are still important.

"Joan Morant," a small town social leader, enlists as an ambulance driver and goes to France to gain personal glory. In a small town near the front she meets a lad she knew back home, "Tom Pike," but he shows little interest. To save the honor of one of the officers, "Joan" dons his uniform and marches to battle in his place. Here "Joan," alone, captures a machine gun nest. Her identity is disclosed, she becomes the "hero" of the regiment, and an idol in "Tom's" eyes.

Improvements of technical aspects of production in a decade are emphasized, in reverse, but the war scenes, especially when the regiment in tanks are crawling through fire toward the enemy, are among the best.

Reviewed in a New York projection room, where the audience lost the trend of the story but watched with interest the battle scenes.—George Spires.

Originally a United Artists picture but currently released by Mitchell Leichter after re-editing, adding sound, and musical score. Produced and directed by Henry King. From the Red Book story by Rupert Hughes. Scenario by Howard Estabrook. Cameraman, Tony Gaudio. Adapted by Madame Fred de Gresac. No. P. C. A. number. Release date, Nov. 10, 1939. Saga of Death Valley

(Republic)

Musical Western

Republic's latest Roy Rogers picture, "Saga of Death Valley," has for its plot two distinct yet connected themes. The first is one noted many times in cowboy pictures, that of a citizen ridding the community of outlaws. The second theme is one of two boys separated in early childhood and brought up in conflicting environments. Producer-director Joseph Kane keeps the themes distinct and makes a picture that is more interesting than the average western production.

"Roy," while still a schoolboy, sees his father killed and his younger brother kidnapped by outlaws of Death Valley. Fifteen years later he returns to avenge both the death and the kidnaping. Meanwhile, "Tim," the younger brother, has been brought up by the leader of the outlaws and is one of the lieutenants of the gang. "Roy," with the aid of "Gabby" and the ranchers of Death Valley, wipe out the outlawing parasites who have been stealing the cattle and burning the ranches. "Roy" and "Tim" are reunited but "Tim" is shot by one of his own men and dies in "Roy's" arms.

Donald Barry portrays "Roy's" younger brother, "Tim." Barry will be remembered for his performance in the Three Mesquiteers' "Wyoming Outlaw." George "Gabby" Hayes continues as Rogers' colleague and Doris Day is the feminine lead. Roy sings as usual.

Smashing the Money Ring

(First National)

Cops vs. Counterfeiters

The third in a series of pictures on the experiences of Secret Service operatives is "Smashing the Money Ring," with Ronald Reagan and Eddie Foy, Jr., as the Service men assigned to uncover the racket. Directed by Terry Morse from the original screen play by Anthony Coldewey and Raymond Schrock.

the action is rapid and interesting. The picture concerns the operation of a counterfeit ring.

Margot Stevenson is the feminine lead but the romance is not emphasized. Joe Downing, seen before in gangster roles, is one of the counterfeiters and William Davidson portrays the prison warden.

"Brass Bancroft" and his assistant, "Gabby," are assigned to uncover a ring that has been flooding the country with bogus bills. Following a tip they get themselves in league with the racketeers and are sent to jail to be near them. Exciting escapades in the prison and a jail break, play their part in uncovering the counterfeiters.

Tower of London

(Universal)

Portrait of Cruelty

Going back to the 15th Century for its material, "Tower of London" presents for the first time on the screen a story of the connivings of the man who became England's Richard III, a hunchbacked, mentally warped egomaniac who murdered his consanguinary relatives to achieve his ambition of sitting on the throne. Rowland V. Lee produced and directed this master epic of horror and cruelty with a finesse that exceeds that of his recent "Son of Frankenstein," and the effect of the barbarity, both raw and veneered, is made more striking by the portrayals of Basil Rathbone and Boris Karloff.

Rathbone enacts the role of "Richard," Karloff that of "Mord," the clubfooted executioner and torturer of the Tower of London, and they have a strange affinity for each other, the executioner sadistically bowing to the murderous whims of his master. The original screen play of Robert N. Lee, while restrained by the numerous characters necessary to the story, is an able record of the years between 1471 and 1485.

Supporting the two principals are Barbara O'Neil, as "Queen Elyzabeth," whose two small sons were killed by "Richard," Ian Hunter as "Edward VI," and Vincent Price, Nan Grey, Ernest Cossart, John Sutton, Leo G. Carroll, Miles Mander, Lionel Belmore, Ronald Sinclair and others.

Apparently having as his purpose the raising of audience "gooseflesh," Rowland V. Lee succeeds admirably. From the start, which shows "Mord" grinning evilly as he whets his headsman's ax, to its climax at the battle of Bosworth, it is an audience-chilling spectacle.

Legion of the Lawless

(RKO Radio)

Western

Virile, veteran George O'Brien has in this vehicle a more than commonly consistent story of the Old West where men were men and so on, a soundly directed film and a nicely balanced performance by all hands. Opposite the star in a well played feminine lead is Virginia Vale, winner of a Jesse Lasky "Gateway to Hollywood" talent search series, an item seeming to warrant exploitation mention.

The period of Berne Giler's story, ably adapted by Doris Schroeder, is that in which the coming of the railroad to the West brought necessary end to the vigilante form of rough justice. The star plays a young lawyer largely responsible for the routing of the masked riders from a frontier community, an achievement accomplished by force of logic, fists and firearms.

David Howard's direction is commonsense and effective. Production by Bert Gilroy is a wholly competent job.

The Secret of Dr. Kildare

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

Medical Equation

Third in the series of "Dr. Kildare" pictures, this is a film which comes about as close as anything outside a "Snow White" to attaining a universal audience appeal, with no frills.

To the great majority of audiences, here is a picture to be seen, remembered, and talked about. It has great appeal in its forthright, human portrayals of characters that general audiences already know and like. For the smaller audience, the sophisticated, compensation is provided in that part of the story dealing with a daughter of the very rich who goes blind through fear and worry, and in its undertone of the psychoanalytical aspect of modern medicine.

Lionel Barrymore, as the crusty, hard-boiled physician who is really one of the most sentimental of all humans, is prevented from engaging in a new series of experiments which would have been too much for his strength by the resignation of his assistant. The latter then cures a girl's "blindness" with his superior's help.

The entire cast does its job in an easy, unstrained manner, working from the screen play by Willis Goldbeck and Harry Ruskin. The characters, taken from the Max Brand story, are given full scope for the working out of their screen personalities in the well paced and effective direction by Harold Bucquet.

Missing Evidence

(Universal)

Melodrama

This is an excellently done melodrama. While cut from the same general pattern as so many melodramatic pictures, here the whole job has been accomplished with effectiveness of performance and direction, which is by Phil Rosen.

The story has to do with sweepstakes tickets, counterfeit at that, and the efforts of an agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation to expose the ring. The screen play is the work of Arthur T. Horman and is from a story by Dorrell and Stuart E. McGowan. Preston Foster as the FBI man is quite convincing in a role that could easily have been unconvincing. Irene Hervey is equally good as the cigar counter girl who turns informer. Other players include Inez Courtney, Chick Chandler and Noel Madison.

"Bill Collins," of the FBI, is assigned to track down the higher-ups in the counterfeit sweepstakes racket. When the old elevator operator at the hotel commits suicide because a ticket he thought was a winner turns out to be a counterfeit, "Linda" and a cigar salesman offer to help "Bill." Ringleader "Duncan" escapes in the police raid but "Bill" captures him.

Reviewed at the Rialto theatre, New York. The film was well received by an audience partial to melodrama.—P. C. M., Jr.

Produced and distributed by Universal. Producer, Phil Rosen. Directed by Phil Rosen. Screen play by Arthur T. Horman from a story by Dorrell and Stuart E. McGowan. P. C. A. Certificate No. 5612. Running time, 64 minutes. Release date, December 15, 1939. General audience classification.

Humorous Melodrama

A swift and primarily amusing but fundamentally sound treatment of the gifted-detective-too-preoccupied-for-romance theme, this adventure in humorous melodrama is far superior to most. It derives its comedy from situation without distortion of characters or dialogue. Its comedy is the funnier for that reason. Its people are earnestly engaged in the enforcement of the law and the amusing

HOLDS USE OF SONG'S TITLE DOESN'T INFRINGE

Ruling for Plaintiff Would Have Cost $8,000 a Picture in Accessories, Says Kilroe

The use of the title "The Man Who Broke the Bank at Monte Carlo" on a motion picture of Twentieth Century-Fox did not infringe on copyright of a song of the same title, the Privy Council of London has ruled on appeal from the Ontario supreme court. Francis Day and Hunter, Ltd., owner of the song, had claimed infringement of copyright, though the song had not been used in the picture.

Judgment Granted

Had the plaintiff's claim been sustained, said Edwin P. Kilroe, copyright attorney of 20th-Fox, "it might have become necessary in a great number of cases to have a title in Canada different from the title in the United States, thus necessitating two sets of advertising accessories, which would mean an additional cost of $8,000 to $10,000 a picture."

The decision of the London court, handed down October 12th, freed Fox from objections to use of the title "The Man Who Broke the Bank at Monte Carlo" on its picture, and its accessories, in the Dominion of Canada.

The picture was released in that location Dec. 9, 1935.

Judge McEvoy, of the Ontario supreme court, granted a $1,046 judgment to the plaintiff on Nov. 13, 1937, holding the title original and distinctive and entitled to copyright protection under the Amendment of 1931 to the Canadian Copyright Act; and that use of the title by the film company was unfair competition.

Decision Reversed

The defendants appealed, and on June 13, 1938, the decision was reversed, the Court of Appeals now holding that the song was not copyrighted because its English publishers had not complied with the Copyright Act of 1906, requiring the work to be reprinted and republished in Canada, a deposit of three copies with the Department of Agriculture, and a notice of copyright on the title page or the page following it, of each song copy. This court also held that Twentieth Century-Fox had not passed off the song as its own, and so was not guilty of unfair competition.

The English Performing Right Society sponsored an appeal to the English Privy Council.

The appellants now based their attack upon the film company's use of the title, and their attack upon the decision of the Canadian Court of Appeals, upon the following theses:

That the title was original and distinctive and the proper subject for Canadian copyright.

That the copyright in a title is infringed by the application of that title to a work of a different character from that of the work to which it was originally applied.

That the performing right in a title is infringed by the performance of a motion picture containing that title or based on the theme of that title.

That the film company, in using the title for the title of a motion picture, unfairly competed with the title of the plaintiff's song.

That the song had copyright protection in Canada under the Imperial Copyright Act of 1842, and its successor, the English Copyright Act of 1911.

This appeal, with its amended or additional arguments, was heard before the Privy Council last July 17th.

On October 12th of this year, the Council ruled, holding:

1. For a decision on the appeal, it was not necessary for the court to determine whether the Imperial Copyright Act of 1842 and the English Copyright Act of 1911 gave to English works published in England prior to January 1, 1924, copyright protection in Canada—because, even if it is assumed that "The Man Who Broke the Bank at Monte Carlo" had Canadian Copyright protection, the defendant did not infringe upon that right.

2. That there was no performing right in the song, because the plaintiff and its predecessor had not printed on the song's title page as published, a notice that the right of public performance was reserved according to the English Copyright Act (on Musical Compositions) of 1882.

3. That, even if performing rights had been reserved, as required, by law, and was in effect when the song was published, the flashing of the title on the screen was not an infringement. In this connection, the Council decision remarks that "to say that this bare fact was a public performance, is abhorrent to common sense."

4. That the use of the title by the defendants, on the film, was not an infringement under the Canadian Copyright Act of 1924, which provides that the title of a work is protected as a part of the work if the title is original and distinctive. The Council decision remarks, "in general a title is not by itself a proper subject matter of copyright."

5. That the defendants did not pass off the exhibition of the motion picture as a performance of the song.

"If the plaintiff's claim had been sustained," said Mr. Kilroe, "it might be necessary in a great number of cases, to have a title in Canada different from the title in the United States, thus necessitating two sets of advertising accessories, which would mean an additional cost of $8,000 to $10,000 per picture."

"Information Please" Star Guest of AMPA

John Kieran, sports columnist of the New York Times and a permanent member of the board of experts of the "Information Please" radio program, was the principal guest last Thursday of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers at the bi-monthly luncheon at Stouffer's Restaurant. He reversed the usual procedure by asking questions.

Answering the questions, which had been previously prepared by AMPA directors, were C. C. Pettijohn, general counsel of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America; Boris Morros, Arthur James and Gail Patrick, actress.

In addition to the quiz participants those at the speakers' table included Frederic Ullman, Jr., general manager of Pathe News, which produces the "Information Please" short subjects; Frank Donovan, Pathe News supervisor, and Jean Edwards, who accompanied Miss Patrick.

Paul Lazarus, president of AMPA, was in charge of the program. Introduced were Miriam Gibson and Charles Dorsa of Monogram, new members; Anna Belle Ward, exhibitor of Lexington, Ky., and Ralph Curran, director for the Social Security board in New York.

GN Creditors Study Refinancing

Grand National creditors met this week for the second time, in New York, before referee Peter B. Olney, on the company's refinancing plan, after learning from company president E. W. Hammons, at last Friday's meeting, that GN would receive $600,000 shortly, to pay off its debts, and to have a working capital of $100,000.

The $100,000 would be left after payment in ful of priority and secured claims, and a first payment of 25 per cent to unsecured creditors, Mr. Hammons said. He stated that the $600,000 was forthcoming in the following fashion: $450,000 from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, $100,000 from Electrical Research Products, $15,000 from the National City Bank, $10,000 from the De Luxe Laboratories, and $25,000 from Lloyd Wright.

Mr. Hammons admitted that the RFC would not extend its loan till 30 days after actual confirmation of the plan; and it will have a first lien on company assets until it is fully repaid. The repayment will be by weekly installments, increasing from $1,700 to $8,000, he said.

The creditors, at last Friday's meeting, turned down a proposal for a committee to investigate the refinancing plan, and decided to do nothing to interfere with its formation and completion.

Mr. Hammons was cross-examined by attorneys for minority creditors and conceded that the company was now operating at a weekly deficit of $2,000 to $3,000. He added that the staff was now skeletonal, and that no salaries over $100 weekly will be paid during reorganization. He is reported also to have signed an agreement not to draw any of his $60,000 yearly salary, until the $600,000 has been paid in full.

The minority creditors obtained permission to have an accountant inspect the company's books.

A statement covering cash receipts and disbursements from November 2nd to the 15th was shown, revealing $39,565 on hand. On November 2nd, it had $20,266 in hand; from then to November 15th, it received $34,501, including a $17,000 loan from the National City Bank. The expenses for the period were $15,202, it was said.

Mr. Hammons told the creditors that he was studying the company's leases, in order to affirm or disaffirm some.

The company is expected to receive an additional $1,000,000 of financing from Felt & Company, a Wall Street house, after the present financing is concluded. The first amount, as stated, is to pay off the accumulated debts of the company and for working capital; the second sum of money will be used for production.

Employees now laid off to conserve funds, will be reinstated when the refinancing ends, it is understood.

Sol Edwards, sales chief, said on Monday in New York that the company's consolidation, embodying the cutting of home office and sales staffs, and the closing of 10 exchanges, will be only temporary. The New Haven territory, meanwhile, is to be served out of Boston; the Albany, out of Buffalo; Milwaukee, out of Chicago; Seattle and Portland, out of San Francisco; and Salt Lake City, out of Denver.

Universal is formulating plans for handling its own distribution in Cuba and may open an office there within the next few weeks. C. A. Kirby, assistant to J. H. Seidelman, Universal foreign manager, returned to New York recently after making arrangements in Havana for the formation of the new distributing subsidiary there.

Aldblack Productions, Inc., has been incorporated in Albany. Lee Moseele, Geraldine Weiss and Rose Lader, New York, are the directors.

FROM HERALD READERS

OILS FOWLING PIECE

Dear Sirs and Mr. Zanuck:

Darryl F. Zanuck is a very angry man and I think everyone should write him a nice letter. Of course it is incredible that anyone, especially an independent theatre man, should dare try to run his own end of the business. After all, what are independent theatre men but the faithful, cringing serfs of the Hollywood Cellulords. We worship the producers and the "stars," Mr. Zanuck, and pray that simply because one of our fellows, by some inconceivable act of assertion and rebellion, dared to pull your already immortal classic, "Drums Along the Mohawk," Technicolor and all, a day early, you will not punish every one of us.

I am starting a drive, with your permission of course, to collect 100% of the gross every independent theatre did on the last "Mr. Moto" or Arleen Whelan masterpiece, and if I can get a few thousand theatres to cooperate perhaps in some small way we can compensate for the near-sighted action undertaken by Mr. Fabian, who, apparently, is blind to the feudal power Hollywood can exert over us.

In closing let me say in a muffled voice (I am salaaming as I dictate, so my words may be a bit puffy) that many of us are waiting for the very "sorry" day when things begin to pinch out there at the city of gods—when some producers on diving into inlaid swimming pools, find to their surprise that the cook used all the water to wash the dishes (a singularly mortal act)—and the day when producers find they not only "cannot break even" but can break into little pieces—perhaps some of them will go at this thing the right way, stop making all these boring, fabulous "gambles," and start making genuinely good movies at a fraction of the former costs.

Speaking of throat-cutting, Mr. Zanuck, I think I can see what you mean. "Suez" was billed to us at $103 and we grossed $100. We opened with this gamble on Sunday afternoon. If we had it to live over again I would pull it on Sunday morning. Some men like to cut their own throats, if this distasteful procedure is compulsory.

And since you brought up the subject of gambles, just what is it when the little theatre man signs his name to a Fox contract on which appear only a list of numbers and a few thousand words in legal jargon, few of which grant him any privileges or rights.

Remember what happened in '75. I am oiling up my fowling piece.

Can it be possible that there was something about "Drums Along the Mohawk" or about the engagement that Mr. Fabian simply didn't like.—C. T. COONEY, JR., Waldo Theatre Corporation, Waldoboro, Maine.

SAYS EXCHANGES HELPED

I noticed Mr. Curtis' article from Wyoming (September 16, page 71) and noted his remarks that the picture exchanges would not take into consideration any film adjustment, as a result of the mines in his town being closed, which reacted on his receipts so that he felt he could not pay rentals as before this situation existed.

Here in Tilbury we have five factories closed on us, bringing up our relief to an all-time record, with the film rentals out of portion to our grosses.

We laid our cards fairly on the table to our respective exchanges, showing from newspapers and letters from the mayor that normally we had 750 men at work, that they are out of work due to our factories being closed.

The exchanges appreciated our predicament, and gave us liberal reductions and all top product. We never had our integrity questioned and weren't turned down.

We only bring this to your readers' attention as we feel due credit should be given where deserved, and here in Canada we appreciate the fine cooperation of the film exchanges, which was a big medium in keeping us out of the red.—HARLAND RANKIN, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario.

Warners Complete Circuit Selling

The closing this week of two major circuit deals by Warner Brothers completed the company's circuit selling for the 1939-40 season, according to Gradwell L. Sears, eral sales manager.

The two theatre circuits signed this week were the T. & D. Jr. Circuit, operating 34 houses in California and Nevada and the Crescent Amusement Company and its affiliated circuits, which comprise 64 situations in Georgia, Tennessee and North Carolina. They signed for the entire Warner feature output plus Vitaphone short subjects and trailers.

The T. & D. Jr. Circuit deal was closed by Carl Leserman, assistant general sales manager, and Mike Neiffy of the circuit. The Crescent deal was signed by Ben Kalmenson, Warners western and southern sales manager, and Tony Sudekum for the circuit.

Two States Pass "Harvest"

"Harvest," French motion picture banned by the New York State censor board whose decision was reversed by the Board of Regents, has been passed without eliminations by the censor boards of Pennsylvania and Maryland.

Ohio censors reviewed a total of 678 reels in October, from which 26 eliminations were ordered. In September, 506 reels were reviewed, with 25 cuts ordered. Figures for October 1938 were 509 reels and 24 eliminations.

There was but one reel rejected by the Ohio censors out of 132 submitted for review during the week ending November 3rd.

George Laganas, president of Standard Pictures, has named Peter Witt as director of publicity, advertising and exploitation.

20,000 at Benefit "Night of Stars"

A capacity crowd of about 20,000 attended the sixth annual "Night of Stars" held at Madison Square Garden November 15th. The show was sponsored by the United Palestine Appeal and was for refugee aid. Entertainment was furnished by a number of stars of screen, stage and radio.

Nathan Straus, Federal Housing Administrator, was chairman of the benefit and he was assisted by a committee of more than 500 persons. $90,000 worth of tickets were sold.

WHN, radio station owned by Loew's, carried the program from 9:45 until 12:45 under the sponsorship of I. J. Fox.

Performers from the Radio City Music Hall, Roxy, Paramount and Strand theatres, as well as many other screen, stage and radio personalities took part in the show, which was produced with the active help of Marvin Schenck of Loew's and Ben A. Boyar.

Honorary chairmen of the committee were Barney Balaban, David Bernstein, Nate J. Blumberg, Jack Cohn, George J. Schaefer, Joseph M. Schenck, Murray Silverstone and Mayor Albert Warner. Louis K. Sidney was chairman of the producers' committee.

Schenck Drive Leader

Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board of Twentieth Century-Fox, again will serve as vice-chairman of the Committee for the Celebration of the President's Birthday which each year under the sponsorship of President Roosevelt, conducts a drive for the National Paralysis, Inc. Mr. Schenck is also California state chairman for the 1940 "Fight Infantile Paralysis" campaign.

Eddie Cantor is chairman of the radio division of the "March of Dimes." Many radio and film personalities will assist Eddie Cantor in the "March of Dimes" drive. These include Norma Shearer, Jeanette McDonald, Tyrone Power, Lawrence Tibbett, Bing Crosby, Gladys Swarthout, Deanna Durbin, Jack Benny, Nelson Eddy, Cecil B. DeMille and Charles Butterworth. Grantland Rice will direct the "March of Sport."

Accessories Group Aids Drive

B. S. Moss is again chairman of the accessories group of the Amusement Division of the 1939 campaign of the New York and Brooklyn Federation of Jewish Charities. The group includes the following:

Walter Barber, Laurence Bolognino, Bernard Brandt, Jules Catsiff, Max A. Cohen, George Feinberg, M. J. Fessler, Emil Friedlander, William Friedman, Emanuel Frisch, Miss I. Garretson, Joseph Hornstein, Joe Katsch, A. L. Kirwan, Stanley Colbert, Ben Knobel, Fred Lakeman, Jerome M. Loeb, Bud Litton, Milton Maier, Harry A. Nadel, Eugene Picker, Arthur M. Rapf, Walter Reade, Jr., Fred Schwartz, Jr., Edward Seider, Max Seligman, Charles Sonin, Monroe E. Stein, James E. Stroock and Al Suchman.

Club Supports Milk Drive

The Twin City Variety Club of Minneapolis will take over the milk fund which had been supported up to now by a group of women and it will be the Club's permanent charity according to W. A. Steffes, chief barker.

Warner Brothers have donated $1,000 to the Chicago Community Fund.

Louis R. Golding, Fabian district manager for Albany, is in charge of the theatre section of the local community chest drive.

things they do and say are things such people would. It's solid entertainment.

Melvyn Douglas plays the title role easily and lightly, Joan Blondell enacts cleverly the fiancee he's always too busy to marry, and Clarence Kolb has a rich part as his superior who declines to let matrimonial plans interfere with the work of the detective department. Edward S. Brophy is immensely effective as a prison-bound criminal and Donald MacBride gives excellent account of himself as a second detective.

Produced by Everett Riskin, with Alexander Hall directing in fine fettle, the film is steadily gaited. Sy Bartless wrote the story and had the cooperation of Dwight Taylor and Richard Maibaum in preparing the screen play. The whole is something for all five to feel happy about, a highly diverting comedy suitable for any and all types of audiences.

Rovin' Tumbleweeds

(Republic)

Western

"Rovin' Tumbleweeds" is the latest Gene Autry western and a rare western it is. The story seems to be a conglomeration of current productions. The problem of the migratory worker sends Mr. Autry to Washington, as Congressman, to push through a bill on flood control, which is at the heart of the migratory situation in Mr. Autry's bailiwick. At the beginning of the film and at its end the rains come in copious quantity.

The picture's resemblance to the typical western lies only in the habiliments of the star, Smiley Burnette and some other cowboy characters, and in a scene laid at a rodeo. There is quite a deal of singing in the film with Autry as the soloist and the "Pals of the Golden West" as accompanists and a chorus. Mary Carlisle, the girl in the case, plays a radio reporter, and the secretary to Mr. Autry in the nation's capital. Douglass Dumbrille is the villain who reforms at the last moment when he is forced to help stem the flood.

"Gene" is among a group of ranchers forced to abandon their ranches when their lands are flooded. "Gene" becomes a popular cowboy radio singer and is elected to Congress. He is hampered by political machinations and ignorance of the processes of the legislative body. On his return he finds a small band of townspeople piling sand bags to ward off the threatening flood. "Gene" rallies the migratory workers and forces the political power of the town to help. The politician promises to get the bill passed.

New York's Finest

A melodrama built around "New York's finest," the Police Department, the production takes as its principal characters an Irish family with a tradition on the force. The father is a retired policeman who has become a night watchman; one son is on the force with a reputation for integrity, the other son is scornful of the pay of a policeman and follows the easy money path. So it's brother against brother with the law coming out on top.

Dick Purcell as the policeman has the top spot. Charles Quigley plays the erring brother, Frank Sheridan the Irish father, Lillian Elliott, the mother, Edward Keane the gang leader, and Bernadene Hayes and Julie Warren are the feminine interest. The screen play is based on the story "Detective First Class," by Charles Curran and C. B. Williams, and was directed by William Watson.

The March of Time, No. 4

(RKO Radio)

News Front of War—1940

Through a study of the methods of gathering worldwide news, as is practiced by the Associated Press, the spectator is offered an unusually concise and comprehensive summary of important national and international events of this year. From the beginnings of the new annual date, with its contrasting shots of festive celebrations and bread lines, through some side glances on governmental matters and personages up to the high mark in calendar happenings, the "Second World War," the review is swiftly paced, dramatically pointed and expertly editorialized in the by now proven technique of this educational-entertainment series. Naturally, as being the biggest news of the year, the discussion of the war situations receives the greatest amount of attention. In a priceless sequence Communists and Nazis bow to each other over bubbling champagne and caviar.—Running time, 19 minutes.

Ski Birds

(MGM)

Skiing

With the skiing season rapidly approaching, Pete Smith's camera crew goes to the top of snow covered Sugar Mountain in California and makes a short on the history, art and latest improvements in skiing. The first part of the subject humorously shows armored soldiers of long ago laboriously ascending the hills on foot. Various types of skis then are demonstrated. The latest gadgets, the subject discloses, are streamlined headgear for traveling eighty miles an hour, Schuss mantles, a wing-like cape that governs the speed and turns, and a bicycle frame with skis attached. The subject offers thrills and fun for all.—Running time, 8 minutes.

Pied Piper Porky

(Vitaphone)

Looney Tune Contribution

A cartoon caricature on the fictional legend of the "Pied Piper of Hamelin," immortalized in the Browning verse, serves as the latest exploit vehicle for the porcine character, Porky. The fable has matched the license of the treatment of the fable with some vastly amusing drawing board nonsense.—Running time, seven minutes.

Washington Parade, No. 3

(Columbia)

Smithsonian Institution

Following shots of the White House and the Capitol, Washington Parade No. 3 takes the audience inside the Smithsonian Institution. Shown are re-creations of prehistoric animals from fossilized bones and footprints, also Chinese and Japanese sculpture, the Spirit of St. Louis in which Lindbergh made the first west to east trans-Atlantic flight in 1927, early sewing machines and typewriters and famous paintings. The series continues to be interesting as well as instructive.—Running time, 10½ minutes.

Never Sock a Baby

(Paramount)

Popeye Cartoon

Popeye, the man of muscle, brawn and spinich, spanks little Swea' Pea and the baby runs away from home. His adventures on the "road" are nerve-tingling, especially when the bridge falls just after he has crossed, when a landslide buries a mountain path, and finally when he falls into the roaring rapids and calls on Popeye for help. Then Popeye awakens from his dream.—Running time, 6 minutes.

Holland and the Zuyder Zee

(Columbia)

Columbia Tour

Produced by Andre De La Varre and narrated by Milton Cross, this one-reel subject concerns the habits and lives of the people of Holland, now one of the current centers of interest in European affairs. A tour brings the audience to Amsterdam followed by a cruise along the canals down the Zudyer Zee to Vollerdam, then to Alkmaar, famous cheese market. The journey ends with a visit to Middleburg, where the inhabitants still cling to the costume styles of their ancestors.—Running time, 9½ minutes.

U. S. REPORTS 27,000,000-FOOT DROP IN HOLLYWOOD FILM EXPORTS

United Kingdom, France and Sweden Now Are the Only European Countries Among Ten Leading Markets

The United Kingdom, France and Sweden now are the only European countries listed among the ten leading markets for exports of American positive motion picture film, other European buyers of Hollywood product having fallen outside the "first ten" group, it was disclosed this week by an analysis of U. S. film trade for the first nine months of this year, as reported by Nathan D. Golden, chief of the motion picture division of the Department of Commerce, in the first tangible figures on U. S. exports since international complications started early in the year.

Exports Declined

Exports of both positive and negative film declined sharply during the period, as compared with the first nine months of 1938, it was said, the former dropping more than 27,000,000 feet from 140,133,067 feet with a declared value of $2,989,872, to 112,486,707 feet at a declared value of $2,284,277 (the declared value being estimated on a cost of two cents per foot for raw film), and the latter falling off more than 700,000 feet from 6,387,602 feet valued at $228,752 to 5,698,594 feet valued at $242,796.

"While this decline would, at first glance, seem to indicate a severe falling off of our foreign motion picture markets," Mr. Golden explained, "this is not entirely true, since it is believed that American companies are shipping duplicate negatives to major markets having laboratory facilities for the printing of positive films. This belief is substantiated by the fact that increased shipments of negative film have been sent to France, Australia and New Zealand."

50 Per Cent Drop in Britain

Outstanding features of the comparison of 1938 and 1939 positive film exports were the drop of nearly 50 per cent in shipments to the United Kingdom and the fact that only three of the ten leading markets took a greater footage this year than last.

The United Kingdom, in the first nine months of 1938 our second most important market with a total of 10,764,320 feet valued at $283,542, dropped in the same period this year to fourth place with only 5,776,339 feet valued at $156,452, to be succeeded as runner-up by Brazil, last year third with 9,733,235 feet valued at $190,063, now second with 10,129,376 feet valued at $195,695.

Argentina continued the largest market, but dropped from 10,971,889 feet valued at $185,803 to 10,315,328 feet valued at $175,991. Mexico, last year in fourth place with 7,077,867 feet valued at $207,934, advanced to third place with but 6,432,713 feet valued at $177,848.

In addition to Brazil, the only countries increasing their takings of film this year were Sweden, advancing from 3,413,217 feet valued at $87,803 to 3,711,974 feet valued at $92,900, and Venezuela, advancing from 3,169,637 feet valued at $59,560 to 3,328,888 feet valued at $59,017.

The other leading markets were reported by Golden as the miscellaneous British West Indies, taking 4,685,500 feet valued at $8,194 during the first nine months of this year as compared with 5,779,888 feet valued at $13,593 in the same period in 1938; France, 4,070,581 feet valued at $89,287 against 5,187,716 feet valued at $120,596; Panama, 4,008,755 feet valued at $62,441 against 5,200,113 feet valued at $69,747, and Cuba, 3,711,606 feet valued at $67,666 against 3,927,946 feet valued at $70,593.

Changes in the negative export situation were marked, shipments to Canada, our leading market, dropping nearly one-third from 3,167,971 feet valued at $117,363 to 2,385,779 feet valued at $133,818, while those to the United Kingdom advanced slightly, from 1,133,883 feet valued at $45,621 to 1,140,581 feet valued at $40,958, and those to Australia jumped two thirds from 622,511 feet valued at $14,199 to 1,055,538 feet valued at $36,880.

Exports to France were up nearly 150 per cent, from 94,196 feet valued at $2,501 to 238,278 feet valued at $5,293, but the greatest jump in footage was in shipments to the British West Indies, from 1,000 feet valued at $16 to 141,000 feet valued at $240.

Poland and Danzig, last year our fourth market, this year was a poor sixth as a result of a decline from 371,384 feet valued at $21,334 to 125,008 feet valued at $4,267. Newfoundland and Labrador advancing from 48,906 feet valued at $1,041 to 92,245 feet valued at $1,852; Mexico from 42,199 feet valued at $769 to 65,089 feet valued at $11,093.

Exports of motion picture equipment for the first nine months of the current year, the report showed, included 108 35 mm. cameras valued at $39,453 against 149 valued at $86,379 in the same period last year; 14,415 16 mm. cameras valued at $385,159 against 19,109 valued at $496,170; 892 35 mm. projectors valued at $279,240 against 747 valued at $261,877; 14,847 16 mm. silent projectors valued at $324,586 against 16,637 valued at $502,599; 1,241 16 mm. sound projectors valued at $187,858 against none; and sound recorders valued at $166,591 against $208,466, and sound reproducers valued at $732,968 against $1,933,356.

Ten Biggest Foreign Customers For Hollywood's Motion Pictures

The Motion Picture Division of the United States Department of Commerce at Washington this week issued its regular nine-month report on motion picture exports of negative and positive film, and exports of motion picture equipment, and a comparison for the same period of 1938. Exports to the ten leading countries follow:

Set $153,030 as "Lynton" Damages

Total damages of $153,030 against Loew's, Inc., Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures Corporation, MGM Distributing Corporation and Culver Export Company for alleged plagiarism by the film "Letty Lynton" of the Edward Sheldon and Margaret Ayer Barnes play "Dishonored Lady" was fixed in a decree submitted to William Bondy, federal judge, in New York this week.

The plaintiffs' share of the net profits of the picture reduced recently by the United States circuit court of appeals to one-fifth are stipulated in the decree at $115,803. Attorneys' fees are fixed at $34,595 and costs at $2,632. Attorneys for both sides have agreed to the decree which requires Judge Bondy's approval.

Court Upholds Hart Verdict

A jury verdict of $190,484 with interest of $86,450, in favor of William S. and Mary Hart against United Artists Corporation was upheld this week in a 3 to 2 decision of the appellate division of the New York supreme court. The verdict had been awarded to the plaintiffs on November 2, 1938, after a trial before Justice Bernard L. Shientag in which the Harts successfully contended that United Artists breached an agreement to distribute the Hart film, "Tumbleweeds."

The $500,000 suit claimed that the agreement had been made on April 28, 1925, and that the defendant had block-booked the film with "Wild Justice," claimed to be an inferior picture, United Artists was charged with obtaining lower rentals for "Tumbleweed" while securing a higher rental for the other picture. It was also accused of failing to keep accurate books of account.

The prevailing decision was rendered without opinion. Justice Irwin Untermyer, in dissenting said that the plaintiffs should recover "only a fraction of the verdict" because, he said, they had failed to prove that the defendant, except in a few instances, had block-booked the picture.

Discontinue 20th Century-Fox Stockholders' Action

The stockholders' suit of Millie Simm and Annie Kopple against Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation was marked discontinued this week in New York supreme court. The action sought $25,000,000 damages charging waste and mismanagement against company officials. No reason for the discontinuance was disclosed.

Roman Loses Plea

Benjamin Roman's application for an order directing Neil F. Agnew, vice-president of Paramount Pictures, Inc., to testify before trial was denied in New York supreme court this week. Mr. Roman is suing Paramount for $250,000 claiming breach of a contract which gave the plaintiff exclusive right to reissue "The Spoilers" and "Morocco" in New York and New Jersey. The court, however, ordered Joseph Unger, eastern sales manager for Paramount; Milton Kusell and Myron Satler to testify on Monday.

Disney Loses Ruling

The appellate division of the New York supreme court this week upheld an order denying an application of Walt Disney Productions, Ltd., and RCA Manufacturing Company to bar Adriana Caselotti from presenting her $200,000 damage suit on trial against applicants. The plaintiff, who sang the role of "Snow White" in "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," charges that recordings of her voice were made without her consent.

Argentina Acts To Save Industry

by NATALIO BRUSKI
in Buenos Aires

The Senate, the Chamber of Deputies and the Argentine Cinematographic Institute are taking steps to safeguard the growing Argentine industry, which is threatened with virtual extinction if the European War is prolonged more than a year. Cinema circles are alarmed because they find that they no longer are able to import the necessary material from Europe, and the United States is closed in part as a purchasing market pending consummation of a trade treaty between the two countries and the consequent high customs barriers which have been erected by Argentina.

The Instituto Cinematografico Argentino, an official entity which supervises all local productions, saw the danger and immediately took steps to bring the matter before the proper authorities. A letter was dispatched to Jorge A. Coll, minister of justice and public instruction, informing him of the investigations carried out by the Institute. It appears that the greater part of the raw film which is used in Argentina is of European origin and the amount on hand would last for a normal eight months, by economizing for perhaps a year.

Recently authorization was granted for import licenses without any specified limit, but this concession lapses at the end of the year. Furthermore, the Argentine also requires chemical products and equipment not manufactured in this country. The Institute informed the Ministry of Justice that it understands that the Permanent International Commission of Political Economy, negotiating with the United States, also is giving consideration to the subject of films. The Institute is under the impression that this item includes all finished films and unused negatives, but it appears that no thought had been given to equipment for laboratories, accessories and chemical products. The Institute considers that an industry that has achieved such a prominent position as that of the Argentine cinema should be protected from all obstacles.

Order Lynch Examination

The appellate division of the New York supreme court this week ordered Stephen A. Lynch, defendant in a suit for $250,000 legal fees brought by David Stoneman, to appear for examination before trial. The plaintiff claims to have represented Mr. Lynch from 1933 to 1936 in the Paramount-Publix reorganization hearings.

The trial of the $600,000 breach of contract suit of John D. Tippett, Inc., against Universal Pictures has been set for January 16th in New York supreme court. The plaintiff charges that under a contract made in 1932 the defendant agreed to purchase a substantial part of its raw film stock requirements for five years from the plaintiff.

Paul J. McCormick, federal judge, in Los Angeles this week ruled that there had been no infringement of copyright in the plagiarism action brought by Michael I. Kustoff against Charles Chaplin. Plagiarism of the plaintiff's book, "Against Gray Wall" in the film, "Modern Times," was charged.

MR. SMITH GOES TO WASHINGTON: Jean Arthur, James Stewart, Edward Arnold, Claude Rains, Guy Kibbee, and one of the greatest casts ever built around any story—Frank Capra's greatest work. Can truthfully say I never saw or heard better performance than by this cast; Stewart, in the title role, of course, has greater opportunities. His pitching "Mr. Smith" down the throats of frantic Washington and into the hearts of millions of everyday ordinary Americans (who never saw a trace of insult to the Capital's officialdom and press until told about it by someone with a conscience) should win him "Oscar" to take home as a rare display of an Award that for once paid off at the Box Office in every town.

However, it's not all Stewart. Jean Arthur comes in for her share even if she did offend someone with a Yippee! And for scenes that will make your audience forget the screen and think they are looking through a keyhole, case the ones between Arnold and Rains. Particularly the show-down in the Washington hotel room as Arnold (Taylor) turns the heat loose on "Mr. Smith." Baby Dumpling "ohh-ed" them in his 10-second appearance and Kaltenborn held them with his 90 seconds.

Play it and plug it 100 per cent over your usual budget. It will come back with interest. Your school teachers will send their pupils for one of the greatest lessons in the "American Way of Thinking" they will ever get anywhere.

As William R. Weaver in the October 7th "Herald" says, " . . . sell more sermon-pure Americanism the hard way than all the star-spangled purpose pictures of the period have managed to instill."

This picture will bring to your patrons a spirit of patriotism they never thought they would ever have. The Lincoln Memorial scenes alone will sell more America to them than any book or story ever published. It gave me a thrill as I just returned from there on a vacation. The crackpots with a torch to burn may have the situation a little foggy, and to offset that just exploit as though it were actual dramatization of the Declaration of Independence itself.

After all, there have been many pictures dealing in all sorts of plots about all sort of people and things, and the only ones who really have a squawk are the ones who are hit close in. Or maybe I'm wrong. Running time (far too long), 130 minutes. Played 12 days, October 22 to November 3.—C. Arnold Skelly, New Arcade Theatre, Newark, Ohio. General patronage.

MR. SMITH GOES TO WASHINGTON: James Stewart, Jean Arthur, Edward Arnold—Another good Capra film, but just a little too American for Canada. Did big business but not colossal. House strictly class house. Stewart excellent. Cast in general good. Story good. Comments in general good. Business increased after opening. Finishing third week, looks like a fourth. On strength of cast alone should gross well anywhere. Running time, 127 minutes.—Lloyd M. Mills, Elgin Theatre, Ottawa, Canada. General patronage.

ONLY ANGELS HAVE WINGS: Cary Grant, Jean Arthur—A bang up good show where the players make you forget that they are merely playing.—O. S. Nordine, Karlstad Theatre, Karlstad, Minn. Country patronage.

U-BOAT 29: Conrad Veidt, Sebastian Shaw, Valarie Hobson—Columbia smart in changing title. Very timely. Could have had more action, but well received as cast and story good. Big business, held over one week. Sold on sensational timely angle in a strictly class house. Running time, 83 minutes.—Lloyd M. Mills, Elgin Theatre, Ottawa, Canada. General patronage.

First National

CODE OF THE SECRET SERVICE: Ronald Reagan, Roselle Towne—Very exciting G-man picture which thrilled and pleased our Saturday night patrons. Played November 3-4.—Gordon P. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

DAUGHTERS COURAGEOUS: Priscilla, Rosemary and Lola Lane, John Garfield, Claude Rains—I personally liked this fine, but not enough to want to buy it just for myself. Business considerably below average in spite of weather, etc., being O. K. Claude Rains was so charming the patrons wanted him to get his family back. Leaving his wife and four small daughters, he comes back twenty years later and has you sympathizing with him before your realize it. Running time, 107 minutes. Played October 29-30.—Everett Clapp, American Theatre, Sidell, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

DUST BE MY DESTINY: John Garfield, Priscilla Lane—We have noticed that several have criticized the company in regards to the class of product offered so far this season. Possibly the writer of such articles has not seen "Dust Be My Destiny." Here is top entertainment in anybody's house. Perfection in all details and good for the best days of the week. Best audience picture in weeks. Running time, 88 minutes. —A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

EACH DAWN I DIE: James Cagney, George Raft, Jane Bryan—A good one. Raft outdid Cagney and he'll do it any time in a dramatic role. Don't be afraid to let the children see this. Although not recommended for them, it contains a lesson many of them will never forget and none of the many who saw it here were afraid. I'd rather see them put the "adult" only on some of the sexy pictures that get the OK sign. Business strong average. Running time, 94 minutes. Played November 5-6.—Everett Clapp, American Theatre, Sidell, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

ESPIONAGE AGENT: Joel McCrea, Brenda Marshall, Jeffrey Lynn, Frank McHugh—Do not be afraid of this action drama for your action nights as it certainly packs plenty of punch. Excellent for its kind and very timely. Running time, 80 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

ESPIONAGE AGENT: Joel McCrea, Brenda Marshall, Jeffrey Lynn, Frank McHugh—Fair show but neither stars or cast mean anything here. Joel McCrea is always good; Brenda Marshall is new but good. Pleased about half the rather small audience. Running time, 83 minutes. Played October 27-29.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

ON YOUR TOES: Zorina, Eddie Albert, Alan Hale, James Gleason, Gloria Dickson—A waste of footage. Just another picture which may draw those who take their ballet dancing seriously but we doubt even if they come in. Would shelve it, if we had it to do over. Running time, 94 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Grand National

TRIGGER PALS: Art Jarrett, Lee Powell—Keep away from this. Impossible is the word. Even the kids walked out, and for two days I stayed out of the lobby. Played September 29-39.—F. W. Linehan, Rialto Theatre, New Britain, Conn. Middle class patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BABES IN ARMS: Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland —Grand show that is clicking hard all along the line, extended runs in all spots. Running time, 96 minutes. —W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

BLACKMAIL: Edw. G. Robinson, Ruth Hussey—A picture well produced and satisfactory in every way. Good suspense and story. A little violent in spots on which we received some slight criticism from what we suppose were the nervous ladies. It is the type that Robinson fits into.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

BLACKMAIL: Edward G. Robinson, Ruth Hussey, Bobs Watson, Gene Lockhart—Good picture but business was only fair. Running time, 80 minutes. Played November 5-6.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey Okla. Small town patronage.

CITADEL, THE: Robert Donat, Rosalind Russell, Ralph Richardson, Rex Harrison, Dilys Davis—Was pleasantly surprised by the reaction of our audience on this one. Most of our patrons read the book and were prepared to see a production which would have little if any connection with the written "Citadel." However, all praised the direction, as well as the very fine performances turned in by the cast, especially Robert Donat, Rosalind Russell, Ralph (the inebriate) Richardson, and last but not least Dilys Davis (Mrs. Page). The fadeout on this one was especially impressive and Donat did an excellent job. It is one of the best, if not the best, British productions and can honestly be compared with the outstanding Hollywood productions. Running time, 110 minutes. Played November 11.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

FAST AND FURIOUS: Ann Sothern, Franchot Tone, Ruth Hussey, Mary Beth Hughes, Margaret Roach, James Burke—Plenty good. One of the lower allocation features that is worth a dozen "Marie Antoinettes" and similar highbrow and high-priced productions. Franchot Tone at his best and that gal, Ann Sothern, is a wow. Ruth Hussey is very good, so is Mary Beth Hughes, Margaret Roach and James Burke. In fact, the cast is all excellent, including three well trained lions. The story is fast moving and holds the interest. I played this early which helped. Running time, 73 minutes. Played November 3-5.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

ICE FOLLIES OF 1939: Joan Crawford, James Stewart—A great production but seems to lack something. Just fair business. Played November 3-4.—F. W. Linehan, Rialto Theatre, New Britain, Conn. Working class patronage.

OUT WEST WITH THE HARDYS: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden, Virginia Weidler—Right up with the best Hardy picture you ever saw. Gave us a nice business increase and is a swell Metro offering. Running time, 86 minutes. Played November 1-3.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

THUNDER AFLOAT: Wallace Beery, Chester Morris—Just what the doctor ordered if it had been played on a Friday and Saturday run. It didn't get the business that this picture of action, plus a good story, and timely, should have. But that does not say that it was not satisfactory. It is a picture that would pack them out Friday and Saturday and we ran it Sunday and Monday as our commitment called for. It still got business but we missed the clientele that supports pictures like "The Women." However, I reckon it washes in the long run.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

Republic

S. O. S.—TIDAL WAVE: Ralph Byrd, Kay Sutton —Good action picture for Friday-Saturday trade. Running time, 60 minutes. Played November 7.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

FISHERMAN'S WHARF: Bobby Breen, Leo Carrillo—Gets by. Could be much better. Customers seemed to like it fairly well.—O. S. Nordine, Karlstad Theatre, Karlstad, Minn. Country patronage.

FIVE CAME BACK: Chester Morris, Lucille Ball, Wendy Barrie, Joseph Calleia—This was a surprise picture as it drew far beyond our expectations. Was well liked. Entire cast good, with Joseph Calleia stealing the acting honors. Played November 8-9.—Gordon P. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

FLYING DEUCES: Laurel and Hardy—Swell going, gents. Not a slow or dull moment. Well directed and crammed with gags and action. Let's have more from them. Running time, 65 minutes.—E. C. Arehart, Strand Theatre, Milford, Iowa. General patronage.

IN NAME ONLY: Cary Grant, Carole Lombard, Kay Francis, Helen Vinson—A very good domestic triangle picture which drew to fair business. Received many compliments on the picture. The three stars and Helen Vinson all good. Played November 5-7.—Gordon P. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

NURSE EDITH CAVELL: Anna Neagle, Edna May Oliver, May Robson, Zasu Pitts, George Sanders—With a hookup with local church guild, we went to town. Reaction good and everybody satisfied, including myself. Running time, 95 minutes.—E. C. Arehart, Strand Theatre, Milford, Iowa. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

CHARLIE CHAN AT TREASURE ISLAND: Sidney Toler, Cesar Romero—Just a picture—no artist can paint. You see one, you see the whole of them. Running time, 75 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

CHICKEN WAGON FAMILY: Jane Withers, Leo Carrillo—Customers said not up to other Withers pictures. Carrillo perfect.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

ELSA MAXWELL HOTEL FOR WOMEN: Linda Darnell, Ann Sothern, Elsa Maxwell—"It's a Riot! A girl in every room and a man on every mind!" I plastered the above quotation on calendars and ads and grossed by far the most of any midweek picture this fall. There was enough true-to-life story to satisfy the patrons, and Linda Darnell had the customers asking about her. Running time, 82 minutes. Played Octover 25-26.—Everett Clapp, American Theatre, Sidell, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

HOLLYWOOD CAVALCADE: Alice Faye, Don Ameche, Buster Keaton, Stuart Erwin—Good picture which failed to draw. Fair business first night, very little business second night. Running time, 90 minutes. Played November 8-9.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

PACK UP YOUR TROUBLES: Jane Withers, Ritz Brothers—Good B product that pleases all the way. Stand alone in the sticks. Running time, 75 minutes. —W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

SUEZ: Tyrone Power, Loretta Young, Annabella—In addition to being a very entertaining production, "Suez" can also be highly regarded for its educational value, since it is a carefully, well written and authentic account of the hardships encountered by Ferdinand de Lesseps in his efforts to make his dream a reality. The acting of all was superb, but Annabella again stood out according to the judgment of our audience, just as she did when we screened "Wings of the Morning" last year. While the picture does not, from the reaction of our audience, fall into the "one of the greatest of all time" productions class, it is, nevertheless, well worth seeing and no exhibitor will let his patrons down by showing it. The scenes of the construction of the canal and the subsequent storm are bound to be very much appreciated by any audience. Running time, 100 minutes. Played November 4.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

SUSANNAH OF THE MOUNTIES: Shirley Temple, Randolph Scott—A good feature. Fair business. I think Fox made a mistake when they cast Shirley in this type of story. Indians and wild stuff is bad for small fans of Shirley. Many parents told me they had trouble with their children after the show. Played October 8-9.—F. W. Linehan, Rialto Theatre, New Britain, Conn. Working class patronage.

WIFE, HUSBAND AND FRIEND: Loretta Young, Warner Baxter, Binnie Barnes—Picked this one up in preference to some late ones, and was I ever glad. It's really good entertainment and pleased everyone. That Baxter boy suits the ladies here. Running time, 80 minutes. Played October 18-19.—Everett Clapp, American Theatre, Sidell, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

United Artists

DRUMS: Sabu—Very good production. Played to good business. Played September 24-25.—F. W. Linehan, Rialto Theatre, New Britain, Conn. Working class patronage.

WOMEN, THE: Norma Shearer, Rosalind Russell, Joan Crawford—Pull up your chair in the weekly meeting of the sewing circle and get the dirt. The ladies washed the dirty linen for the enjoyment of all, though we had a preponderance of ladies on the run. That does not mean that the men laid off, they did not. The dialogue was paced a little fast, and from the reception they received I just wonder if they are not cracking down a little too much on the double entendres.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

Monogram

MR. WONG IN CHINATOWN: Boris Karloff, Marjorie Reynolds—"Wong" series has made a little money for us. Fair interest in series made this one digestible. Is a fair mystery. Running time, 70 minutes. Played November 4-7.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

Paramount

BACK DOOR TO HEAVEN: Patricia Ellis, Wallace Ford—Very poor. It's dead from the first reel to the last. Not even good for the lower half of a double bill. Running time, 85 minutes. Played October 13-14.—Warren J. Gavin, Rio Theatre, Stevensville, Mont. Small town patronage.

INVITATION TO HAPPINESS: Irene Dunne, Fred MacMurray, Billy Cook—Nice picture but Irene Dunne means nothing at the box office any more. She is too old for this type of picture. The kid stole the show. Running time, 95 minutes. Played October 15-17.—Warren J. Gavin, Rio Theatre, Stevensville, Mont. Small town patronage.

MILLION DOLLAR LEGS: Betty Grable, John Hartley—The picture matches the title, that is all. It is one that you would be better off eliminating. And while we are on eliminations this is one outfit, and Fox is another, that did not do the generous thing and give the same cancellation of 20 per cent as did Vitagraph and Loew's. I was tooth and toenail against the Neely Bill and made my views known where it would do the most good, Washington. But if it comes up again I just don't know whether I would go to bat against it or not. I want no part of the Government in this business. But when some of the producers just won't go along when they have a chance without being blackjacked into it, then let them take it. Though it would be unfair to penalize the producers that extended the eliminations.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

MOVE OVER FOR FOUR MORE CONTRIBUTORS

Four new contributors this week to "What the Picture Did for Me" are the following, from as many states and provinces:

LLOYD M. MILLS, Elgin Theatre, Ottawa, Ontario

O. S. NORDINE, Karlstad Theatre, Karlstad, Minn.

WARREN J. GAVIN, Rio Theatre, Stevensville, Mont.

FRANK W. LINEHAN, Rialto Theatre, New Britain, Conn.

Showmen Gavin and Linehan are not strangers to the department but neither has reported within the last 10 months.

MYSTERIOUS RIDER, THE: Douglass Dumbrille, Sidney Toler, Russell Hayden, Weldon Heyburn, Charlotte Fields—Played this with "What A Life" and did away above normal. Played November 3-4.—Warren J. Gavin, Rio Theatre, Stevensville, Mont. Small town patronage.

WHAT A LIFE: Jackie Cooper, Betty Field—Played this with Zane Grey's "Mysterious Rider" and did away above normal. "What A Life" is sure true of high school life and it has no football, track or basketball. Play this one by all means. Running time, 75 minutes. Played November 3-4.—Warren J. Gavin, Rio Theatre, Stevensville, Mont. Small town patronage.

WHAT A LIFE: Jackie Cooper, Betty Field—Gave us the best weekend business of the past five months. Definitely establishes the Aldrich Family of radio fame as a promising movie money maker. Comments excellent and audience reaction marvelous. Running time, 75 minutes. Played November 4-7.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

Republic

HIGGINS FAMILY, THE: James, Lucille, Russell Gleason—Played with "New Frontier." The best Friday-Saturday double program that we have had for some time. "The Higgins Family" is very good for the small town. Running time, 64 minutes. Played October 20-21.—Warren J. Gavin, Rio Theatre, Stevensville, Mont. Small town patronage.

MAN OF CONQUEST: Richard Dix, Gail Patrick—Good picture. Best on a double bill. Played to big business here. Played September 29-30.—F. W. Linehan, Rialto Theatre, New Britain, Conn. Working class patronage.

NEW FRONTIER: Three Mesquiteers (John Wayne, Ray Corrigan, Raymond Hatton)—Played with "The Higgins Family." The best Friday-Saturday double program that we have had for some time. But the Three Mesquiteers are not as good as before. Raymond Hatton can never take the place of Max Terhune. Republic, give us back the original Three Mesquiteers. Running time, 57 minutes. Played October 20-21.—Warren J. Gavin, Rio Theatre, Stevensville, Mont. Small town patronage.

PRAIRIE MOON: Gene Autry, Shirley Deane—Good western. Notice to Warner Brothers: If you ever need an actor to play Humphrey Bogart as a young man, I suggest that you try the boy that rose to describe the mayor in the school room in "Prairie Moon." He even talked like Bogart.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

SHE MARRIED A COP: Phil Regan, Jean Parker—This picture was above average from Republic and pleased all. Business was fair. Running time, 65 minutes.—Played November 7.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

United Artists

KING OF THE TURF: Adolphe Menjou—Only a program picture, but much better than a lot of specials. Everyone liked it very much.—O. S. Nordine, Karlstad Theatre, Karlstad, Minn. Country patronage.

MAN IN THE IRON MASK, THE: Louis Hayward, Joan Bennett, Warren William, Joseph Schildkraut, Alan Hale—Very good with plenty of action but all

SUGGESTS EXHIBITORS ANALYZE THEMSELVES

"After reading what all have been saying about films for the past number of years, and reading on a percentage of 85 per cent complaints, I have only to say that maybe the film didn't gross because they themselves were too lazy to give the film a little stimulant," writes Lloyd M. Mills, manager of the Elgin theatre in Ottawa, Ont. Mr. Mills is a new contributor to "What the Picture Did for Me".

"If a few more exhibitors would stop analyzing the films all the time, and do more analyzing of themselves and their forms of suggesting to the public to see their films, they might do better. A theatre manager who is always criticizing the films he plays cannot hope for his patrons, if such there be, to boost them. Hollywood has given us a few miserable films, but even the miserable film is a lot better than the plays put on in the church basements and for which they have a jammed 'basement'. When we get a film, we try to analyze it for selling angles, and to whom it is mostly acceptable, and we let them criticize it, if they like, after they have paid their admission to do so."

small-town theatres know what to expect at the box office on costume pictures. Double featured this with "The Son of Frankenstein" and got by very well. Running time, 112 minutes. Played November 1-2.—Warren J. Gavin, Rio Theatre, Stevensville, Mont. Small town patronage.

PRISON WITHOUT BARS: Corinne Luchaire, Edna Best—A well made production with little appeal for American patrons. Will draw a certain type but it is not entertainment in my judgment. Play it if you have to. Played to fair business. Played October 6-7.—F. W. Linehan, Rialto Theatre, New Britain, Conn. Middle class patronage.

STAGECOACH: Claire Trevor, Andy Devine—Good western picture to better than average business. Well made, well acted, and hits the spot with the majority. If we had more pictures like this out here in the sticks, we wouldn't mind at all.—O. S. Nordine, Karlstad Theatre, Karlstad, Minn. Country patronage.

TOPPER TAKES A TRIP: Constance Bennett, Roland Young—Very good. Played to fair business. Played November 5-6.—F. W. Linehan, Rialto Theatre, New Britain, Conn. Middle class patronage.

WUTHERING HEIGHTS: Merle Oberon, Laurence Olivier—Excellent, wonderful-like to see Laurence Olivier and Francis Lederer together as brothers in a picture. Lederer wasn't in this but Olivier was, and he was perfection itself.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

Universal

OLD DARK HOUSE, THE (Reissue): Boris Karloff, Melvyn Douglas, Charles Laughton, Gloria Stuart —This reissue did right well for itself. If you need a creepy thriller, here's your meat. Running time, 75 minutes.—E. C. Arehart, Strand Theatre, Milford, Ioka. General patronage.

PIRATES OF THE SKIES: Kent Taylor, Rochelle Hudson—Waste of time and effort. No entertainment to these shows (and "Society Smugglers" and "Road to Reno" at all.—O. S. Nordine, Karlstad Theatre, Karlstad, Minn. Country patronage.

SOCIETY SMUGGLERS: Preston Foster, Irene Hervey—See "Pirates of the Skies."—O. S. Nordine, Karlstad Theatre, Karlstad, Minn. Country patronage.

ROAD TO RENO: Hope Hampton, Randolph Scott —See "Pirates of the Skies."—O. S. Nordine, Karlstad Theatre, Karlstad, Minn. Country patronage.

SON OF FRANKENSTEIN, THE: Basil Rathbone, Boris Karloff, Bela Lugosi, Lionel Atwill, Josephine Hutchinson—Double featured with "The Man in the Iron Mask" and got by very well. Played November 1-2.—Warren J. Gavin, Rio Theatre, Stevensville, Mont. Small town patronage.

SPIRIT OF CULVER: Jackie Cooper, Freddie Bartholomew—Just so-so. Like most of the Universal pictures this year, it does not seem to have the kick. Gets by but tiresome.—O. S. Nordine, Karlstad Theatre, Karlstad, Minn. Country patronage.

THREE SMART GIRLS GROW UP: Deanna Durbin, Nan Grey—Good picture but business poor. Not quite as good as former Durbin pictures but good enough. The one kind of picture we don't mind playing even when we lose money on it.—O. S. Nordine, Karlstad Theatre, Karlstad, Minn. Country patronage.

THREE SMART GIRLS GROW UP: Deanna Durbin, Nan Grey, Helen Parrish, Charles Winniger, Robert Cummings, William Lundigan—Miss Durbin is going highbrow. The songs she use to sing are no more. She is headed for high opera and that means no good for a small town. This was a great show. If you haven't shown this one, do so. Running time, 87 minutes. Played October 22-24.—Warren J. Gavin, Rio Theatre, Stevensville, Mont. Small town patronage.

TROPIC FURY: Richard Arlen, Andy Devine, Beverly Roberts—Average programmer. Nothing to get excited about. Running time, 63 minutes. Played November 1-3.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

YOU CAN'T CHEAT AN HONEST MAN: W. C. Fields, Edgar Bergen—"Charlie McCarthy"—We like a lot of foolishness but not this kind and no one else did either. Top price but the lowest in entertainment. —O. S. Nordine, Karlstad Theatre, Karlstad, Minn. Country patronage.

YOU CAN'T CHEAT AN HONEST MAN: "Charlie McCarthy," Edgar Bergen, W. C. Fields—Good for kids, if they would leave out W. C. Fields. He would spoil any show. Otherwise a fair feature. Running time, 79 minutes. Played October 8-10.—Warren J. Gavin, Rio Theatre, Stevensville, Mont. Small town patronage.

Warner Brothers

BROTHER RAT: Wayne Morris, Priscilla Lane—Entertaining show that will do OK any place.—O. S. Nordine, Karlstad Theatre, Karlstad, Minn. Country patronage.

DAWN PATROL: Errol Flynn, David Niven—Good show that will go over well with most any kind of audience.—O. S. Nordine, Karlstad Theatre, Karlstad, Minn. Country patronage.

ESPIONAGE AGENT: Joel McCrea, Brenda Marshall—Good double bill (with "Nancy Drew and the Hidden Staircase") that pleases generally. Both entertaining.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

NANCY DREW AND THE HIDDEN STAIRCASE: Bonita Granville, John Litel—See "Espionage Agent." —W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

FOUR DAUGHTERS: Lane Sisters, Gale Page—Played this late but very wonderful entertainment. Spoiled somewhat by a poor print. Could recommend this picture. Played September 28.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

HEART OF THE NORTH: Dick Foran, Gloria Dickson—Played very late but, oh boy, how it dragged them in. It broke my house records for the season. This kind of story they just eat up. Better give us some more of these, Warners, and we can all keep in business. Thanks. Played November 2.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

PRIDE OF THE BLUE GRASS: Edith Fellows, James McCallion, Gantry, the Blind Horse—Fair picture; fair business. Running time, 65 minutes. Played November 10-11.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Miscellaneous

FLORIAN (Polish): S. Engelowna, J. Stenpoinski—Played to outstanding business. A timely and very good Polish production. One of the best ever shown at this theatre. Will play a return engagement here. Date played November 1-2.—F. W. Linehan, Rialto Theatre, New Britain, Conn. Polish patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

SAVED BY THE BELL: 3 Stooges—Best two-reel short I play. All Stooge comedies 'bring down the house."—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS: No. 2—Excellent. Shots of the wild animals used in films and is tops. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

STATIC IN TH EAIR: Walter Catlett—Not so hot. Just average but still drew the laughs at the slapstick sequences. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

AUTO ANTICS: Our Gang—Average Our Gang comedy.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

DAY ON TREASURE ISLAND, A: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—Good color reel of the San Francisco Fair.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

DOUBLE DIVING: Pete Smith Specialties—An excellent exhibition of grace and daring, interspersed with comedy. One of the best sporting shorts we have shown for some time. The fadeout is especially funny. See it by showing it to your audience, for all are bound to like it. Running time, eight minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

DRUNK DRIVING: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—This brought many, many favorable comments, and one local official thought every theatre in the U. S. should play it.—E. C. Arehart, Strand Theatre, Milford, Iowa. General patronage.

FOOTBALL ROMEO: Our Gang—Old but good. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

FROM THE ENDS OF THE EARTH: Romance of Celluloid—A kind of advance trailer for coming MGM attractions that is well worth running. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

GLIMPSES OF AUSTRALIA: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—Another grand travel talk by James FitzPatrick. Color, description all good, as they always are. I would like to run one of these talks with every show. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

HEROES AT LEISURE: Pete Smith Specialties—A short which shows the daring (while on vacation) of those young men who so capably rescue West Coast bathers when they run into difficulty. They are seen capably maneuvering surf boards through treacherous waters, loosening abalones (sea mollusks) from undersea rocks, fighting a shark and an octopus. It is a thriller and should prove interesting to any audience. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

HOUR FOR LUNCH, AN: Bob Benchley—These Benchleys are not popular here. My people do not appreciate them.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala.

RHUMBA RHYTHM: MGM Miniatures—Good one-reel comedy with music.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Paramount

ARTIE SHAW'S CLASS IN SWING: Headliners—Novel band reel was well liked.—Gordon P. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

HELLO, HOW AM I: Popeye Cartoon—Popeye, I'm afraid your "papa" has been too busy making "Gullivers Travels" to pay any attention to you. Betty Boops please better than these half-reel Popeyes.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala.

SCARED CROWS, THE: Betty Boop Cartoon—Boops are better than they used to be. Popeyes are worse.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala.

RKO Radio

AUTOGRAPH HOUND: Walt Disney Cartoons—The entire staff thought this was the best Donald Duck and therefore the best short comedy we have ever played. Donald Duck ranks way on top.—Gordon P. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

DONALD'S COUSIN GUS: Walt Disney Cartoons—An amusing cartoon, if you like cartoons. Running time, eight minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

Vitaphone

BELIEVE IT OR ELSE: Merrie Melodies—I think this was the best of the very good Merrie Melody series. Kept our audience laughing all the way through.—Gordon P. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

BLUE BARRON AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—An entertaining orchestra short with several novelty numbers. Our audience thought the whistler was especially good and have asked to see him again. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

CLYDE McCOY AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—A dandy! A snappy musical short with several good numbers, some singing and plenty of dancing. And speaking of dancing, it must be said that the big boy (and believe you me he was big) could certainly "truck on down." For those who like good dance music, this short has it. The same can be said for those who like the latest in jitterbugging or comedy. Don't be afraid of this one; they'll like it. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

FAT CHANCE, A: Broadway Brevities—Good musical comedy short. Two very good dance revues.—Gordon P. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

FRESH FISH: Merrie Melodies—A colored cartoon that was not even fair. Running time, eight minutes. A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

PORKY'S HOTEL: Looney Tunes—Just another cartoon. Will get by and that is all. Running time, six minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

RUBINOFF AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—The best Melody Master in months. Do not waste it. Here is perfection in a musical short. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre. Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SONS OF LIBERTY: Historical Technicolor Featurettes—Tops in every way. Running time, 20 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Charles Leach is now head of Ross Federal Checking in New Haven. He was former manager in that city for Gaumont British.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

ON GIVING THANKS

This would be a good time to recall the Thanksgiving yarn of the teacher querying her juvenile charges on what they had to thank the good Lord for on the holiday. The youngsters rose in turn to enumerate the blessings showered upon them by a kindly providence. That is, all but one rascal of about eight, possessed of physical disadvantages including cross-eyes and knock-knees.

"Teacher," he wailed, "I ain't got nothin' to thank the good Lord for. He damn near ruined me."

Now that Thanksgiving Day is nigh (or has come and gone, depending upon which of the two official 1939 holidays the reader has elected to celebrate), this might also be a good time to assay any blessings, sprinkled, if not showered, upon members in these hectic days. A hasty review of Round Table records would indicate that, for the most part, the membership is in the black.

First, the job situation in general appears to be well under control. Most everyone within our horizon and previously "at liberty" is now attached to a payroll. The records reveal little firing of men well-established in their situations. Changes? Yes, and numerous, but mostly promotions to better jobs.

In general, the health of the membership is reassuring. The ill and injured are improving or recovered. Frequent announcements of marriages and births have been carried—thankfully, few deaths.

The personal lot of the individual manager on the job becomes variously adjusted. Personal communications to this desk indicate less dissatisfaction regarding money, hours, time off. The rising demand for intensive showmanship would have to do with that. Many men worth more are getting more. They are showing that worth in the handling of this year's good product.

In all, then, the reasons for thanks add up to a respectable total, even with due consideration for managerial annoyances that rate no listing on the credit side. Certainly, things could be better. But, if a man has to work for a living, show-business at least allows him to earn the rent, plus an opportunity to express his talents for future benefits. Few other businesses offer as much to the private in the ranks.

The extra attentions given newspaper advertising in these pages is expected to represent mostly what theatremen are doing on current releases. But it does not mean that good work in other situations is to be ignored, as our layouts have shown. Your Round Table continues to invite contributions of merit from the field, regardless of whence they come. The small-towner may be restricted in composition and typography. That restriction does not apply to selling copy conceived by the man in the field.

THE OLD-FASHIONED SWEAT

Recently, Manager Warren Butler put on a Laff Week at the Princess, Sioux City, Iowa. Plenty of hard licks were put in to sell the idea over a wide territory. The principal attraction was "Pack Up Your Troubles" and little was left undone by the Round Tabler in telling his public.

"The picture turned in a swell gross," Butler writes, "and I think due to the extra push we put behind it."

A Canadian member reports big boxoffice on Hallowe'en, notoriously a bad night for theatres in his community. An elaborate show was put on with local talent, contests were held, there was community singing, the house and front decorated with all the fixin's. Business was tremendous. Sez he:

"Last year on Hallowe'en we sat on our fannys and did nothing. The score at the end of the day was below par. It just goes to show ya."

It sure does. Since the beginning of time, nothing has yet been revealed to permanently replace old-fashioned sweat in doing a job. The "extra push" does it—standing up.

From H. S. ("Doc") Twedt at the Lido, Manly, Iowa, just now comes a campaign on "Little Accident", featuring imprinted Baby Sandy diapers, distributed around town. And it was Gert Merriam who immediately remarked on the "tie-up" possibilities of the stunt.

A STORY THAT CENSORSHIP COULD NOT BLOT OUT!

Censorship difficulties in the way of exhibition of "Beast of Berlin" in Philadelphia and publicized widely by the newspapers were built up for the showing at the Colonial in Allentown by Nick Todorov, assistant to Charlie Bierbauer, with a 40 by 60. Newspaper stories were illustrated with cartoon cut.

Residents of Denver might have been a trifle startled recently when two German soldiers with nurse walked through the streets as part of John Denman's "Edith Cavell" exploitation for that date at the Brodaway Theatre. Back banners on each soldier read: "This woman must die". In front of theatre, pup tent was planted containing various warfare equipment and numerous scene stills.

AMSTERDAM, N.Y.

Fife and drum corps of the local Mohawk Carpet Mills paraded through the streets of Amsterdam, N. Y., as part of Frank O'Kelly's exploitation for the world premiere of "Drums Along the Mohawk" at Schine's Rialto. Parade included bannered cars conveying stars appearing in the picture who were on hand for the opening, members of various Indian tribes, Boy Scouts, etc.

Theatre

The unusual street sight of "angels washing their dirty faces" caused folks in Chicago to pause and read Marlowe Conner's message on that date at the Avalon. Circulating about town, boys set up their bannered boxes and washbasins and proceeded to scrub as curious spectators watched the ablutions.

Illustrated below is part of unique lobby display arranged by Manager Gene Works at the RKO Family Theatre in Cincinnati for "The Man They Couldn't Hang". The scaffold, hangman's noose with hooded victim standing nearby, and first-aid dressing table with all the paraphernalia were part of the unique promotion. Gag copy was printed on cards planted next to various potions.

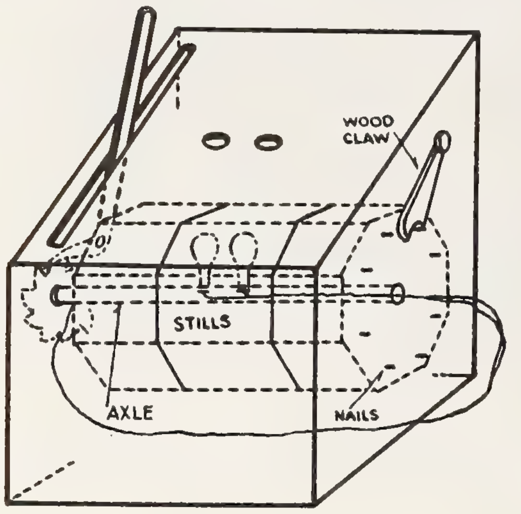
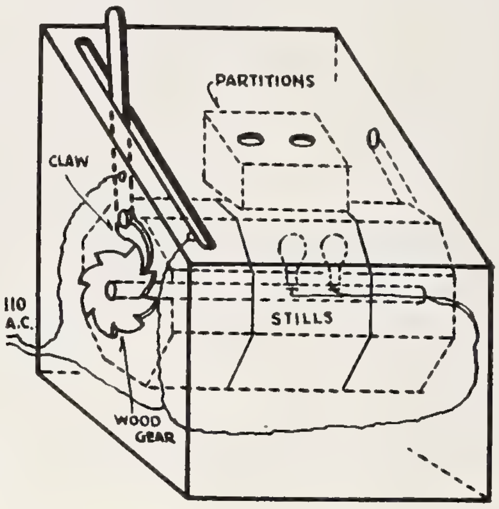
Nine-foot blowup of the Capitol dome in Washington was used inside Loew's United Artists Theatre in Columbus ahead and then on marquee during run of Russ Bovim's "Mr. Smith" date. Spotted with bright lights at night, display proved very effective.

ANIMATED STILL BOX



Working plan of "teaser" box used recently by Manager R. H. Thomason, Princess, Bowling Green, Ky. By pulling down lever at left, above, eight-sided drum containing eight masked stills is rotated on stationary axle, each pull bringing one still to view. When lever reaches end of stroke, contact is made with metal connection, lighting lamp and illuminating stills, wires to lamps on axle carried through right end of axle. No light goes on until lever is down entirely to the end of slot.



Wood claw drops freely on nails spaced to prevent drum from reversing when lever is brought back. Main lever has claw which drops easily into teeth of wooden gear attached to drum head and having as many teeth as there are sides to drum. Stills are framed by partitions attached to top of box and extending one inch from stills. Copy on box reads: "Pull this lever all the way down, then look through here to see, etc., etc." The "here", of course, refers to holes for eyes below copy.

Harwell Reports Recent Activities

Pedestrians of Canton, Ohio, were greeted one morning recently by the sight of Santa Claus who covered the downtown area with back copy reading "I slipped away from the North Pole just to see," etc. Ballyman also distributed cards plugging the opening of "Underpup" and Gloria Jean.

For "All Quiet on the Western Front," Harwell promoted machine guns, helmets and high explosive shells from the American Legion which were used for inside lobby display week ahead. During run, machine guns were moved to front and surrounded with piles of sand bags. On opening night, red flares were burned and top of boxoffice was covered with large soldier head cutout. Usher in soldier uniform and helmet walked his post in front of theatre carrying bayonet and gun; pennant-shaped card on bayonet announced title, etc.

Moule Promotes Double Truck

Getting out a special supplement of the Expositor, in Brantford, Ontario, Round Tabler E. Moule at the Capitol Theatre promoted a double truck spread on "The Women" with all cooperating merchants advertising, devoting a special window display to the date with stills, and appropriate tiein copy, and cuts of the stars. Further publicity was attained through tieup with beauty salon which featured new cosmetics all tied to the stars of the picture.

Seven-Page Spread Landed By Deering on "The Women"

Highly effective was the seven-page section planted by Francis Deering at Loew's, in Houston, for "The Women." Eight column page one banner line at bottom called attention to this special section of cooperative advertising and news features concerning the picture's opening.

Scattered through the pages, in addition to the cooperating merchants' ads, were readers on new fashion notes, all of which were tied into the picture with art work on each of the stars. Also included in the spread was the theatre's ad heralding the opening.

Wright Stages Costume Party

Entirely run by kids was Erle Wright's costume contest on stage of the Strand in Syracuse, with the awarding of prizes to children for those appearing in the best and funniest costumes. Kids themselves decided the winners by audience applause. Various other contests were engaged in, among which was a balloon-blowing stunt for girls and a cracker-eating contest for the boys. Large truck, appropriately bannered and loaded with kids supplied with bass drum, tin horns and other noise makers, visited the schools and other thickly populated districts ahead of the show. Cards were planted on bulletin boards of all grade schools, and promoted candy, apples, sweet cider, etc., was available for all at the show.

McCoy Ties Babes to Sandy Contest for "Father" Date

Numerous resemblance contests have been published on these pages, but P. E. McCoy at the L. & J. Georgia Theatre in Athens, Ga., is the first to report on one for babies only. Held in connection with his date on "Unexpected Father" and tied to local newspaper, jeweler and photographer, theatreman offered prizes to the children most closely resembling Baby Sandy.

Cooperating newspaper ran art and stories on the contest ten days in advance of opening. Each day an art cut showed Sandy in different poses as he appeared in the picture. A well constructed three-column by 9-inch contest blank was also carried each day gratis. Local photographer had 5,000 contest blanks printed and distributed through the city and rural sections, offering all entries a special rate on photos. Each blank carried a plug and playdates.

The jeweler cooperated by giving the winning baby an engraved silver loving cup. Cup was on display in the window with tie-in card several days ahead and the presentation was made on the theatre stage opening day of picture. A photo was made of the ceremonies and carried by the paper, together with human interest stories, on the second day of the engagement.

Thomason Reports On Kid Activities

For his Dick Tracy serial, R. M. Thomason at the Princess, in Bowling Green, Ky. issued punch cards to the kids with a little different twist. Instead of admitting children gratis who had attended all episodes, Tommy got extra admissions by having them pay for the last show too, but permitting them to bring a guest.

Another card gag was used for Tex Ritter, since two of his pictures were booked on following Saturdays, Tommy bought a quantity of fan photos and to those attending both shows the pictures were awarded. Third card slant was used for "My Lucky Star," pasteboards being distributed to the college students. To those holding cards with lucky numbers corresponding with those listed on lobby easels, guest tickets were awarded.

LANDS STREET SIGNS ON "DEAD END" KIDS

Permission obtained from the civic authorities in the Hyde Park district of Chicago where the Frolic Theatre is situated, enabled Manager Ben Cohn to arrange usage of street sings on his date for "Angels Wash Their Faces" starring the "Dead End" kids.

On markers in the area identifying dead end streets, Ben planted theatre signs, spotting "Dead End" kids copy immediately under.

Kalberer Effects 3-Way Hookup On Fashion Revue

Backing of a local sorority and leading women's stores in the production of a successful stage showing of new styles at the Indiana, in Washington, Ind., is reported by Manager "Kal" Kalberer, the co-sponsors underwriting most of the expense to gratifying returns for all concerned. The revue was put on nightly for two days, the sorority sharing in the receipts to the extent of 25 per cent of all tickets sold by the members outside of the theatre.

In exchange, the organization aided in securing local girls to act as models, paid for the orchestra, furnished stage decorations, flowers and furniture, helped in the promotion of lumber for a runway from the stage into the auditorium. Sorority also paid for local singer and commentator to give running descriptions of fashions as models displayed them, over promoted p. a. system. Stores supplied wearing apparel, newspaper advertising and half cost of outside posting. In addition, merchants donated fur coat as a giveaway, chances on which were sold by the sorority to aid pet charity fund. Publicity was widespread and effective.

For stage hangings, Kalberer used backdrop of black and silver with rhinestones, black velour legs and borders. New stage drapes were hung for scene changes, which comprised old-fashioned and pajama girls, sportswear, afternoon dress, fur coat, formal, and wedding scene finale for an elaborate and stylish presentation. "Kal" sends along details of all stage routing and general plan of procedure.

Bray Holds "Look Around Night"

Another bang-up style show held at the Lyric, Brownsville, Texas, is credited to Manager Lew Bray, the event being featured as part of the community semi-annual "Look Around Night," a citywide open-house event put on by the leading merchants and organization. The celebration, conceived by Gray and J. S. McBeath, local publisher, also includes street parades, concerts, showings of new model cars.

The theatre showing was held at nine o'clock, with 12 local girls displaying slacks, college styles, evening wear and coats, supplied by leading department store. Stage and floral decorations, as well as all other furnishings including music, were promoted without cost. The featured promotion was a gratis full-page ad on the show and a host of page one stories.

Campbell Turns Poet

As his advance on "It's a Wonderful World," Leslie Campbell at the Empress Theatre in Kelowna, B. C., promoted local packing house to supply him with 1,000 apples. Attractive girl planted in lobby packed the apples in tissue paper imprinted with theatre and picture copy and distributed them to patrons as they left the theatre. Included on the wrapping was a poem written by the theatreman and tied to the picture.

Loewmen Find Co-op Advertising Important Avenue of Publicity

Anent a recent editorial item here deploring the lack of co-op ads generally, is a communication from Loew's Ernest Emerling, wherein is brought forth, and solidly, the reasons-why for the circuit's success in this direction. Sez Ernie:

"To our way of thinking, this is one of the most important avenues of publicity which brings results to cooperating merchants as well as the boxoffice. On every picture, a number of suggested tieins are made through our portfolio service to the theatres. We never try to force tieups through far-fetched or blue-sky ideas, and concentrate on pictures that lend themselves more readily to tieup angles. If the title or subject matter of a feature does not fit this type of exploitation, another approach is tried.

"Regulations of some papers have required that merchant ads containing picture copy, including ads not on the amusement page, be subject to the higher movie rate. In this case, we have furnished our managers with tear sheets from leading papers where this rule did not prevail. Thus, conservative newspaper advertising heads have been convinced it is to their interest to accept such copy at the commercial rate.

"When our managers make co-op tieins, we want the merchant to benefit. After all, we must come back to him, time and again. On a recent visit around the circuit, I visited a number of department store advertising managers. In every case, they felt that picture and theatre tieups were advantageous, when and if the tiein copy and illustration promised to sell their merchandise."

"Roaring Twenties" Tied to Centennial by Holland

Building his campaign on "The Roaring Twenties" around the Centennial held in Syracuse in 1925, Sid Holland at the Eckel Theatre through the local Historical Society secured 15 minutes of film depicting the events of the Centennial, including parades, address by the Mayor, a kindergarten festival and other happenings of local interest. Next step was to organize a "Roaring Twenties" night with the present Mayor Marvin and Mayor Walrather in office during the Centennial, to act as hosts to receive the present day citizens of Syracuse in lobby. Local restaurant was promoted for coffee, cookies, etc., for the occasion.

Prior to the reception arrangements were made for an old-timer to sit through the Centennial film and give the names of those participating who were still alive. This list was then circularized. Special 40 by 60 consisting of Winchell and Hellinger comments on the picture was planted in lobby as was a display enumerating highlights of the 1925 events. Top feature was a cutout of the Centennial Mayor greeting a "dummy" of the first Mayor of Syracuse which was secured from the archives of the Historical Society and promoted for lobby.

Old Maid Club Formed By Read to Sell Date

An unusually effective stunt was worked by Tommy Read at the Fox, in Atlanta, in a tieup with the Constitution as an advance for "The Old Maid." An organization called the "National Association of Happy Old Maids" was formed, which all who considered themselves old maids were invited to join. Read reports that over 400 women sent in applications and the stunt was climaxed when the first 100 members applying, attended a dinner at a leading hotel, following which they saw the picture at the theatre.

One of the members was dubbed "Old Maid Glamour Girl" and selected to cut the huge wedding cake which was on display in the lobby. Cake contained numerous trinkets and prizes which went to the members when the cake was completely cut. As temporary chairman of the dinner, the Number One glamor girl of the city made a speech and pledged the co-operation of the Atlanta Debutante Club.

Dinner and opening was covered by the Atlanta Constitution and was good for considerable free space in the paper, including a membership application, stories on the dinner and the Old Maids.

Schools Cooperate With Brien on "Chips"

Contacting the principals of all local schools, Lige Brien at the Prince, in Ambridge, Pa. for "Goodbye Mr. Chips" secured permission for teachers to make announcements to all their classes in addition to posting notices on all bulletin boards. Contest angle was covered with passes going to those submitting best letters on "Odd Ways to Fall in Love."

Traveling automobile with large signs on either side covering a radius of 20 miles was used ahead and during run of picture, secured from the New York publishers were book jackets of the picture which were distributed with theatre imprint and members of the local football team were invited to opening night show.

I Sat Through 70 Minutes of Hell!

The other night in a darkened theatre . . . without benefit of audience . . I saw unfurled before me on the screen a picture that had me clutching at the edge of my seat . . . had me in a cold sweat . . . and this despite the fact that looking at pictures has been my business for the past 14 years

But never before had I ever seen a picture quite like this one. There before me on the screen I saw war in all its horror I saw scenes which proved that what we have read in the papers is not all propaganda. There they were . . . before my eyes . . . actual pictures made by cameramen who have covered the war in China, Spain, Ethiopia, Russia, Germany and elsewhere for the past few years. Pictures which no screen has dared to show until now. Pictures which no newspaper in this country has dared to print. Pictures which certain foreign nations have tried to keep you from seeing. Some of the scenes were horrible and startling to behold . . but war is horrible.

For 70 minutes I sat through hell. At the end I could not rise from my seat for many minutes I was still under the influence of blood and crushed flesh and broken bones. I was still under the influence of modern war although seated in a theater thousands of miles away from the war zone.

The scenes I had witnessed were from the motion picture "THE FIGHT FOR PEACE," Hendrik Willem Van Loon's uncensored actual pictures of modern war as waged by dictators. "THE FIGHT FOR PEACE" will be shown at the CAPITOL THEATRE for one week starting SUNDAY.

Today with all the trouble in the world . . . with the talk that perhaps this country cannot keep out of war . . . it is the duty of every peace-loving citizen of this city to see "THE FIGHT FOR PEACE." But, come prepared to witness scenes that will shock Atlanta. Come prepared to sit, as I did, through 70 minutes of a hell on earth . . . which is war. Small children should not see this picture and if you cannot face the realities of life as they exist today in certain countries, brought to you through the medium of actual pictures which show death and destruction, then we advise you not to come.

COPY TRENDS FROM HERE AND THERE

(1) Stressing romantic interest without sacrificing picture's background, did this 125 lines on 2, representing advance campaign for "Elizabeth and Essex" at Loew's Penn, Pittsburgh, created by Charlie Kurtzman, Joe Feldman and Jim Totman. . . . (2) One of a series of teasers by Manager Paul Trusky for the opening of P. A. Maguzzi's new Andrea, Catawissa, Pa. Size: 85 lines on 2. . . . (3) In keeping with the well-bred advertising for "Elizabeth and Essex" throughout his campaign, generous white with Benday background was stressed by Frank LaFalce for this holdover 80 lines on 2 at Warners' Earle, Washington. . . . (4) But seven miles from Boston, the Interstate theatres in Revere, Mass., stress house appeal to hold local patronage. Represented here is one of the 155 lines on 2, in that direction, reported by Harold Leand of the Revere, part of a series in which quotes and photos of locals were used atop the regular ads. . . . (5) Campaign on "Remember" at Loew's Atlanta was concentrated upon MGM's Greer Garson. Attention was so directed by Manager Eddie Pentecost, since other leads were familiars. Size: 125 lines on 4. . . . (6) To sell story as well as stars, without too much copy, was the purpose of this combination 160 lines on 3 by Vic Myer for "Amazing Mr. Williams" at the Orpheum, New Orleans. With this in mind, scene panel and star closeup were tied to gag lines via dotted line.

Point O' Pines Says.

"I'm a father and a family man. Therefore, I'm pretty fussy about the kind of movies that my two children see. A judicious selection always awaits them at the Revere and Boulevard Theatres. In this respect, the two local theatres co-operate wonderfully with the parents."

FURTHER PROMOTIONS FOR CHRISTMAS PLANS

Ole Santa Claus, in Person, Bulks Large in Campaigns to Build December Grosses

SET down in last week's issue was a revue of many promotions made in previous years by members to stimulate the boxoffice in the December preholiday period. Here are listed other slants in the same directions having to do with exploitations that were labeled successful in various parts by other Round Tablers in battling for their proper share of the December spending monies.

Selling his four-week period prior to the holiday as "Christmas Treat Month," C. L. Hollister built up the event with institutional trailers, compo-board trees and special foyer and lobby treatment. Christmas packages tied in colored ribbons were planted with coming attraction copy on each. Also held was a local dance school recital on stage, final week being marked by stage activities each night, promoted merchandise being auctioned to highest bidders. Proceeds on this went into a jackpot which was drawn for, winding up with car giveaway and diamond ring presentation on stage.

Stationed in the lobby by Clyde Smith week ahead to greet all children was Kris Kringle who invited kids to leave letters for Santa in large box; these later published in the theatre's newspaper. Also arranged in lobby was a checking service for patrons. For newspaper break, Smith planted photo of Santa in front of theatre delivering print of current picture. Contest angle was covered by the selection of six boys to imitate star of then playing picture. Winners acted as hosts opening day, extending greetings and handing out souvenir programs.

Planted in his lobby by Al Weiss, Jr., was a "Shop and Mail Early" booth with co-operating department store furnishing wrapping paper and such accessories as red and green tissue paper, seals, tape and shipping tags. Santa Claus cutouts were spotted around business sections copy reading: "Attend Shoppers Matinee, etc., etc.," with admission prices, attractions and institutional copy on the service included. Tieup was also made with Sears, Roebuck to decorate lobby with toys. In addition, information booths were erected for tourists spending the holidays in Miami, and cards with views of the theatre and city distributed gratis.

Doll Party Contest Held

For the classified page of local daily, Les Pollock staged a Kris Kringle jingle contest with promoted gifts and theatre tickets going to winners. Contest ran daily two weeks ahead, each ad containing cut of Santa, rules, etc. Another idea of Pollock's was a doll party with children under five invited to bring their dolls any time up to a few days before Christmas. Santa was on hand to judge the entries and award prizes for the largest, smallest, funniest, best rag doll and best home-made doll. All children were admitted to this special morning matinee for ten cents.

Activities for every night of the pre-Christmas week were staged by Ralph Booth. For Sunday, Monday and Tuesday there was a special presentation of local talent in addition to local orchestra. Wednesday was the day for a giveaway of a complete bedroom suite promoted from co-operating merchant which was on display at the theatre week ahead; Thursday night, presentation of promoted diamond ring and Friday and Saturday devoted to cash giveaways, advertised by the theatre as special Christmas gifts. The seven days were designated as Christmas Fair Week, Booth having tied up five merchants, each having one night as his night at the theatre to display material in the lobby. Each store donated an article valued at not less than $50, the theatre in turn furnishing special service consisting of parcel checking, sale of stamps and mailing of letters and packages.

Carol Singing Featured

Christmas broadcast was slant used by Tom Soriero from his stage with trained voices of the locally famed Westminster Group and theatre organ being heard over station in a presentation based on the story of the Nativity. Members of the audience also participated in the singing of carols that were picked up by overhead mikes and broadcast. Movable mikes were used to pick up outstanding voices.

Found successful by Kroger Babb was the setting aside of one day a week during which each adult patron was permitted to bring along another person without charge. Request days also proved effective with a reissue of an older top-notch picture combined with a new release on one bill. A request card system was used in advance and patrons notified of the booking by mail and on morning of date with a personal call from theatre cashier.

Most Popular Newsies Sought

Tied to cooperating paper was a most popular newsboys' contest sponsored by Lester Stallman. Voting blanks were carried by paper with votes cast only at the theatre. Paper played the contest up daily with human interest stories. On Christmas morning, lads distributed red and green cards house-to-house, copy reading: "P.S. I had to come back to tell you of the excellent picture at the," etc., etc; card was signed by Santa.

The usual turkey giveaway was held by Dick Moss who also staged a huge Christmas children's party with plans embracing a kiddie show, prizes, special features, games, etc. Idea was plugged from the stage, screen and lobby weeks in advance. In addition, Moss exerted pressure on individual picture exploitation wherever possible, tying in with the stores, thereby getting the benefit of the holiday crowds.

Exploitation Briefs Here & There

Headed "Thanksgiving ballot," Dave Goodenough at the Chief Theatre, Steamboat Springs, Colo., distributed sheets on which patrons were asked to vote on which day they wanted to celebrate Thanksgiving and to check the list of pictures they wanted to see, to help make November the greatest entertainment month—a solid month of Thanksgivings. Patrons were notified by phone and postcards of the playdates of the pictures they voted for. Goodenough says the returns provided him with information so that exploitation could be concentrated on the pictures that needed it most and also gave him an up-to-date mailing list.

Concentrating on libraries and schools for his date on "The Mikado" at Schine's State, in Hamilton, N. Y., Manager Paul Ketchum tied up all libraries in the town and within a radius of 15 miles for the distribution of a special bookmark headed "Mark this date in your book." These also were placed in the University library in addition to notices on the bulletin boards. Arrangements were made with the PTA on a benefit ticket sale, the proceeds of which were turned over to the high school band for new uniforms.

Promoted by Mel Blieden, Forsythe Theatre, East Chicago, Ind., from local bakery to plug Motion Pictures' Fiftieth Anniversary was the birthday cake on display in the lobby with candles. In addition to the store plugging the birthday, Blieden planted an easel out front announcing that the first 500 adults attending the special show would receive some of the confection.

Starting three months ahead on "The Old Maid," Manager Ed Miller and Manny Pearlstein at Warner's Hippodrome, in Cleveland, received art breaks and stories in the local dailies. Specially imprinted government cards were mailed out to a list three days ahead of opening, in addition to letter of personal endorsement over Miller's signature. Through tieup with leading restaurant, tents were spotted on all their tables ahead and during run, plugging the picture, cast, etc., and magazine distributor aided by using banners on their fleet of trucks.

For "The Rains Came," boys tied up the Public Library system whereby they covered all 35 branches with exhibits made up of stills, displays starting 10 days ahead. Stressing a "Come Rain or Shine" slogan, classified ad contest was run in cooperating paper for which guest tickets were awarded and through cooperation of WGAR, two announcements daily were landed for four days ahead.

Promoted by Ray Wheeler at the new Lex in Chicago was the distribution of 5,000 tinted calendar programs. Merchant's ad at bottom covers entire cost of printing and distribution. Wheeler says he tried the store out for a month and it proved so successful that the merchant plans to continue for some time.

On this and the following page appears an alphabetical index to the titles of all features listed in this week's Release Chart, with additional information for the exhibitor.

The number immediately following the title is the production number. Also given is information regarding the classification of the subject matter. A melodrama is denoted by the abbreviation Mel., Comedy by Com., Comedy-Melodrama by Com.-Mel., Musical by Mus., Musical Comedy by Mus.-Com., Western by West. If the production is made in color, the letter "C" appears in parenthesis after the classification. Thus: Com.-Mel. (C) denotes a Comedy-Melodrama in Color.

At the extreme right of the line containing the title of the production is the name of the distributor.
